American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award–winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and ongoing community engagement. We embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our rich theatrical traditions, while exploring new artistic forms and communities. Founded by William Ball, a pioneer of the regional theater movement, A.C.T. opened in San Francisco in 1967. We have since performed more than 400 productions to more than seven million people.

Hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped the roof apart, San Franciscans raised a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild the theater. The Geary reopened in 1996 with The Tempest, directed by Carey Perloff, who took over as A.C.T.’s third artistic director in 1992 after the retirement of Edward Hastings.

Perloff’s tenure was marked by translations of classical works; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and theater made by, for, and about the Bay Area. Exploring powerful stories by celebrated artists and introducing audiences to extraordinary emerging voices in American theater continues under A.C.T.’s current artistic director, Pam MacKinnon.

A.C.T.’s 50-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program is at the forefront of America’s actor training programs. Our Summer Training Congress attracts students from around the world, while the San Francisco Semester offers a unique study-abroad opportunity for undergraduates. Other programs include Studio A.C.T.—our expansive course of theater study for adults—and the Professional Development Training Program, which offers actor training for companies seeking to elevate employees’ business performance skills. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as on stages and screens nationwide.

A.C.T. brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 17,000 Bay Area students and educators each year. Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen oversees the Young Conservatory (students ages 8–19), our Fellowship Program for emerging theater professionals, and our ACTsmart school and community programs, including the Student Matinee (SMAT) program that has brought hundreds of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With the appointment of Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon and Executive Director Jennifer Bielstein, our continuing commitment to the development of new work and new artists, and our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood with The Strand and The Costume Shop theaters, A.C.T. plays a leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

Romances blossom, resentments fester, and rumors spread at a performance of Romeo and Juliet. And that’s just onstage. Welcome to A.C.T. and Edward Albee’s Seascape,

The morning after I won the Tony Award for directing Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, Edward left me a voicemail: “Isn’t it nice when things go the way they’re supposed to? Congratulations, congratulations, congratulations. I love you. Will you marry me? Please say no.”

He was a friend, a collaborator, and a colleague. Two years after his death I still miss him, but I’m happy to continue my work with him, on his mysterious play Seascape. It will be the 11th time I am directing Albee. Having this supportive and challenging artist at my side feels like the perfect way to land in the Bay Area and learn about The Geary as a director.

Edward’s plays remain provocative. His characters are vital; they provoke each other. They even wound, altering chemistry, initiating each other into new phases of awareness. Through tears and howls can come truth or uncertainty, which is the beginning of really listening, really living, rather than passing time or role-playing. Seascape does this gently and, by its end, with an unambiguous sense of hope. At this time, we can use hope.

In Seascape, the surreal and metaphorical are loud and fun and messy, but the play is also an upper-middle-class marriage play—easy to consume, but hopefully something that lingers, prompting thought in the wee hours. What’s next? What’s possible? Am I brave? How do I define love? Big questions all.

This leads me directly to Mfoniso Udofia, an A.C.T. M.F.A. Program alum who’s now a playwright as well as a wonderful actor. We are thrilled to be producing play four in her nine-part Ufot Family cycle—Her Portmanteau, playing next at The Strand—in conjunction with Magic Theatre, which is producing play five. We have also commissioned, and will develop in coming seasons, play eight in that cycle. This is an artist to grab hold of, to celebrate, and to support. Edward would be happy.

Finally, a thought from María Irene Fornés, who passed away this fall a few days before Ntozake Shange, theater titans both: “If theater is to be successful it must be loved like one loves an animal that one wonders at.”

Enjoy! See you at the theater.

FROM THE ARTISTIC AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

Dear Friends,

Happy New Year! Welcome to 2019, and to Seascape, Pam MacKinnon’s directorial debut at A.C.T! One of the many reasons I came to A.C.T. was the chance to work with Pam, and I cannot wait to experience her artistry along with you. Earlier this year she directed Bruce Norris’s Downstate at Steppenwolf Theatre Company in Chicago, for which she was recognized in the New York Times’ Best Theater of 2018 list, and she’ll head to London next month to direct it at the National Theatre. Before then, she makes her A.C.T. bow with Seascape, a play which offers a great opportunity for personal reflection, as it’s a piece that resonates with relationships and the state of being at a crossroads—how do we relate to and diverge from those closest to us when facing these moments in life?

The new year brings new voices and new work to our stages as well. We are thrilled to share our upcoming production of Both Your Houses, running February 21–March 2 in The Rueff at The Strand Theater. Written by Hawaiian playwright Susan Soon He Stanton, and presented by our M.F.A. Program class of 2019, this play is set backstage at a performance of Romeo and Juliet. Mixing snippets of Shakespeare, thought-provoking plotlines, laugh-out-loud comedy, and insight into life in theater, this is a smart, contemporary story from one of American theater’s rising young talents. Both Your Houses was co-commissioned with Crowded Fire Theater and workshopped at our 2018 New Strands Festival, where it was a runaway hit. We’re thrilled to bring it back for a fully staged performance with our M.F.A. actors, so that more people can experience it.

You are an important part of the process in creating new work. As a member of the audience, your reactions shape the performance and the subsequent development of the script. Your participation, paired with our incredibly strong M.F.A. students, will lead to great things. Our students are citizen artists, who share a passion for theater, an entrepreneurial spirit, and a deep commitment to making the world a better place. If you haven’t come to an M.F.A. production at A.C.T. yet, why not make it one of your New Year’s resolutions?

I hope to see you there.

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO PLAYWRIGHT EDWARD ALBEE

BY ELSPETH SWEATMAN

Albee knew he wanted to be a writer from an early age. He began drafting poems at six, plays at 12, and novels in his teens. Yet it wasn't until his 30th birthday that he created his first quintessential Albee play: The Zoo Story (1959). It was quickly followed by the overtly political The Death of Bessie Smith (1960) and the more absurdist The American Dream (1961). To outsiders, it may have looked like Albee was searching for his voice. But Albee knew that he already had it. “A playwright’s voice is the sound that he makes,” said Albee, “the style that he works in doesn’t determine that at all.”

In 1962, Albee made a splash with Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and its iconic, warring couple George and Martha. Continuing his exploration of marriage and the American dream, the play lays bare our petty quarrels, quirks, and the lies we create to survive. This exposing style didn't sit well with some critics. While the New York Post’s Richard Watts declared it “the most shattering drama I have seen since O’Neill’s Long Day’s Journey into Night,” the Daily Mirror’s Robert Coleman called it “a sick play for sick people.” The unfavorable reviews only fueled box office sales. Albee made enough money to buy a property in Montauk, Long Island, and establish the Playwrights Unit to support emerging writers. Virginia Woolf received the Tony Award for Best Play and almost the Pulitzer Prize for Drama; the drama jury put forward Albee for the prize, but Columbia University’s trustees and the award’s advisory board overruled them. There was no prize awarded that year, and two jury members resigned in protest.

For those who expected Albee to produce more plays like Virginia Woolf, his next works—Tiny Alice (1964), the Pulitzer Prize–winning A Delicate Balance (1966), Box and Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-Tung (1968), and Seascape (1975)—were a real shock. Each used different theatrical techniques to shake the audience up, a sensation to which Broadway audiences were unaccustomed. They didn't come to the theater to be challenged; they just wanted to be entertained. Despite garnering his second Pulitzer Prize for Seascape, Albee found the New York theater community increasingly hostile during the 1970s and '80s. Knowing that he needed a safe space to experiment with bold theatrical and thematic ideas, Albee broke ties with Broadway. He began teaching at the University of Houston and premiering a series of one-act plays at universities across the United States. In 1989, Albee's mother died. Though mother and son had never been close—Frances Albee refused to acknowledge her son's homosexuality—her death provided the inspiration for Three Tall Women (1991). The play was a critical success, winning the Drama Critics’ Circle Award for Best Play, the Lucille Lortel Award for Outstanding Play, and the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. Having now received three (or as Albee was fond of saying, “three-and-a-half”) Pulitzer Prizes, Albee was back on top.

As the American theater entered a new millennium, Albee's place as one of the country's master playwrights was secure. Yet between teaching, lecturing, supporting young playwrights, and attending rehearsals for his plays around the world, he kept writing: The Play About the Baby (1998); The Goat, or Who Is Sylvia? (2000); Peter and Jerry: Homelife and The Zoo Story (2004, later called At Home at the Zoo); and Me, Myself and I (2007). He never wavered in his demand that audiences engage fully with his art. “All my plays are about people missing the boat, closing down too young, coming to the end of their lives with regret at things not done,” said Albee. “I find that most people spend too much time living as if they’re never going to die. They skid through their lives. Sleep through them sometimes. Anyway, there are only two things to write about—life and death.”

“Art is not pacification,” said playwright Edward Albee. “It's disturbance.” Albee's 34 plays do not pacify; each in its own way pushes its audience to reevaluate their perceptions and reexamine their lives. “You either affect people or you leave them indifferent,” said Albee. “And I would loathe to leave an audience indifferent. I don’t care whether they like or hate, so long as they're not indifferent.”

“The morning after I won the Tony Award for directing Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, Edward left me a voicemail: ‘Isn’t it nice when things go the way they’re supposed to? Congratulations, congratulations, congratulations. I love you. Will you marry me? Please say no.’”
—Pam MacKinnon

At the 2001 Eugene O’Neill Playwriting Conference, Pam MacKinnon directed a workshop that would change her life. The Philadelphia Theatre Company was looking for a director to helm its production of Edward Albee’s The Play About the Baby, and spotted MacKinnon. A few months later, MacKinnon met Albee for lunch. Across a Tribeca table, the two theater-makers recognized a shared passion for truth and theatricality.

When Houston’s Alley Theatre showed Albee a list of potential directors for its 2003 production of The Goat, or Who Is Sylvia?, he didn’t hesitate. He pointed to Pam’s name. Over the next 15 years, MacKinnon would go on to direct Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and A Delicate Balance on Broadway, and the premieres of Occupant and Peter and Jerry. “I was incredibly fortunate to have first met Edward to direct his newer plays,” says MacKinnon. Now, she shares Albee with us.

BREAKING DOWN BARRIERS

DIRECTOR PAM MACKINNON ON SEASCAPE AND ALBEE

BY SIMON HODGSON

Everyone wants a piece of Pam MacKinnon.
No sooner had the Tony Award–winning director kicked off her opening season as artistic director of A.C.T. than she directed the acclaimed premiere of Bruce Norris’s Downstate at Steppenwolf Theatre Company in Chicago. In March, she’ll be taking that production to London’s National Theatre, then flying back over the Atlantic to direct the premiere of Toni Stone at Roundabout Theater Company in New York.
Right now, however, MacKinnon is focused on Edward Albee’s Seascape, continuing the collaboration with the great American dramatist she began in 2002. As she approached rehearsals for her A.C.T. directing debut (and her 11th Albee production), she talked about the production, her plans for The Geary, and her thoughts about the playwright.

What is Albee exploring in Seascape?
This play is about love and marriage and what you want to do with your life. It’s an accessible play. All his plays feel richly funny, but Seascape feels much more comedy than tragedy, with an ending that looks ahead. I think the end of Virginia Woolf is hopeful, though it’s a hopeful that takes your breath away. Seascape feels unambiguously hopeful. I can picture what Edward was looking at when he wrote it—the waves of the Atlantic at the tip of Long Island. He had a house on the beach at Montauk that he built with the money he made from Virginia Woolf. I’m sure he wrote the bulk of Seascape there.

So how does the setting influence the storytelling?
Seascape feels like a beach play, a very relaxed play. If a character is saying, “There was a time in our marriage when I felt you were cheating on me,” that’s a heavy-duty conversation. But if you say it at the beach, as opposed to one a.m. in a faculty housing living room with a bar cart behind you, that’s different. There’s something more side-by-side about the couple in Seascape, instead of being in opposition to each other. This is a play about transition. It felt appropriate, as I swap life as a freelance director in New York for the city by the bay with my partner of 11 years, John. I’m interested in the next challenge. Not just to continue but to jolt ourselves into a next chapter.

Over the course of your 11 Albee productions, you’ve worked with dozens of actors. What have you learned about casting an Albee play?
There is something great about having at least one actor in a company who is also a writer, someone like Tracy Letts or Bill Pullman. And I’m working with playwright and actor Ellen McLaughlin on Seascape. These actors understand that you can’t play a metaphor. Writers write metaphors, but actors have to ground them, to massage those lines into something that will hit your ear as nothing but human.

Audiences haven’t seen Albee at A.C.T. in a decade. What are your thoughts about bringing him back to The Geary?
Edward wrote Seascape thinking about the theaters in which they were going to be performed. This was written for a Broadway house. The Geary is a jewel box, a turn-of-the-century proscenium house; Seascape is written for that stage. I want to both honor that, and push it a bit further—to own The Geary as a new home for me as a director.

I’m interested in breaking down the barriers between actors and audiences. With Sweat [which opened at The Geary in September], I encouraged director Loretta Greco to really push the action far downstage, to be close to us. And for Her Portmanteau in The Strand [running February 15–March 31], I know director Victor Malana Maog is thinking the same way. I am taking that charge myself.

To confront the audience with the storytelling?
Yeah. You’re in that room. That’s important to me. Theaters can feel grand and presentational, at a remove. How do we mix that up? In Seascape, we have the opportunity to take over The Geary. I’m curious about the moments when the play pours into the laps of the audience. How can we make these rooms our own?

A.C.T. CELEBRATES THE ARRIVAL OF PAM AND JENNIFER

BY A.C.T. PUBLICATIONS STAFF

The corner of Howard and 10th is quiet now, but on November 15, the Saint Joseph’s Arts Society—A.C.T. Trustee Ken Fulk’s amazing new arts space—was hopping with theater devotees and guest artists at our Fall Celebration, an extravaganza to officially welcome Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon and Executive Director Jennifer Bielstein to San Francisco. Event co-chair Robina Riccitiello described the event as “energetic, elegant, and so much fun!” Among the highlights were expert emcee-ing by Tony Award winner BD Wong, heartfelt speeches by Academy Award winner Ellen Burstyn and Golden Globe winner Judd Hirsch, and an awesome set by Grammy Award–nominated percussionist Sheila E., who brought Pam and Jennifer onstage for an impromptu boogie. The evening was a smash hit! Huge thank-yous to our co-chairs Ken Fulk, Robina Riccitiello, and Jeff and Laurie Ubben, and to all our supporters who helped raise $900,000 for A.C.T.’s artistic, artist training, and education and community programs.

A DEEP DIVE

25 YEARS OF WORDS ON PLAYS
BY ELSPETH SWEATMAN

When I was searching for my theatrical home, there was one thing above all that drew me to A.C.T.: Words on Plays. A unique, in-depth guide to each of our mainstage shows, this publication has made my love for theater grow. Through it, I have discovered the minimalism of Peter Brook, the language of Shakespeare, and the theatrical hijinks of Men on Boats. I have explored the history of silent retreats, the uncertainty principle, and the little-known stories of enslaved people during the Civil War. No matter the play, Words on Plays has transformed it into my latest favorite.
Words on Plays was created in 1994 by Education & Community Programs Director Elizabeth Brodersen (then A.C.T.’s publications editor). She saw our audiences devouring the dramaturgy in the program and asking the house manager to mail them a copy of the next program so they could read it before seeing the show. Taking the material her team was compiling for the teacher guides used in Bay Area schools, Brodersen founded a new publication, one dedicated to all things dramaturgy. She put them together herself, gluing the photos on by hand before photocopying the pages.

Since then, Words on Plays has grown into a sleek print and online publication, read by thousands of teachers, students, and audience members each year. While its look may have changed in 25 years, it remains our primary education tool and your go-to place for a behind-the-scenes look at the art created on A.C.T.’s stages. There are exclusive interviews with playwrights and directors, designers and actors, as well as original articles about everything from lizards and the history of Central Park to The Simpsons and the life of a sniper.

"Words on Plays can often make the difference between a squirmy, uneasy launch with an audience and an early-on feeling of engagement—of synch," says Tony Award winner Bill Irwin. “For an actor, the feeling is palpable. This group of people I’m stepping in front of has a feeling for what we’re up to here. We’re in the same room together.”

A.C.T. remains one of the few theaters in America to create such a unique publication. Proceeds from Words on Plays directly support our ACTsmart theater arts education programs, which serve more than 17,000 students and educators every year. Join us in celebrating 25 years of Words on Plays!

NEVER STOP LEARNING

A.C.T. GEARS UP FOR OUR 48TH SUMMER TRAINING CONGRESS

BY ANNIE SEARS

There’s a whole lot of newness happening at A.C.T.—a new year, new leadership, a new season soon to be announced. But we’re also gearing up for one longstanding tradition, the annual return of A.C.T.’s very first Conservatory program: the Summer Training Congress (STC). Established in 1967 for actors who want to deepen their craft, the STC is an immersive learning experience that propels actors toward “finding their voice and becoming the artists they want and hope to be,” says STC Director Christopher Herold.

When Herold moved to the Bay Area to earn his PhD in directing from UC Berkeley, he found a home in its thriving arts community. He’s acted, directed, and taught all over the Bay Area, including 25 years as an instructor and director in our STC, M.F.A., and Studio A.C.T. programs, before assuming his role as STC director in 2008. “Christopher is dedicated to teaching,” says Kim Hollkamp, a 2016 STC alum and current second-year M.F.A. Program actor. “He’s specific and honest, which is exactly what you need if you’re going to improve. I was amazed by how much I learned about acting and about myself in such a short period of time.”

The STC is divided into two separate but interconnected sessions. Students can participate in a five-week foundational skills Congress, a two-week Shakespeare intensive, or both. Whatever option students select, “They’ll grasp foundational notions of acting that will serve them well in the present moment and in all of their future acting endeavors,” says Herold. “We never stop learning, but there are some ideas that are eternally relevant. That’s what we’re giving students here at A.C.T.”

For this reason, the STC attracts a variety of actors, from 19-year-olds just beginning their careers to Equity actors in their 50s and 60s. Students vary not only in age, but also in origin, with students from all 50 states and more than 30 countries. “An eclectic assortment of excellent people,” says Herold.

After completing a rigorous application process and being admitted to the Congress, this diverse group of participants audition in person on their first day of class. Based on their individual performance, Herold sorts them into smaller companies of 14–18 actors “who will be mutually helpful to each other,” he says. “Every company is consciously constructed from a mix of actors with a range of experiences, so that cross-pollination can take place.”

Over the last 10 years, Herold has developed an expansive network of local teaching artists to lead these companies and share their wisdom with STC students. “They are teaching it, but also living it and doing it,” he says. “That essential connection keeps them knowledgeable and their coursework vibrant.” These award-winning artists offer world-class expertise, having worked at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, Dell’Arte International School of Physical Theatre, Theatre Rhinoceros, and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, among others. Many have studied under world-renowned artists, such as voice teacher Kristin Linklater and clowning artist Jacques Lecoq.
“All the teachers are amazing,” says Hollkamp. “The head of my company was Lisa Anne Porter, who also teaches in the M.F.A. Program. She made me feel confident about what I have to offer as an actor. Wanting to keep learning from her is a large part of why I applied for A.C.T.’s M.F.A. Program.”

Like Hollkamp, many STC alumni pursue master’s degrees following the STC. “The STC taught me the demand and the discipline that it takes to be an actor,” says Summer Brown, a 2016 STC alum and second-year M.F.A. Program actor. “It gives you a great idea of what it’s like to be in an immersive, intensive study. That’s what made me decide to go to grad school.” In addition to attending our M.F.A. Program, recent STC alumni have studied at Yale School of Drama, The Juilliard School, Brown University, New York University, Columbia University, DePaul University, and London Guildhall University, among others.

“Every great actor is a trained actor,” says Herold. “I have faith in training, in art, and in A.C.T.’s ability to train actors of the highest caliber. I believe the work they’re doing is relevant and will alter the terrain of the world.”

The 2019 STC five-week session starts June 10, and the two-week Shakespeare intensive starts July 15.

PAM MACKINNON (Artistic Director) is celebrating her inaugural season as A.C.T.’s fourth artistic director. She is a Tony, Drama Desk, and Obie Award–winning director, having directed upwards of 70 productions around the country, off Broadway, and on Broadway. Her Broadway credits include Beau Willimon’s The Parisian Woman (with Uma Thurman), Amelie: A New Musical, David Mamet’s China Doll (with Al Pacino), Wendy Wasserstein’s The Heidi Chronicles (with Elisabeth Moss), Edward Albee’s A Delicate Balance (with Glenn Close and John Lithgow), Edward Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (Tony Award, Drama Desk Award, and Outer Critics Circle nomination), and Bruce Norris’s Clybourne Park (Obie Award for Excellence in Direction, Tony and Lucille Lortel nominations). After five years as board chair of Clubbed Thumb, a downtown New York theater company dedicated to new American plays, she sits on its advisory board. She is an artistic associate of the Roundabout Theatre Company, a Usual Suspect of New York Theatre Workshop, and an alumna of the Drama League, Women’s Project, and Lincoln Center Theatre’s Directors’ Labs. She is also the executive board president of the Stage Directors and Choreographers Society (SDC). She grew up in Toronto, Canada, and Buffalo, New York, acted through her teens, but majored in economics and political science at the University of Toronto and briefly pursued a PhD in political science at UC San Diego, before returning to her true passion: theater.

JENNIFER BIELSTEIN (Executive Director) joins A.C.T. with more than 25 years of theater management experience. She is currently president of the League of Resident Theatres (LORT)—an organization that represents 74 theaters nationwide—having previously served as LORT’s vice president; chair of its Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion Committee; secretary; and on multiple union negotiating teams. Before relocating to the Bay Area, Bielstein was the managing director of the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, managing director of Actors Theatre of Louisville, and executive director of Writers Theatre in Chicago. She has also worked for Steppenwolf Theatre Company, About Face Theatre, Northlight Theatre, and the Lincoln Park Zoo, as well as serving on the boards of the League of Chicago Theatres, Theatre Forward, the Arts and Cultural Attractions Council, and other civic boards. She has received the Center for Nonprofit Excellence’s Pyramid Award of Excellence in Leadership, and has been recognized as one of Louisville’s Business First’s 40 Under 40. In 2017, Bielstein was named by Twin Cities Business as a Person to Know, and, in 2018, Minnesota Business magazine named her as a Real Power 50 member. Bielstein is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, attended Stanford’s Graduate School of Business Executive Program for Nonprofit Leaders, and earned an MBA from Bellarmine University, where she received the MBA Faculty Merit Award and was inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma, the honor society for business programs.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing, while also teaching and directing in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. In 2013, she launched the San Francisco Semester, a semester-long intensive that deepens students’ acting. In 2016, she was honored by Theatre Bay Area as one of 40 individuals who have changed the face of Bay Area theater. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of the Program in Theater and Dance at Princeton University. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages in various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., the California Shakespeare Festival, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep.; and in England at the Barbican Centre in London and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a BA from Yale College and an MFA in acting from Yale School of Drama.
