“Landing both a comic and tragic punch, Kwame Kwei-Armah’s Let There Be Love . . . manages to face heady matters with a disarming freshness, not to mention piercing honesty.”

The Baltimore Sun

HOW DO YOU FIND REDEMPTION WHEN YOU’RE YOUR OWN WORST ENEMY?

Opening this April at The Geary, Let There Be Love is an intimate and often humorous family drama by Kwame Kwei-Armah, one of Britain’s most distinguished contemporary playwrights. Alfred, a cantankerous and aging West Indian immigrant living in London, has managed to alienate all those around him—including his equally headstrong lesbian daughter, with whom he rarely sees eye to eye. When an idealistic young Polish caregiver, new to the country, is assigned to look after him, he experiences a powerful reckoning with his past. Filled with the sumptuous jazz standards that pour forth from Alfred’s beloved gramophone and featuring a tour-de-force performance from stage and screen star Carl Lumbly, Let There Be Love explores the unrelenting grip of memory, regret, and forgiveness—and what can happen when we welcome new possibilities.

Currently the artistic director of the renowned Center Stage in Baltimore, Kwei-Armah is also an associate artist and board member at the National Theatre in London, where his award-winning play Elmina’s Kitchen debuted in 2003. A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff says, “As soon as I met this remarkable artist, it was clear that he was a visionary with a gorgeous sense of language, deep empathy, and natural instinct for leadership. He has navigated the immigrant experience in Britain with wisdom and passion, and is able to write about it in a fresh and accessible way. Let There Be Love will be a beautiful addition to A.C.T.’s season, and Kwame’s participation in this community will be a great gift.”

San Francisco’s THEATER COMPANY

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER, San Francisco’s Tony Award–winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Ellen Richard, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. We reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

The beautiful, historic Geary Theater—rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse”—has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied together to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 20-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and “locavore” theater—theater made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

A.C.T.’s 45-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, and our intensive Summer Training Congress attracts enthusiasts from around the world. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19, led by 25-year veteran Craig Slaight, and Studio A.C.T., our expansive course of study for adults. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as stages and screens across the country.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 10,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education and Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which has brought tens of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater, the current renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, and the launch of our mobile Stage Coach initiative, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

Will Homer's myths be replaced by Homer Simpson?

What will happen when the apocalypse arrives, the electric grid disintegrates, and humanity is forced to rebuild? Which of our stories will stand the test of time . . . and cataclysmic change? An outrageous and enthusiastically acclaimed comedy by Anne Washburn, Mr. Burns, a post-electric play is both a marvelous meta-tribute to an iconic staple of contemporary popular culture and a celebration of the power of storytelling through the ages.

In a post-apocalyptic world, five survivors of a nuclear disaster bond by recreating the memorable “Cape Feare” episode of The Simpsons (one of the most celebrated in the show’s 26-season canon). Passing time around a campfire, they cobble together the story of Bart and his murderous stalker, Sideshow Bob, with the help of fuzzily remembered punch lines. After this fortuitous meeting, distant memories of whimsical Simpsons plots become a bridge connecting humanity’s past with its future.

In Washburn’s wildly imagined world, the episode takes on mythic proportions as generations of disaster survivors reenact the brilliant spoof of Martin Scorsese’s 1991 remake of the film Cape Fear. The intricate story-within-a-story is accompanied by mashups of old hit songs, television trivia, and other references that reveal how the stories of one era become the myths of another.

Wedding two common American hobbies—imagining life after the apocalypse and obsessing over the latest episode of a favorite TV show—Mr. Burns is an epic live-theatrical sendup of popular culture’s enduring appeal. Washburn offers a sobering yet hilarious mirror for survival in a new America—one in which candlelight has replaced electricity, ownership over Simpsons episodes has become the currency of choice, and the Homer of the Iliad has been eclipsed by the Homer of America’s longest-running primetime series.

With wit and poignancy, Mr. Burns, which spans more than 75 years of a post-apocalyptic America, reveals how storytelling can help us make sense of the world in times of crisis. Washburn’s dark comedy was a wild success in New York, with the New York Times exclaiming, “Mr. Burns, a post-electric play . . . makes us appreciate anew the profound value of storytelling in and of itself, and makes a case for theater as the most glorious and durable storyteller of all.”

Dear Friends,

Happy New Year and welcome to Indian Ink! It is rare to experience a great pleasure twice. But such was my good fortune with Tom Stoppard’s Indian Ink; I first directed the American premiere in 1999 and then revisited it last fall in New York at Roundabout Theatre Company in a production we now bring home to San Francisco. Stoppard is one of those rare writers who views a script as an evolving document amenable to change. He is aware of the whole context of a production, how changes in worldview might affect an audience’s perception of a play, and how the benefit of time can reveal better ways to tell a story. On the occasion of this production, we worked closely together to reexamine the text and had the opportunity, among other things, to reconceive the ending of the play. We wanted to focus more on the relationship between the poet Flora Crewe and the painter Nirad Das than on the overall political situation of the British Raj. The new ending opened the door to beautiful new stage pictures and enables the entire company to come together at the end of the evening. What an unusual second chance! If you’d like to know more about our collaborative process with Tom Stoppard, do read the interview on page 12.

The Indian Ink experience has made me reflect more deeply on the nature of theatrical collaboration. No matter how excellent or finished a script seems to be, it is ultimately a blueprint. It doesn’t fully exist until it is filtered through the imaginations of other theater artists—directors, designers, choreographers, composers, actors. Thus, writing for the theater is wholly different from writing prose or poetry: it necessitates an imagination that leaves room for specifically theatrical solutions. Colm Toibin gave us free use of three different versions of Testament in order to develop our own production, and when he saw it, he reveled in the way this version of his text worked for Seana and for our vision. Similarly, I recently traveled to Paris to see the first production of my play Kinship, performed in French at the Théâtre de Paris, starring Isabelle Adjani. The production looked nothing like what I imagined when I wrote the play, but it was utterly convincing. The French artists had taken a new American play and filtered it through their own highly specific imaginations to create a contemporary No Exit, filled with mystery and suggestive stage pictures. It was abstract, while the script is more realistic, and overtly sensual where the script is more restrained; all the same, it had integrity and I learned so much about my own play from watching it. Collaborations like these make theater unique. When I think about my work with Stoppard, I recognize that he is so in command of his craft that he doesn’t have to control every production or rehearsal; he knows exactly when to step back and watch, and when to rewrite or reimage. Therefore, his work remains supple and surprising decades after its conception. That is a rare gift, and one worth learning from.

As always, it’s a pleasure to welcome so many new actors to A.C.T. with Indian Ink, as well as to welcome back Brenda Meaney (Venus in Fur), Roberta Maxwell (Phèdre), and Firdous Bamji (Anish Das in the 1999 iteration of Indian Ink); several members of the extraordinary M.F.A. Program class of 2015; and the wonderful Philip Mills, member of the M.F.A. class of 2010. January is M.F.A. Month at The Geary, so many of you may have seen pop-up performances by these young artists all over the building before tonight’s show. M.F.A. Month is one way of introducing an aspect of A.C.T. that is often invisible to our general audiences: the unique, high-caliber training that happens under our umbrella, from the students in our Young Conservatory to participants in our Studio A.C.T. and M.F.A. programs. Because we are constantly invested in the next generation, A.C.T.’s eyes are always on the future of theater and how we can contribute to its growth and evolution. We hope you’ll take a moment to get to know these young artists-in-training as they appear before you!

Meanwhile, work on The Strand Theater continues apace, and the intimate beauty of the space is starting to emerge. We are in the midst of a great deal of commissioning and development of new work for future seasons at The Strand, and we look forward to sharing all of it with you. This promises to be a year filled with adventure and new discoveries, and we are honored to have you with us for the journey. Enjoy Indian Ink!

Yours,

ABOUT THE PLAY

Indian Ink in a Different Key
A Dialogue between Carey Perloff and Tom Stoppard

Indian Ink is often called Tom Stoppard’s most romantic play, its warmth a stark contrast to the intellectual debates that mark his work. He agrees with that assessment: “There are no villains in it. It’s a very cozy play in many ways... I really enjoy its lack of radical fierceness.”

Indian Ink originally came about as a stage adaptation of Stoppard’s radio play, In the Native State. “I had this tiny notion that I could write a conversation between a poet and a painter,” he once recalled. “While the poet was having her portrait painted, she would be writing a poem about having her portrait painted. There would be this circular situation. That’s all I had.”

Although the seminal image for the play didn’t contain India, the country was always in Stoppard’s mind, given that he spent his early childhood in Darjeeling. In another interview, he said that he wanted to write about “the ethics of empire.” Whichever came first, the two ideas—empire and the circular relationship between painter and poet—coalesced in Indian Ink, which premiered in London at the Aldwych Theatre in February 1995 and had its American premiere at A.C.T. in 1999.

When A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff was invited to revisit Indian Ink at New York’s Roundabout Theatre Company this past fall, she says, “The first thing Tom and I did was sit down for a day at his dining room table in London and slowly work through the play again.” The new version is a testament to the longstanding collaboration between A.C.T. and Stoppard, and contains a multitude of new elements—improvements in the visual storytelling, more clearly delineated plot lines, and a greater emphasis on the cross-cultural love story at the center of the play.
The following exchange is from a conversation that took place between Carey Perloff and Tom Stoppard on October 20, 2014, via phone.

Perloff: Let’s talk about when we first knew we were going to do Indian Ink again, what we remember from doing it 15 years ago in San Francisco, and what we felt we wanted to revisit.

Stoppard: In 1999 my absolute first thought about approaching the script was: I couldn’t understand how one was going to design it. But somehow you managed to crack that one, so that was all very reassuring! I’m sure this is probably in hindsight, but I think of it as being a trouble-free experience in my life. I remember being at the tech rehearsal and loving the way it felt and looked and sounded.

Perloff: So then, in 2013, we sat down together and reworked the play. We made cuts, reordered, and worked on the ending.

Stoppard: I’d always felt conflicted about the original ending of Indian Ink. On the one hand, I loved quoting Emily Eden, because it contextualized the story of Flora Crewe historically. And I thought that was welcome and desirable.

On the other hand, I always felt a loss in the sense that the last voice you heard in the play was a recorded voice. Although it was Flora’s voice, it didn’t feel right for the actor to actually speak that long paragraph of Emily Eden. So it’s always been a bit of a compromise, and in the end, I went along with it for the sake of that very last sentence, Emily Eden’s quote: “I sometimes wonder they do not cut all our heads off and say nothing more about it.” When we got to New York all these years later, the idea was to not end the play politically, but to end it emotionally and romantically.

Perloff: In New York last fall, the response to the play was passionate in a stronger way than it was here in 1999, and I think that’s because of this ending. I think this ending is so satisfying because the audience gets to experience the ghosts of everyone that Flora has touched on this journey. All of it comes back together in that one letter.

Stoppard: Which raises the question for me: when and whether I should adjust the text in the future.

Perloff: Isn’t it time for this play to have another London production? It seems to me that we’ve learned so much about the play and what kind of space it fits into. I think if there’s another reprinting, you should do a new text.

Stoppard: If there were a London revival, I would use this version as a useful occasion for a new edition.

Perloff: I think this version is the discovery, and that’s why they’ve had such a great run of it in New York. It’s your work in such a different key. People are so thrilled to discover it, as if for the first time.

Perloff: When we finished in San Francisco in 1999, Jean Stapleton, who played Eleanor, said to me that her only regret was that the two sisters never got to be onstage together. So that was such a happy discovery. When Flora comes out and begins her final letter, saying, “Darling, that’s all from Jummapur,” and Eleanor looks at her, those two sisters can meet. That is worth a lot for an audience.

Stoppard: I must say, this was a very good opportunity to actually carve away at the script, partly because some of the lessons and allusions don’t really land in the United States. I think the cuts were helpful.

Perloff: We took out a lot of references and research the play didn’t need. But then, there were a couple we found that we loved.

Stoppard: Altogether, although it took a while, it ended up as what we wished, a relaunch of your original production in San Francisco. It could hardly have ended better.

Perloff: I think the ending makes an enormous difference in actually finishing the relationship between Flora and Das, which is so complicated. I also think time has caught up with this play in a good way. Today, the notion of cross-cultural love affairs, and the complexity with which colonized peoples inevitably end up taking on the characteristics of their colonizers, are things we actually know about. You were prescient there. In the 15 years since it was done, the relationship between Flora and Das has become much more interesting and complex, because these ideas are more in the world than they were then.

Stoppard: Which raises the question for me: when and whether I should adjust the text in the future.

Perloff: Isn’t it time for this play to have another London production? It seems to me that we’ve learned so much about the play and what kind of space it fits into. I think if there’s another reprinting, you should do a new text.

Stoppard: If there were a London revival, I would use this version as a useful occasion for a new edition.

Perloff: I think this version is the discovery, and that’s why they’ve had such a great run of it in New York. It’s your work in such a different key. People are so thrilled to discover it, as if for the first time.
“Poetry is a sentence whose soul is rasa.”
—Nirad Das in Indian Ink, by Tom Stoppard

RASA IS AN AESTHETIC THEORY FIRST
developed by Hindu sages and artists around the third century CE. The Sanskrit word literally translates to “taste” or “essence.” Aside from describing the overall mood or flavor of a work of art, rasa refers to the unique experience that arises from the relationships among audience, creator, and artwork.

The nature of art and spectatorship is at the center of Indian Ink. Rasa, explained to Flora by Das as the “juice” in a work of art, also describes the emotion that results from a viewer’s experience of art that is powerful and evocative. Das says it is “what you must feel when you see a painting, or hear music; it is the emotion which the artist must arouse in you.” This experience, Das admits, is not inherent in the work of art; it is something that is only triggered by the relationship between spectator and creator.

The combination of skilled production by the artist and the emotions inspired in the spectator creates the full experience of rasa. Because rasa can’t be defined in words alone, achieving it is a complex task. Some poets and philosophers believed that artists achieve rasa only when they infuse their art with unabashed emotion. Moreover, the art contains rasa only if audiences are moved by the art without their personal experiences getting in the way. For example, a spectator’s ability to deeply feel emotions that aren’t necessarily tied to her personal history is proof that rasa has been evoked.

French Surrealist author and translator René Daumal wrote of an equation essential to the creation of rasa: an observer, combined with an emotionally potent work of art, creates an equal communion between artist and spectator. In other words, the person observing and experiencing the art is just as integral to rasa as the one creating the art.

The first writings on rasa were compiled in the Natya shastra, written between 200 BCE and 200 CE by a Hindu poet-sage named Bharata. Bharata describes eight different types of rasa: sringara (erotic), hasya (comic), karuna (pathetic), raandra (furious), vira (heroic), bhaayanaka (terrible), bibhatsa (odious), and adbhuta (marvelous). Each of these sentiments... is paired with a color scheme. The tenth-century philosopher Abhinavagupta added a ninth rasa: shanta (quiescent).

Rasa is rooted as much in the body as it is in the mind. In fact, many treatises on rasa compare the act of viewing art to the act of eating. A chef can follow the recipe exactly as written, but if the diner does not enjoy the food, it was not a good meal. Rasa implies a similar relationship between artist and audience; if a spectator doesn’t have an immediate visceral reaction, the art doesn’t contain rasa.

The primary rasa of the three paintings described in Indian Ink is shringara, associated with eroticism. Shringara is commonly paired with the hue shyama (blue-black). Krishna, an incarnation of the Hindu god Vishnu and the main character in twelfth-century poet Jayadeva’s erotic love poem the Gita gowinda, is often associated with shringara and is famously depicted with blue skin. Shringara is also known as as the supreme rasa of kama (pleasure) and is believed to lead to divine bliss. Kama was personified as the Hindu god of love, a representation of cosmic desire and the creative impulse. Depicted as a handsome youth attended by heavenly nymphs and armed with a bow of sugarcane, he is not unlike Eros, the Greek god of physical desire.

Das explains shringara by quoting the Hindu master of poetics Viswanatha: “Shringara requires, naturally, a lover and his loved one, who may be a courtesan if she is sincerely enamoured, and it is aroused by, for example, the moon, the scent of sandalwood, or being in an empty house.” The lover and the beloved also symbolize the participants of rasa: the artist and the spectator.

The tradition of Indian art, including poetry, painting, and sculpture, is soaked in shringara and derives inspiration from elements of nature, including flowers, gardens, and vibrant colors. In Indian Ink, Stoppard hints at the essence of shringara with Flora’s poem: “Heat collects and holds as a pearl at my throat, / lets go and slides like a tongue-tip down a Modigliani, / spills into the delta, now in the salt-lick, / lost in the mangroves and in the airless moisture, / a seed-pearl returning to the oyster.” Flora instinctively associates the Indian landscape with her own creative and sexual freedom. When she learns of the god Krishna’s love affair with the beautiful mortal herdswoman Radha, she asks, “Were Krishna and Radha punished in the story?” Das replies, “What for?” and Flora responds, “I should have come here years ago.”

In the course of the play, Flora’s experience of rasa (especially shringara) transforms from an intellectual to a physical and emotional response. This is palpable in Flora’s words: “Perhaps my soul will stay behind as a smudge of paint on paper, as if I’d always been here.” Indian Ink reveals the power of rasa as a communion between artist and observer that is timeless and direct.

1600s–1700s
Due to Queen Elizabeth I’s political and social reforms, Britain recovers from a century of religious and political infighting, crippling poverty, and virulent disease. Now that they have the means, Britons begin to desire items of luxury, which they find in India, a comparatively vibrant and wealthy region. In 1600, Elizabeth charters the British East India Company to control all commerce between Britain and India.

Upon arriving on the subcontinent, the British find that, despite their superficial differences, they get along with the natives surprisingly well. This amicability falters when Charles II gives the East India Company the right to create laws, impose taxes, and conquer Indian territories as its own.

In India, the British build railroads, establish post and telegraph services, and introduce educational reforms that, among other things, make English the national language—all while believing they are helping a “savage” country become “civilized.”

Through improved education, Indians learn about Western concepts of democracy and justice, and gradually understand that these rights do not apply to them. This newfound awareness leads to an uprising in 1857, when a group of Indian soldiers rebels against British rule.

In response, the British enforce their control by creating a government called the British Raj (raē being Hindi for “rule”). Two-thirds of India becomes official British territory. The remaining third is made up of “native states,” where already-established Indian princes are able to maintain control as long as they are compliant with the Raj.
1914–18 (World War I)
Many Indian nationalists encourage passionate participation in the British war effort, hoping it will prove their readiness for independence, but not all are so cooperative. The British pass laws to prevent anti-Raj activity during wartime, and then extend them after the war is over.

1919–22
Postwar India, which is recovering from a famine, the Spanish influenza epidemic, and a war-ravished economy, does not react well to the extension of wartime laws (called the Rowlatt Bills). Protest is inevitable, and the leader in this case is Mohandas Gandhi, a British-educated lawyer with a philosophy of nonviolent protest called satyagraha. To protest the Rowlatt Bills, Gandhi calls for a nationwide day of nonviolent fasting and prayer, but riots break out. In the city of Amritsar, British officials ban all public gatherings, which citizens do not heed. The British open fire on a peaceful celebration, killing 379 people and wounding 1,500. The brutality demonstrated by the British radicalizes the Indian National Congress around the issue of independence.

In the years following Amritsar, the Muslim minority of India realizes it will never have equal representation in the democracy Congress wants after independence; thus, the idea of a separate Muslim nation, to be called Pakistan, arises. Hindus, meanwhile, fear that a divided independent India is an India doomed to fail.

In an attempt to repair the relationship between Muslims and Hindus, Gandhi begins a new satyagraha campaign against the Raj, this time focusing on the salt tax imposed by the British. The 1930 Salt March brings international recognition to India’s struggle for independence, but does not heal the rift between Muslims and Hindus.

Meanwhile, Britain begins making small steps toward granting India independence. The 1935 Government of India Act allows autonomy to some Indian provinces, which Britain can suspend at any time.

1939–45 (World War II)
In August 1942, Congress passes the “Quit India” resolution, calling for Britain’s immediate withdrawal. The campaign is unsuccessful due to wartime constraints, but in 1945 the British postwar economy renders the Raj unsustainable. Plans for Indian independence begin.

Hindu, Muslim, and British leaders fail to reach a compromise at a conference in 1946, and the All-India Muslim League calls for protests. In Calcutta, a gathering of thousands in support of Pakistan turns violent; around five thousand people are killed over three days. British officials do not intervene.

The Calcutta riots instill a sense of urgency on all sides. Britain appoints Lord Mountbatten as viceroy and announces a deadline for Indian independence: June 1948. Due to mounting violence and Mountbatten’s persuasion, Congress reluctantly accepts partition.

In June 1947, the future of the country is announced: provinces with a Hindu majority will become India, and provinces with a Muslim majority will become Pakistan.

The only exceptions are the provinces of Bengal and the Punjab, which will be divided in half. A great deal of care should go into this division, but this is impossible, because Mountbatten moves the deadline for independence to August 15, 1947—almost a year earlier than originally announced.

“The period of foreign rule has been likened to a love affair between a couple whom unexpected circumstances had thrown together.”

Mountbatten calls in Sir Cyril Radcliffe, a London barrister, to split up Bengal and the Punjab. Radcliffe doesn’t have any cultural context, so the borders he creates take into account mechanical matters instead of social complexities. He finishes the new map on August 9, 1947. East and West Pakistan are divided by 725 miles of India. Mountbatten foresees controversy and elects to keep his map a secret until after August 15.

Following Independence Day, chaos reigns as a total of 15 million people migrate and an estimated one million die from violence and disease. Many critics believe that if Britain’s retreat from India had not been so rushed, a peaceful migration could have been orchestrated.

Historian Lawrence James writes, “The period of foreign rule has been likened to a love affair between a couple whom unexpected circumstances had thrown together.” Indeed, like lovers recalling a past liaison, some remember the Raj with fond nostalgia while others do so with bitter resentment—but it is undeniable that the centuries-long relationship between Britain and India changed both countries forever.

“IF YOU HAVE YOUNG ACTORS, YOU NEED the best playwrights,” says A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC) Director Craig Slaight. A Stone’s Throw, by Scottish playwright J. C. Marshall, is the next in a long line of work commissioned by A.C.T.’s Grace Magill New Plays Program, which has been supporting theater written specifically for our young actors since 1989.

A Stone’s Throw tells the thrilling story of the quirky and ambitious inhabitants of a tiny island in the Arctic Ocean. When they are denied access to an abandoned neighboring island by the superpower that owns it, revolution erupts. With sincerity and humor, this new play explores cultural identity, history, and what it means to live in a place ignored by the world.

Marshall explains that the idea for this unique play arose from political events in the summer of 2014, when citizens debated whether or not Scotland should become independent of the United Kingdom. With revolution and empire on her mind, Marshall researched countries and settlements whose citizens’ national and ethnic identities are affected by unusual circumstances. “There are so many fascinating examples and surreal geographical anomalies,” she says. “For example, can someone be an ‘Antarctican’? Is there anywhere on Earth claimed by nobody?”

The setting for A Stone’s Throw is the Diomede Islands in the Bering Strait. “The islands are perfectly surreal: their identity has vacillated between two superpowers, and they are divided by the International Date Line,” explains Marshall. “We use time and space to understand everything, but if you lived there, how would you know who you really were?”

Select YC students had the exciting opportunity to workshop A Stone’s Throw with Marshall last summer at Aberdeen Performing Arts in Scotland. Marshall finds the workshop process invaluable. “I’m not one of those playwrights who turns up with everything written in stone,” she says. “If there are talented minds in the room, I’m going to use them.”

Luckily, she found those minds in our YC actors. “I was so impressed and delighted by the abilities of the A.C.T. students,” she recalls. “They were consummate professionals from the get-go.” These young artists are already hard at work learning their lines and rehearsing A Stone’s Throw. Come see this thrilling play and support the stars of tomorrow!

A provocative new play about identity, democracy, and ice golf
Tomorrow Island is a tiny pebble in the freezing polar sea of the North. Every year the eccentric islanders dig an ice runway so the supply plane can land. One day they decide enough is enough. There’s a perfectly decent concrete runway on the abandoned island next door. All they need to do to use it is declare war on one of the world’s greatest superpowers.

THE STRAND: ECO-FRIENDLY \textit{LEED}-ERS IN OUR DEVELOPING CITY

\textit{By Shannon Stockwell & Anna Woodruff}

“OUR RENOVATION MAINTAINS ELEMENTS OF THE STRAND’S FASCINATING HISTORY WHILE INCORPORATING ELEMENTS THAT MAKE OUR NEW SPACE COMPLETELY MODERN AND EFFICIENT.”
A.C.T.'s Strand Theater, opening in spring 2015, will be a home for boundary-pushing productions and projects. From the intimate 285-seat proscenium to the multipurpose Reuff Room, our renovation of the building perfectly supports the versatility of our vision. But The Strand won't be just audience-friendly; it will be environmentally friendly, as well, because A.C.T. has elected to renovate our new theater in compliance with Leadership in Energy & Environmental Design (LEED) certification.

San Francisco requires all new construction projects to be LEED-certified, making our city home to some of the greenest buildings in the country. Just two years ago, San Francisco had nearly 700 LEED-certified buildings, and 1,261 more registered projects on the horizon.

A.C.T. General Manager Don-Scott Cooper says, “A.C.T. is constantly considering how we fit into the global landscape. We want The Strand Theater to have a completely positive impact, both on San Francisco's vibrant cultural community and on the environment at large.”

A.C.T. is committed to helping our environment, and those heading our ambitious renovation know that LEED certification is the best way to ensure that we stay true to that promise. This decision will impact The Strand’s renovation every step of the way, from the prevention of pollution during construction to reduced water use. Whether they are seeing a groundbreaking show or visiting our chic café, all of our patrons will be able to witness firsthand the impact of LEED certification, including our energy-efficient heating and lighting systems, low chemical paints, low-flow toilets, and recycling and compost bins throughout the theater.

The impact of LEED certification is both immediate and enduring. These standards will ensure sustainable operations through the years, so The Strand can be a part of the Market Street scene for a long time to come. “Just like Market Street, our renovation represents an exciting intersection of generations,” says Cooper. “It maintains The Strand’s fascinating history while incorporating elements that make our new space completely modern and efficient.”

CELEBRATING A.C.T.’S BUDDING STARS
M.F.A. MONTH
by Nirmala Nataraj

THE A.C.T. COMMUNITY EXTENDS WELL BEYOND
The Geary stage to our exciting training programs—and the faculty of A.C.T.’s top-ranked Master of Fine Arts Program are eager to let audience members in on our students’ talent. January is M.F.A. Month, which offers ticket holders a way to directly connect with the budding luminaries who help keep A.C.T.’s creative spirit alive.

M.F.A. Month features M.F.A. Variety, a dynamic and lively performance presented by our upcoming stars. M.F.A. Variety, now in its second year, showcases the incredible work and rigorous training (from Shakespeare monologues to improvisation and contemporary work) of our M.F.A. Program, which is consistently ranked among the top five actor training programs in the nation. “This is a chance for audiences to familiarize themselves with our world-class program and for students to display their range of skills,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith.

There are two 30-minute versions of the show, each containing five to seven short pieces, which audiences can catch prior to evening mainstage performances at The Geary. The songs, skits, and monologues are performed by students at all levels of our three-year training program. A.C.T. Resident Artist Domenique Lozano, along with Smith and other faculty, visits classes throughout the fall semester, on the lookout for ideal stage acts. Lozano curates the final pieces for M.F.A. Variety. “We look for a variety of material: comedic, serious, physical, textual, playful, musical,” says Lozano. “We pick work that allows individual students to shine with their talents.” On performance nights, some M.F.A. Program actors also assume roles as buskers in the box office and lobby, which puts immediate smiles on the faces of passersby.

M.F.A. Variety gives audiences the chance to see our students in an intimate environment before they move on to higher-visibility platforms. Last year’s M.F.A. Variety participants included alumni who went on to stages and screens across the country. Nemuna Ceesay was seen in two shows at California Shakespeare Theater, Lateefah Holder recently appeared on HBO’s Getting On, and York Walker performed at the Denver Center for the Performing Arts. In A.C.T.’s production of Indian Ink, audiences will also recognize third-year students Danielle Frimer (Nell) and Glenn Stott (Eric).

With the spring opening of A.C.T.’s Strand Theater, Smith hopes to expand the offerings of M.F.A. Month in order to reach a broader public. She says, “These are opportunities to put a face on the M.F.A. Program for the Geary-going public, and we want to continue finding new ways to do so.”

Ticket holders can catch M.F.A. Variety Tuesday through Friday evenings, January 13–31, at The Geary Theater’s fifth-floor cabaret space, The Garret. Doors open one hour before Indian Ink, and the show runs 30 minutes. Grab a drink and prepare to be thoroughly entertained!
AN IMPORTANT ASPECT OF BEING A STUDENT in A.C.T.’s world-class Master of Fine Arts Program is the chance to be paired with a “trustee host.” This three-year relationship pairs a member of A.C.T.’s Board of Trustees with an M.F.A. Program student. The relationship offers each student mentorship and support throughout his or her career at A.C.T., while giving our trustees a front-row seat to the young artist’s personal and professional development.

From taking students out to meals and cultural events to watching their productions and meeting their families, this program helps forge a bond that is unique and long-lasting.

Our M.F.A. Program students hail from as near as Oakland and Palo Alto to as far as Kampala, Uganda, and Johannesburg, South Africa. A trustee host’s personal involvement is an important factor in making our students feel welcome. Third-year student Ben Quinn remembers accompanying his trustee host, Marilee Gardner, to a new play festival in the South Bay one weekend. “The experience made me feel that, despite the great distance between me and my family in Ohio, I had a home in the Bay Area,” he recalls.

As students commence their training, the most gratifying experience for many trustee hosts is the “aha” moment that occurs when a student comes into his or her own as an actor. “You see that they truly become the character and have a style and way of being that is theirs alone,” says Abby Sadin Schnair, a trustee since 2007.

Dianne Hoge, a trustee since 2005, says that the close involvement in a student’s career is a gift that keeps on giving, as it lets trustees see what happens behind the scenes. “You are involved in their three-year program here at A.C.T., and then you get to follow their careers and watch them spread their wings,” says Hoge, who traveled to Uganda last summer to see third-year students Kemiyoondo Coutinho and Stefanée Martin perform in a play about HIV/AIDS at the National Theatre in Kampala, as part of an arts festival founded by Coutinho.

First-year student Alexa Erbach found her relationship with her trustee host, Sally Rosenblatt, especially valuable because it increased her awareness of those who help shape and support the A.C.T. community. “I believe it is crucial to be an informed artist, one who’s an integral part of the community. My trustee host and I both have a shared love of the arts, and we are both cogs that help make this theater run,” says Erbach.

Heartfelt connection to the A.C.T. community also extends beyond a student’s three years of training. Recent M.F.A. Program graduate Lateefah Holder appreciates the encouragement that she received from trustees, noting that the love and support have continued well after her May 2014 graduation. “I was lucky enough to have a few amazing trustees take me under their wings over the years, and they are still a part of my life. They remind you that they are always here for you.”
A.C.T. is grateful to all of our founding supporters who have contributed to the Strand Theater campaign.

IMPACT CREATIVITY

Impact Creativity is an urgent call to action to save theater education programs in 19 of our largest cities. Impact Creativity brings together theaters, arts education experts, and individuals to help over 500,000 children and youth, most of them disadvantaged, succeed through the arts by sustaining the theater arts education programs threatened by today’s fiscal climate. For more information on how “theater education changes lives,” please visit: www.impactcreativity.org.

CAREY PERLOFF

(Director, A.C.T. Artistic Director) is celebrating her 23rd season as artistic director of A.C.T., where she most recently directed the highly acclaimed Testament, by novelist and playwright Colm Toibín. This past fall, she staged the New York premiere of Tom Stoppard’s Indian Ink at Roundabout Theatre Company before bringing the show to A.C.T. Recent A.C.T. productions also include Underneath the Lintel, Arcadia, Elektra (coproduced by the Getty Villa in Malibu), Endgame and Play, Scooched, The Homecoming, Tosca Café (cocreated with choreographer Val Caniparoli; toured Canada), and Racine’s Phèdre in a coproduction with the Stratford Festival. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has also directed for A.C.T. José Rivera’s Boleros for the Disenchanted; the world premieres of Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War (A.C.T. commission) and her own adaptation (with Paul Walsh) of A Christmas Carol; the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love and Indian Ink, and Harold Pinter’s Celebration; A.C.T.—commissioned translations/adaptations of Hecuba, The Misantrope, Enrico IV, Mary Stuart, Uncle Vanya, A Mother, and The Voysey Inheritance (adapted by David Mamet); the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy; and major revivals of Tis Pity She’s a Whore, The Government Inspector, Happy End (including a critically acclaimed cast album recording), A Doll’s House, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Threepenny Opera, Old Times, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditors, The Room, Home, The Tempest, and Stoppard’s Rock ‘n’ Roll, Travesties, The Real Thing, and Night and Day. Perloff’s work for A.C.T. also includes Marie Ndiaye’s Hilda, the world premieres of Marc Blitzstein’s No for an Answer and David Lang/Mac Wellman’s The Difficulty of Crossing a Field, and the West Coast premiere of her own play The Colossus of Rhodes (Susan Smith Blackburn Award finalist).

Perloff is also an award-winning playwright. Her play Kinship was developed at the Perry-Mansfield New Play Festival and at New York Stage and Film (2013), and premiered at the Théâtre de Paris this October in a production starring Isabelle Adjani and Niels Schneider. Waiting for the Flood has received workshops at A.C.T., New York Stage and Film, and Roundabout Theatre. Higher was developed at New York Stage and Film, won the 2011 Blanche and Irving Laurie Foundation Theatre Visions Fund Award, and received its world premiere in February 2012 in San Francisco. Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre, was coproduced by A.C.T. and the Magic Theatre, and is published by Dramatists Play Service. The Colossus of Rhodes was workshopped at the O’Neill National Playwrights Conference, premiered at Lucille Lortel’s White Barn Theatre, and was produced at A.C.T. in 2003.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1988 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A recipient of France’s Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and the National Corporate Theatre Fund’s 2007 Artistic Achievement Award, Perloff received a B.A. Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years, and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. Perloff is on the board of the Hopemount Artist Retreat in Sarasota, Florida, and is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas. Perloff is the author of the forthcoming book Beautiful Chaos: A Life in the Theater (City Lights, February 2015).

MELISSA SMITH

(Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two-to three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing. She has also taught and directed in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught introductory, intermediate, and advanced acting. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages at various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., California Shakespeare Theater, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep; and in England at the Barbican Theater (London) and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a B.A. from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from Yale School of Drama.

ELLEN RICHARD

(Executive Director) joined A.C.T. in 2010. Since then she has been responsible for overseeing the acquisition, design, and construction of The Strand Theater, A.C.T.’s new second stage. She also brought A.C.T.’s black-box Costume Shop Theater to life and created the space-sharing initiative that allows smaller nonprofit groups to use that venue at no cost and with technical support provided by A.C.T. She conceptualized the Conservatory’s new San Francisco Semester, an accredited program for undergraduates studying away from their home universities. Richard is a champion of A.C.T.’s community education programs and envisioned a touring platform for outreach called Stage Coach, which launches this fall through the support of The James Irvine Foundation. She served previously as executive director of off-Broadway’s Second Stage Theatre, where she was responsible for the purchase of the Helen Hayes Theatre and for substantial growth in income. From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. By the time she departed as managing director, Roundabout had been transformed from a small nonprofit on the verge of bankruptcy into one of the country’s most successful theater companies of its kind. Producer of more than 125 shows at Roundabout, she is the recipient of six Tony Awards, for Cabaret, A View from the Bridge, Side Man, Nine, Assassins, and Glengarry Glen Ross. She also oversaw the redesign and construction of three of Roundabout’s stages—Studio 54, the American Airlines Theatre, and the Harold and Miriam Steinberg Center for Theatre—and supervised the creation of Cabaret’s environmental Kit Kat Klub. Prior to Roundabout, Richard served in management positions at Westport Country Playhouse, Stamford Center for the Arts, The Hartman Theatre, and Atlas Scenic Studio. She began her career working as a stagehand, sound designer, and scenic artist assistant. Richard currently serves on the board of Theatre Communications Group.
