American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award-winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Peter Pastreich, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our rich theatrical traditions and literatures, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. Founded by William Ball, a pioneer of the regional theater movement, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. We have since performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. Every year we reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs.

Rising from the wreckage of the earthquake and fire of 1906 and hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful, historic Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped the roof apart, San Franciscans rallied together to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild the theater. The Geary reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over in 1992 after the retirement of A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings.

Perloff’s 25-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and theater made by, for, and about the Bay Area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

A.C.T.’s 50-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program is at the forefront of America’s actor training programs. Meanwhile, our intensive Summer Training Congress attracts students from around the world, and the San Francisco Semester offers a unique study-abroad opportunity for undergraduates. Other programs include Studio A.C.T.—our expansive course of theater study for adults—and the Professional Development Training Program, which offers actor training for companies seeking to elevate their employees’ business performance skills. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as on stages and screens across the country.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 16,000 Bay Area students and educators each year. Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen oversees the world-famous Young Conservatory (for students ages 8 to 19) and our ACTsmart education programs, including the Student Matinee (SMAT) program that has brought hundreds of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the renovation of The Strand Theater and the opening of The Costume Shop Theater, A.C.T. plays a leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

“When in doubt,” wrote detective novelist Raymond Chandler, “have a man come through a door with a gun.” But playwright Harold Pinter didn’t need a gun. He could build tension with little more than a newspaper, a suitcase, and a knock at the door.

The Birthday Party is an exercise in controlled suspense. Two men show up at an unassuming boarding house in an ordinary British seaside town. Nobody knows where they’re from. All we know is that they’re looking for Stanley Webber, part-time pianist and the only guest of the house. And Stanley is terrified.

As a young director at New York’s Classic Stage Company, Carey Perloff built a reputation for her work with Pinter. Thirty years after her acclaimed New York production of The Birthday Party, she returns to this landmark play alongside a roll call of names from A.C.T. and the American theater, including Indian Ink star Firdous Bamji, Tony Award winner Judith Ivey, Geary favorite Dan Hiatt, and longtime A.C.T. company member Marco Barricelli. This January, Pinter and Perloff bring their own knock at the door to The Geary with suspense, comedy, and a healthy dose of terror.

FROM THE ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

Big, openhearted holiday greetings to every one of you! Whether you’re here for the first time or because A.C.T.’s Christmas Carol is an indispensable part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us. This outing of Carol is particularly meaningful to me as it represents my last as artistic director of A.C.T. Throughout my tenure here, Dickens’s transformative story has played a central role in the life of A.C.T., and I am grateful to every artist who has participated in this production and every audience member who has supported it with such passion over the years.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created 12 seasons ago, grew out of A.C.T.’s unique identity. We are an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned master of fine arts programs in America as well as our one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory (YC), in which students ages 8-19 study and perform and grow, we made sure that A.C.T.’s Carol would feature artists at every stage of their careers. It is an incredible gift for the larger A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists and audiences of all ages. So from our family to yours, welcome to this production. By supporting A Christmas Carol, you are also supporting our scholarship fund for young people who are making theater part of their lives, and for that we are deeply grateful.

Paul and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of four ghosts who perform a series of “interventions” on Scrooge until his heart is reawakened and he begins his life anew. The themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal continue to resonate, as we wrestle with ever more pervasive income inequality and struggle to hold onto our empathy and imagination in an increasingly divided world.

It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. It is also worth noting, for those of you who are here with children, that it has been proven again and again that when young people are exposed to the transformative power of live theater, their scholastic work and worldview open up in wonderful and surprising ways. With each passing year, A.C.T. becomes more and more deeply engaged in arts education, and A Christmas Carol is often the first experience that Bay Area children have of live theater. In the 25 years I have been at A.C.T., Dickens’s incredible story has been a remarkable constant, and a way for us to come together to reassess, to celebrate, to critique, and to imagine.

This Carol is blessed by the presence of some of the Bay Area’s most beloved actors—including James Carpenter and Anthony Fusco (our inimitable Scrooges), Ken Ruta, Sharon Lockwood, Catherine Castellanos, Cindy Goldfield, Howard Swain, Delia MacDougall, Colin Thomson, and many more. It also features the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2018 and 29 children from our Young Conservatory. This is a perfect moment to welcome our new YC director, Jill MacLean, who succeeds Craig Slaight, director for 29 years. Jill comes to us with a wealth of experience teaching, directing, and collaborating with young artists in New York and across the Bay Area. Her degree is in musical theater and she has jumped in to our YC cabarets with particular vigor and delight. We hope many of you will have the opportunity to meet Jill in the new year and to experience the breadth of the Young Conservatory as it continues to grow and evolve under her leadership. And for the adults out there who want to study theater, we want to introduce the new head of Studio A.C.T., Mark Jackson. Mark is a beloved Bay Area artist, a superb and acclaimed director, a teacher, and a longtime A.C.T. colleague. He has amazing things planned for Studio A.C.T., so stop by our website and find a class to try in the year ahead!

We wish you a fulfilling and empathetic 2018. As I write this, I am in rehearsals with some of A.C.T.’s favorite actors (including Marco Barricelli and Firdous Bamji) on Harold Pinter’s hilarious and terrifying The Birthday Party, which will play at The Geary in January. We hope you will return this winter and spring to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s 2017-18 season, both here at The Geary and at The Strand, where great adventures await you.

Welcome to A Christmas Carol!

Warmly,

Carey Perloff

ABOUT THE PLAY

Jacob Marley in A Christmas Carol, adapted by Carey Perloff and Paul Walsh

“Mankind was our business. The common welfare was our business; charity, mercy, benevolence were our business. The dealings of our trade were but a drop of water in the comprehensive ocean of our business! . . . Why did I walk through crowds of fellow-beings with my eyes turned down? Why did we turn away when others were in need?”

CHARLES DICKENS: COMMUNITY ACTIVIST

SOCIAL JUSTICE IN A CHRISTMAS CAROL

BY MICHAEL PALLER

Jacob Marley in A Christmas Carol, adapted by Carey Perloff and Paul Walsh
Writers write for many reasons. Some create to release an inner pressure that stems from a personal need welling up from the deepest part of themselves. If that impulse finds an analogy in the conditions of the outside world, the writer may become a sort of community activist, whose desire to fix the world springs from the drive for artistic expression. Charles Dickens was such a writer. He wrote, of course, to entertain, but from the beginning, he also intended to make people as angry as he was at the condition of England’s poor.

Dickens’s constituency, the community of the powerless, was vast. Of the sixteen million who populated England and Wales in 1840, about twenty-five percent existed at subsistence level; ten percent could barely feed themselves. The vast majority of the poor lived in dank, overcrowded tenements where diseases such as cholera ran rampant. Only twenty percent of children had any schooling; the rest were working—often from the age of three—in mines, mills, and factories. A great many died before reaching adulthood. The poor had no representation in Britain’s democracy: aristocrats comprised the House of Lords, while the House of Commons consisted largely of the newly empowered industrialists, manufacturers, bankers, and those who did their bidding, usually at the expense of the poor. It was on behalf of this dispossessed community that Dickens wrote to a friend in 1838, “I mean to strike the heaviest blow in my power.”

He struck his first blows in journalism. After beginning his career as a parliamentary reporter, he founded two newspapers which he filled with social commentary and criticism. But it was in his fiction that his voice was widest heard and most memorable. In Oliver Twist he exposed the pitiless machinery of the workhouse system that punished the poor for the crime of having nothing. In Nicholas Nickleby he exposed the national network of schools whose schoolmasters were more interested in profit and sadism than in education.

Dickens knew from experience what his characters faced. His anger originated in his own childhood of poverty, humiliation, and loneliness. When Dickens was ten, his father was sent to debtors’ prison, along with most of the family. Young Dickens was removed from school and put to work in a ramshackle Thames-side factory. For years he could neither talk nor write about this experience, which found its first expression in a sharp but generalized sympathy for the poor.

A Christmas Carol, written in 1843, portrays a man redeemed by memories after years of suppressing them. He recalls the long-forgotten kindnesses bestowed on him in his youth by his sister and the Fezziwigs before he succumbed to the pointless acquisitiveness that blighted his heart and narrowed his vision. Seeing them again starts a change in him—he becomes a more whole man devoted to the welfare of others.

Attacking the society that made unredeemed Scrooges so numerous, Dickens struck one blow after another in the great novels that followed: Dombey and Son, of which biographer Edgar Johnson writes, “[Dickens] for the first time portrayed society as a single interlinked system poisoned by the heartlessness of a money ethic”; Bleak House condemned governmental bureaucracy and the legal system, twin octopuses that squeezed the life from the powerless; and Little Dorrit imagined all of Britain as one great prison, corrupting or destroying all who came in contact with it.

However, urging the government and even the religious and philanthropic establishments to come to the aid of the powerless would never be enough, no matter how many sledgehammer blows Dickens struck with his fiction. In the years following Carol, British society’s willful blindness to the desperate circumstances of his community of the powerless was no longer an inspiration for comedy; the late novels burned with scorn and fury. The comic high jinks for which the earlier novels were beloved were muted or turned into bitter satire, when not absent altogether.

As literary scholar Michael Patrick Hearn points out about Carol, healing a community begins with changing an individual—Ebenezer Scrooge—not the system of which he is part. But what is a system if not a group of individuals who might be ready to change, given the right circumstances? If literature, or theater, can change a system and heal a community, it will happen one person at a time. Think about that, as the lights go down.
A.C.T.’s Christmas Carol has been performed almost every December for over 40 years. It’s a well-oiled machine, but as one of the biggest shows to grace The Geary each year, it takes all the theater has. Every line set of the fly system (a network of ropes and pipes used to raise and lower set pieces), and every inch of the wings of the stage is needed. There’s a mountain of scenery and costumes, but there’s also a ton of teamwork and heart. Here’s a glimpse behind the scenes of this seasonal favorite.

PRESHOW

Three hours before the show, Wardrobe Supervisor Mary Montijo and her staff of eight dressers arrive at The Geary Theater. After collecting the laundry from the basement, they place nine racks of costumes—over a thousand items—in dressing rooms and quick-change stations backstage.

Ninety minutes before the show, Head Carpenter Miguel Ongpin and his crew arrive and hit the ground running. They mop the stage, reset the scenery for the top of the show, and check the lavaliere (body) microphones.

Forty minutes before curtain, 29 Young Conservatory actors gather on the Geary stage to warm up with fun theater games. It’s a chance to let off steam and celebrate each other before the hustle and bustle of the performance.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL BEGINS

Crew member Mark Pugh has a very important job: accurately rolling a large piece of scenery to actor Sharon Lockwood (Mrs. Dilber) as she walks by. He then runs around to the opposite side of the stage to catch the piece from her.

Montijo accompanies A.C.T. veteran Ken Ruta to the trap room underneath the stage. While a crew member raises the elevator carrying Scrooge’s bed, Montijo double-checks that Ruta and his incredibly heavy costume are secure for his magical entrance.

While Ruta is onstage, Ongpin and Pugh are backstage left, strapping M.F.A. Program actor Lily Narbonne, playing the Ghost of Christmas Past, into her swing in preparation for her sweeping journey across the stage.

Crew member Colin Wade (photo above) climbs up a spiral staircase to the fly floor, 30 feet above the Geary stage. From here, he controls the terrifying Ghost of Christmas Future. “It’s the only place where you can find ten minutes of solitude during the show,” he says.

During the last 20 minutes of the show, Montijo and her staff are like dancers, moving through the choreography of quick-changes: hoop skirt ready to step into, scarf on left shoulder, hair pins poised.

As the show reaches its triumphant climax, a drum brimming with paper snow is lowered into place just below the lights.

POSTSHOW

When the curtain falls, the actors celebrate together by performing the “Snow Shake,” a short dance to shake all the snow from their costumes. Then they change into street clothes and hand their costumes over to Montijo and her team. As the actors say good night, the washing machines hum in anticipation of the next performance.

The Christmas Carol cast is filled with veterans of the Geary stage, from Scrooge to Tiny Tim. Every December, A.C.T. stalwarts James Carpenter and Anthony Fusco (our Scrooges), as well as original company member Ken Ruta (Jacob Marley), share the stage with several Young Conservatory actors who are performing in the show for the fourth or fifth time.

A.C.T.’s adaptation of Dickens’s classic tale was created with just this idea in mind. “One of the hallmarks of A.C.T.’s Carol is the multigenerational opportunities it offers,” says Young Conservatory Director Jill MacLean. “Bringing YC students, M.F.A. Program actors, and professionals together onstage gives these young students a unique personal and theatrical learning experience.”

From the graceful arabesques of the French Plums to the forceful punches of the Street Gang, there are opportunities for every young actor to stretch his or her acting skills. “I have learned to do things that I never imagined I could ever do,” says sixth grader and three-time Carol performer Alejandra Zavala, “like twirling my hips as a Turkish Fig in a way that makes the audience laugh with joy.”

“I learned that if you make a mistake, the adult actors do a really good job of improvising, which makes the audience think that you were supposed to make the mistake all along,” says Maximilian Wix, a 12-year-old who’s performing in Carol for the third time. “Someday, I’ll be able to improvise as well as the older actors.”

Performing in A Christmas Carol doesn’t just teach these blossoming actors how to act, sing, and dance; it also helps them to build confidence and grow as individuals. “I haven’t physically grown much since I first started acting in Carol—maybe two inches—but this experience has taught me that, even though I’m not a big person, I can make a big impact on how others feel,” says 12-year-old, fourth-year Carol performer Mattea Fountain.
“The first time I was in Carol, I didn’t know how to project my voice as well as I can now,” says Seth Weinfield, a seventh grader who is a five-time veteran of the holiday classic. “I’d never performed in a theater that big. Now I’m comfortable performing in front of a thousand people.”

Acting in Carol is a major commitment for these young actors, and for their families. Many commute from all over the Bay Area to The Geary Theater for three months of rehearsals and performances. They miss birthday parties, Hanukkah celebrations, school classes, and other activities. They must fit homework in around their rehearsal and performance schedule. And, like all the actors in Carol, they struggle with the demands of two-show days. “It can be hard to keep your energy up for the second show,” says Weinfield. “But a coffee run really helps!”

But the fun that they have each year—the treats they exchange, the potlucks they have on two-show days, the skits they perform for the cast—as well as the support of their Carol family more than make up for the long nights. “Performing in A Christmas Carol for many years, I’ve learned from the adult actors and the M.F.A. Program actors how the professional acting world works,” says Fountain, “and that playing isn’t just for kids.”

AN ARTIST’S EDUCATION
AN INTERVIEW WITH THIRD-YEAR M.F.A. PROGRAM ACTOR JUSTIN GENNA
BY TAYLOR STEINBECK
Technique, technique, technique. This is the word that was drilled into third-year M.F.A. Program actor Justin Genna’s head for most of his young life as an artist. At the age of 19 he was hired out of high school by the Milwaukee Ballet, where he worked for seven years. During his time as a professional ballet dancer, Genna’s artistic abilities were sharpened to near perfection, but he felt contained, restricted. As a creative release backstage between dances, he would make up stories or act out impressions (such as Freddie Mercury). What everyone else in the company referred to as the “silly stuff Justin does in the corner” was the spark that led Genna to leap from the world of ballet to theater.

In 2014, Genna enrolled in A.C.T.’s Summer Training Congress, an intensive seven-week actor training program. Those seven weeks turned into 15 more as part of the San Francisco Semester (A.C.T.’s undergraduate study-away program for theater minors and majors), then into three years with the Master of Fine Arts Program. Now in his final year as an M.F.A. student, he takes the Geary stage for his professional acting debut as Young Scrooge in A Christmas Carol. If there’s anything Genna has taken away from his training at A.C.T., it’s that there is far more to being an artist than mastery of technique.

What was it about A.C.T.’s Summer Training Congress (STC) that grabbed your interest?

They accept actors of all levels, so I didn’t feel intimidated. It was inclusive. And I was hooked within the first two days. Initially, I thought it was going to be more sit-down, more technical, that we’d just be reading from scripts, but I was up on my feet, moving and talking and interacting with people. It was very freeing. As a new actor, the STC opened the door to me, and said, “Hey, look what’s possible.” After those seven weeks, I knew I wanted more.

Soon after the STC you enrolled in the San Francisco Semester (SFS). How did the SFS contribute to your development as an actor?

The SFS taught me that I am enough. If I’m willing to go find myself and bring myself to the table, it’ll show in my acting. Our voice teacher, Lynne Soffer, emphasized this. Her training was all about teaching us how to free ourselves and find our voices. As a ballet dancer who’s always striving to be precise, this made no sense to me at first. I thought, “Wait a minute—you just want me to talk like me? In my voice?” That was such a big concept. I didn’t know that acting could be so personal and so full of me.

If you learned how to find your voice in the SFS, what have you learned from the M.F.A. Program?

That I had only thought I found my voice, but actually it’s a lifelong journey. When you leave A.C.T., you’re an artist armed with all the tools you need for the foreseeable future in this art form. I’ve learned here how to care for myself and how to be vulnerable, which has been instrumental in my work. Acting is so much more than technique—it has to come from somewhere real. And that’s the hardest thing. We work on that every day in our classes. Whether or not you stay with acting through the years, the M.F.A. Program will set you off on the right foot: you’ll be an artist for the rest of your life, hungry to learn.

How does it feel to be making your Geary debut in *A Christmas Carol?

I feel like I’ve been waiting to perform on this stage for four years now. I’m itching for it—I’d be lying if I said I wasn’t. And it’s a nice full-circle moment to have Domenique Lozano directing me in my professional acting debut because when I came here for the STC, she was my first acting teacher. What’s great is that she’s not just a teacher to me, but also a fellow artist. All of us here at A.C.T.—teachers, students, artists—are sharing what we know. And sharing honestly. I’ve never been in an educational institution where that is so prevalent. It’s powerful.

A.C.T. PROFILES

CAREY PERLOFF (Artistic Director)

is celebrating her 25th season as artistic director of A.C.T., where she has overseen a huge growth in the quality and scope of A.C.T.'s work, helped to rebuild the earthquake-damaged Geary Theater and the new Strand Theater in Central Market, and has forged collaborations between A.C.T. and theaters across the United States and Canada. Known for innovative productions of classics and championing new writing and new forms of theater, Perloff has directed classical plays from around the world, 10 plays by Tom Stoppard (including the American premieres of The Invention of Love and Indian Ink, also at Roundabout Theatre Company, and two productions of Arcadia), and many productions by favorite contemporary writers such as Samuel Beckett, Harold Pinter, José Rivera, and Philip Kan Gotanda. Favorite productions include Hecuba, Tis Pity She’s a Whore, The Tosca Café, The Voysey Inheritance, Scorched, and Underneath the Lintel.

Perloff is also an award-winning playwright. Her recent play Kinship premiered at the Théâtre de Paris in 2014; Higher won the 2011 Blanche and Irving Laurie Foundation Theatre Visions Fund Award; and Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre. Perloff’s book, Beautiful Chaos: A Life in the Theater (City Lights Press), was selected as San Francisco Public Library’s One City One Book read for 2016.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language, and many classic works. Named a Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres by the French government, Perloff received a BA Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford.

PETER PASTREICH (Executive Director)

joins A.C.T. after a 50-year career in arts management. He spent 21 years as executive director of the San Francisco Symphony, a period that included the tenures of music directors Edo De Waart, Herbert Blomstedt, and Michael Tilson Thomas, and during which the orchestra increased its endowment from $12 million to $120 million. Pastreich was the chief administrator responsible for the construction of Davies Symphony Hall in San Francisco, and for its acoustical renovation.

Before coming to San Francisco, he spent 12 years as executive director of the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra and six years as managing director of the Mississippi River Festival. In addition, Pastreich has done management consulting for the Berlin Philharmonic, Southbank Centre in London, Detroit Symphony, Louisville Orchestra, Milwaukee Symphony, Philadephia Orchestra, and Sydney Symphony Orchestra in Australia. He has also served as mediator in orchestra and opera union negotiations in Detroit, Louisville, Milwaukee, Phoenix, Sacramento, Seattle, and San Antonio.

Born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1938, Pastreich received a BA in English literature from Yale University in 1959. In 1999, he was made a Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres by the French government and was named an honorary member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees by Local 16 of the Stagehands Union.

Berkeley Rep
“City National helps keep my financial life in tune.”

So much of my life is always shifting; a different city, a different piece of music, a different ensemble. I need people who I can count on to help keep my financial life on course so I can focus on creating and sharing the “adventures” of classical music. City National shares my passion and is instrumental in helping me bring classical music to audiences all over the world. They enjoy being a part of what I do and love. That is the essence of a successful relationship.

City National is The way up® for me.
