American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award-winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. We reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

Rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful, historic Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 23-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and “locavore” theater—theater made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

A.C.T.’s 46-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, and our intensive Summer Training Congress attracts enthusiasts from around the world. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19, led by 25-year veteran Craig Slaight, and Studio A.C.T., our expansive course of study for adults. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as stages and screens across the country.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 10,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which has brought tens of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater, the renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, and the launch of our mobile Stage Coach initiative, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.
In these two tales about the rich history of Filipino American life in the Bay Area, adapted from the acclaimed collection of short stories by San Francisco author Lysley Tenorio, characters strive for personal transformations that are wonderfully moving and distinctly theatrical. The infamous headline-making eviction of Filipino residents from San Francisco’s International Hotel in the 1970s sets the background for Philip Kan Gotanda’s stirring Remember the I-Hotel. Sean San José’s Presenting . . . the Monstress! moves us from the streets of Manila to San Francisco, where a B-movie director has been seduced by the opportunity to work with a shady American filmmaker.

Together, the two pieces that comprise Monstress explore the resilience of a community struggling to find home on the ever-shifting sands of the American dream.

"TENORIO’S CHARACTERS ARE ZANY, WITTY, AND BEAUTIFULLY DRAWN."

Eugene O’Neill’s passionate coming-of-age classic is a tender portrait of a sensitive teenage poet whose experience of first love leads him into the raptures of romantic poetry and the pain of heartbreak. As the Miller clan prepares for its Fourth of July celebrations, the idealistic, literature-quoting Richard is struggling with what it means to be young and in love. As Richard’s attempts to sow his wild oats intersect with small-town gossip, hilarious misunderstandings ensue. Full of the vibrant nostalgia of first love and other youthful discoveries, Ah, Wilderness! is a humorous portrait of a family’s attempts to stay united in the midst of growing pains, as well as “a valentine to hearty turn-of-the-twentieth-century American life” (Washington Post).

Dear Friends,

Welcome to A.C.T.’s 2015–16 season, and to the wild world of Stephen Adly Guirgis’s Between Riverside and Crazy. Guirgis is one of America’s most distinctive theatrical voices. From Our Lady of 121st Street to *The Motherf*ck*r with the Hat*, he has lit up the stage with hard-hitting characters, rich language, and hilarious wit. For me, Riverside is particularly resonant, as it deals with so many issues we are facing at the moment in the Bay Area and beyond: the displacement of long-time residents, the mistrust of the police in a racially charged world, the “boomerang” generation of children coming back to live in their parents’ homes, and the impact of class on people’s expectations of life. (There is also a brilliant meditation on the health benefits of a breakfast of almonds versus Ring Dings, which is worth the price of admission on its own!)

The play centers around a pugnacious patriarch who tries to steer his offspring and other hangers-on toward a better life, while remaining resolutely in denial about his own past behavior. It’s a glorious role, and one that we are profoundly lucky to have Carl Lumbly tackle for us on the Geary stage, alongside a powerful company under the direction of Irene Lewis, who has done such memorable work at A.C.T. with David Mamet’s Race and George F. Walker’s Dead Metaphor. A suspenseful dark comedy that constantly surprises its viewers, Riverside provides a powerful, highly entertaining, and timely launch to a new season of theater at A.C.T.

While Between Riverside and Crazy plays at The Geary, The Strand will premiere Monstress, a remarkable new project that pairs two short plays based on the stories of Filipino American writer Lysley Tenorio. Remember the I-Hotel, a play by Philip Kan Gotanda adapted from Tenorio’s story entitled “Save the I-Hotel,” centers around a well-known moment of displacement in San Francisco history, when dozens of Filipino Americans were evicted from the International Hotel on Kearny Street in the 1970s in order to make way for a redevelopment project. Just as Pops is threatened with eviction from his Riverside Drive apartment in Guirgis’s play, two elderly Filipino men who have been friends for decades are forced to leave their home in Remember the I-Hotel. On their last night as residents, they recall all those years ago when they met, danced, survived, and tried to navigate the immigrant experience in San Francisco.

We have been in ongoing dialogue with the Filipino community in the Bay Area, from Kularts to the Manilatown Heritage Foundation, as we have developed Monstress, a production filled with music, movement, longing, and love. We very much look forward to sharing this world premiere with you, which was commissioned as part of our New Strands play development initiative.

Opening The Strand has been a long-held dream of ours, and we have much in store for you there, from the world premiere of Monstress this month, to the blues-infused musical The Unfortunates next winter, to readings and guest companies throughout the year. Upstairs in The Rueff, we are delighted to be hosting San Francisco Playhouse, Magic Theatre, and Campo Santo Theatre Company this season, in addition to the vibrant work of students from our Master of Fine Arts Program, Young Conservatory, and Education & Community Programs. And this is only the beginning. Having multiple spaces will allow us to program the right work in the right venue, offer us enormous flexibility in terms of creating a schedule, and will allow you, our patrons, to have distinctive theatrical experiences each time you come to an A.C.T. production. In addition to the 283-seat Toni Rembe Theater and the 140-seat Rueff, The Strand Lobby is its own unique performance space, and we hope to fill it with live music and other events throughout the year. With the arrival of The Strand, A.C.T. is poised to expand its educational programs and community outreach (including the work of our wonderful community participatory theater program, Stage Coach) in thrilling new ways, and we hope you’ll have a chance to experience some of it in action. As we launch this new space, feedback is invaluable, so please share your thoughts, ideas, and concerns about The Strand by calling my hotline at 415.439.2459.

Meanwhile, welcome to Between Riverside and Crazy, and to great new adventures ahead! We have so many fascinating projects ahead, including the return of A.C.T. favorite David Strathairn next spring. Chester Bailey, the play in which Strathairn will star, will run for only three weeks at The Strand in June, and subscribers will have the first chance to buy tickets. If you aren’t yet a subscriber, we hope you will consider signing up now!

RIGHT DOWN THE BLOCK FROM RIVERSIDE

AN INTERVIEW WITH DIRECTOR IRENE LEWIS

BY | DAN RUBIN
You were last at A.C.T. with Dead Metaphor, a play about a sniper who comes home and is struggling to find work. It is a very different kind of play from Between Riverside and Crazy, but they aren’t without their similarities.

There is a class connection between the two, but the former is white and the latter black and Nuyorican [New York/Puerto Rican]. When Carey [Perloff, A.C.T.’s artistic director] asked me to direct Riverside, I told her, “This is my last street play for you.” . . . But the language in Riverside is heightened. Guirgis is a poet. His dialogue isn’t scratch-and-mumble naturalism. It’s more of a poetic realism, like the work of August Wilson. It’s very beautiful to listen to— at least it is to my ear. It’s the kind of play that I had no idea how funny it was until I heard it. You actually have to be very careful with this kind of material. There is great dignity to all of these people. My background tends to make me sensitive to that.

Pops was a black cop who was shot by a white cop. What do you think this play can contribute to the ongoing conversation about race and policing that is going on nationally right now?

I don’t know if “conversation” accomplishes anything. Obama’s eulogy for Clementa Pinckney, the pastor in South Carolina, was really extraordinary. [Pinckney was murdered with eight other members of his Mother Emmanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in a racially motivated massacre in June 2015.] It was about the history of race in this country, and it was really refreshing to hear him speak about it. It is so complex and so deeply rooted that I don’t know what any single play could do. Riverside just tells the story of one man’s journey, and I don’t know that it is much bigger than that. Miscommunication and the lack of understanding between races plays a part in this story. But how “black” this play is will be my education in the rehearsal room from the African American actors in the cast.

It may not be a show about race, but do you think it’s a play about police?

I’ve got relatives who are cops. The job is hard, and I’m glad that Pops comes out and says that when you do this job, you become exactly what you are looking at every day. What [the cops in Riverside] say about themselves is really refreshing.

Talk to me about your love for the rehearsal room.

I love to be in the rehearsal room, and it took me many years to build up the confidence to try anything when I’m in it. For many people, it is the best part of doing a play. I thrive on collaboration. If you create an atmosphere where anything goes, it is an artistically dangerous room, but the director ultimately gets to pick and choose from a lot of choices, because he or she has allowed for all of them to emerge. The play is only going to be as good as the talent that is in that room.

Riverside is set near where you live in New York. What can you tell us about the area?

The city is so different from what it was when I was growing up. That apartment in the play is worth so much money, oh my god. I know, because I’ve been looking for one! I’m on West End Avenue, right down the block from Riverside. There are millionaires in my building. The gentrification that is taking place now is mind-boggling and a little depressing. Gone are the working-class people. And the poor—well, that’s another story altogether.
I try to write about things that keep me up at night,” says playwright Stephen Adly Guirgis. Although his plays have a humorous exterior, populated with characters who want snack cakes and cash, a careful observer will find that Guirgis’s insomnia is provoked by some pretty heavy subjects.

By the time Guirgis’s Between Riverside and Crazy won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 2015, he had already amassed an impressive body of work. Each play is unique, but there is a strong thematic throughline. At their heart, his characters are dreamers, always promising redemption, seeking forgiveness, and claiming that they are going to make better lives for themselves—but eventually falling back on old habits and vices. The audience nevertheless feels for these victims of circumstance, and even when Guirgis’s characters seem truly repulsive, we often can’t help but root for or sympathize with them.
DEN OF THIEVES (1996)
Recovering thieves Maggie and Paul are tempted to pull off one final heist. What is supposed to be an easy job goes awry when it turns out the money belongs to the Mafia, and they must fight for their lives in this farcical one-act play.

IN ARABIA, WE’D ALL BE KINGS (1999)
Centered around a bar in a rapidly changing neighborhood in Manhattan, a group of characters tries to make their lives better despite life, love, and the criminal justice system keeping them down.

Angel Cruz, who murdered a cult leader, is in protective custody at Riker’s Island Prison. The only other prisoner with him is Lucius Jenkins, a serial killer who has found God and attempts to save Angel.

OUR LADY OF 121ST STREET (2003)
A motley crew of characters gathers in Manhattan to mourn the death of Sister Rose, a beloved neighborhood community leader. There’s just one problem: her corpse has gone missing. While the police conduct an investigation, the mourners must come to terms with their past transgressions against each other.

THE LAST DAYS OF JUDAS ISCARIOT (2005)
The infamous Judas Iscariot is put on trial for his role in the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. Among those called for testimony are Mother Teresa, Caiaphus, Saint Monica, Sigmund Freud, and Satan in this street-smart and philosophical take on court-room drama.

THE LITTLE FLOWER OF EAST ORANGE (2008)
An elderly woman who can’t remember who she is or where she lives arrives in the emergency room of a hospital in the Bronx. Once her doctors figure out her identity, they notify her children, who slowly learn the real reason behind her hospitalization.

THE MOTHERF*CKER WITH THE HAT (2011)
After finding an unfamiliar hat in his girlfriend’s bedroom, recently paroled Jackie realizes it belongs to someone his girlfriend is sleeping with, and he becomes obsessed with finding the owner of the headwear.

Guirgis has been praised for his use of language. Lighting and Sound America calls him “our new reigning poet of the obscene,” while the New York Times writes that his plays possess “an unforced eloquence that finds the poetry in lowdown street talk.” Take, for example, Oswaldo in the beginning of Between Riverside and Crazy:

OSWALDO:

. . . Wanna try some of these fresh organic raw almonds from Whole Foods instead? Because my caseworker over at the place, he a real ball breaker like how I told you, but ever since I took his suggestion and switched my breakfast to almonds and health water instead of, you know—Ring Dings with baloney and Fanta Grape. . . . See: the Ring Dings and baloney and Fanta Grape, it turns out, that’s what my doctors and People magazine call “emotional eating” on my part—on account of I only ate that sh*t because those foods made me feel “safe or taken care of.” But now, I’m a adult, right? So I don’t gotta eat like that no more, and I can take care of myself by getting all fit and diesel like how I’m doing from eating these almonds and making other healthful choices like I been making. And so, I’m not trying to get all up in your business, but maybe that’s also the reason you always be eating pie—because of, like, you got emotionalisms—ya know?

Much has been made of Guirgis’s liberal use of profanity, but he says, “In between the adjectives and modifiers that are colorful, they also say things that are pretty interesting, pretty human, and oftentimes, pretty funny.”
In Between Riverside and Crazy, Pops’s landlord is desperately trying to evict him from his rent-controlled apartment on Riverside Drive in Manhattan. To audiences in both New York and San Francisco, Pops’s struggle is a familiar one. Both cities currently suffer from skyrocketing rents, making apartment searching (and keeping) more difficult than ever before.

OUR WORKING FAMILIES AND OUR NEIGHBORHOODS ARE DEPENDING ON STRONGER RENT LAWS. THIS HAS TO BE A CITY FOR EVERYONE. IT CANNOT JUST BE A CITY OF LUXURY APARTMENTS OUT OF EVERYDAY NEW YORKERS’ REACH.

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio

SYSTEMS OF RENT REGULATION IN THE UNITED STATES USUALLY INVOLVE:

- Limits on how much a property owner may charge a tenant for rent
- Standards that prevent a property owner from evicting tenants unfairly or without cause
- Property owner obligations to maintain the property for the tenant
- Systems of oversight (such as the Housing Authorities in New York City and San Francisco) that serve as mediators between tenants and property owners

THE A.C.T. MASTER OF FINE ARTS PROGRAM PERFORMS

THE Belle’s Stratagem

BY Hannah Cowley
DIRECTED BY Nancy Benjamin

OCT 16–24, 2015
THE RUEFF AT A.C.T.’S STRAND THEATER
1127 MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

Hannah Cowley’s spirited 1780 comedy of manners presents a lighthearted battle between the sexes in which everyone’s itching to be struck by Cupid’s arrow—even if it means transforming their very identities. The lovely and crafty Letitia is determined to win the man of her dreams, the cool and distant Doricourt, to whom she’s been betrothed since birth. Meanwhile, Sir George is suffering a blow to his newlywed bliss—his beautiful country-bred wife, Lady Frances, shows signs of being corrupted by life in bustling, fashionable London. Through a complex game of wit and intrigue, the two pairs of lovers make startling discoveries about each other. A bedroom farce teeming with intricate subplots, irresistible romance, and unexpected resolutions, The Belle’s Stratagem demonstrates that the “weaker sex” can often be the more formidable in matters of love and marriage.
THE BAYVIEW STORIES PROJECT

A.C.T.’s Stage Coach Tells the Tales of a Changing Community

BY | NIRMALA NATARAJ

STAGE COACH, A PROGRAM OF A.C.T.’S EDUCATION & COMMUNITY PROGRAMS DEPARTMENT, HAS BEEN A WITNESS TO POWERFUL FIRSTHAND ACCOUNTS THAT MIRROR MANY OF THE CONCERNS RAISED BY STEPHEN ADLY GUIRGIS’S BETWEEN RIVERSIDE AND CRAZY

Made possible by funding from the James Irvine Foundation and launched in the summer of 2014, Stage Coach is a community-based participatory theater program that engages San Franciscans in transforming their life experiences into compelling theater. Currently, Stage Coach’s Bayview Stories Project, a partnership with residents in the Bayview-Hunters Point community, is spotlighting the people living in this dynamic neighborhood.

Community Artistic Director Tyrone Davis says that the decision to develop the Bayview Stories Project emerged from our educational residencies at Downtown and Ida B. Wells High Schools, where our instructors encourage marginalized youth to write and perform their stories. “Many of these students live in the Bayview community, and we wanted to engage their families in telling their stories and establish a presence in the neighborhoods in which our students live,” Davis says.

The project is made up of many components. The first involves “story circle” workshops that engage community members in theater games and opportunities to share their stories about life in the Bayview.

Community Producer Rebecca Struch notes that gentrification has been a consistent theme in the stories that have emerged from Bayview residents. “People are losing their homes to foreclosure and to the rising costs of real estate in the area,” she says. “Underneath every conversation we’re having with folks is the clear reality of racism in America and the ways it manifests in the lives of the black residents of the Bayview.”

Stage Coach recently approached playwright Aleshea Harris to work on a play especially commissioned for the Bayview Stories Project. Harris will adapt a classic play based on the most relevant themes culled from residents’ stories. During the recent 3rd on Third Juneteenth celebration in the Bayview, Stage Coach presented excerpts from Harris’s WHAT TO SEND UP WHEN IT GOES DOWN, a participatory play-pageant-ritual-homecoming celebration honoring people lost to racist violence in America.

“I am struck by this community’s warmth, perseverance, and commitment to self-love,” says Harris. “There is no question that they greatly value the Bayview and are deeply connected to its history and invested in its future.”

The play that Harris will create for the Bayview Stories Project will enjoy a number of staged readings to gather community feedback. After the script is finalized, A.C.T. will hold auditions to cast the play; over half the roles will be filled by Bayview residents. Performances will take place in various locations approximately a year from now.

“There’s an energy in the Bayview that will make this piece’s creation an extraordinary growing and learning process for everyone involved,” says Harris.
ACTING TRAINING FOR BUSINESS PERFORMANCE

A.C.T.’s Corporate Training Program

BY CECILIA PADILLA

OFTEN, THE DISTANCE BETWEEN BUSINESS AND THE ARTS seems vast. But A.C.T. has found a way to bridge that gap with its brand-new Corporate Training Program headed by Conservatory Operations Manager Dan Kolodny. With his own experience as an actor, Kolodny, along with Studio A.C.T. Director Nick Gabriel, has married the techniques of elite acting training with the structure of a corporate setting. The program engages employees in the art of presentation delivery, team collaboration, and leadership authenticity.

A.C.T.’s Corporate Training Program is geared toward businesspeople who tend to think in analytical and quantitative ways. Our goal is to train these individuals to be more comfortable in their physical presence and in engaging with others. With that in mind, the program includes three different categories of courses: Storytelling and Presentational Skills, Team Building and Collaboration, and Acting for the Executive Presence. With each category, A.C.T. instructors customize learning modules founded on acting techniques and develop theater-based exercises for the client’s specific corporate setting.

So what makes A.C.T.’s style of corporate training so different from the standard style used by most businesses? “It’s fun!” says Kolodny. “We ditch the tables and projectors, get everyone on their feet, and arrange the group in a circle so that everyone can engage with each other on an equal level.” Instead of turning to computers and textbooks, the program utilizes a system of warm-up, vocal, and physical exercises that acquaint participants with the tools to handle pitches, keynotes, and question-and-answer segments after presentations. In addition to these presentational skills, A.C.T.’s Corporate Training Program also focuses on strengthening relationships between coworkers through team-building exercises.

Among the program’s new clientele are young, up-and-coming leaders at Bank of America and information-technology managers at Cisco.

During the program’s pilot period, A.C.T. offered the Corporate Training Program to people in our own organization. Board member David Riemer reflects on how beneficial acting techniques can be in the office: “The program helped me appreciate the importance of body language and tone when conveying the confidence and conviction of a speaker.” Individual Giving Manager Abigail Páñares points out that the program’s “improv games provided insight on how colleagues think and work. It got us to think outside of the office-space mentality that often restricts communication between coworkers.” By bringing the stage to the office, A.C.T.’s Corporate Training Program brings out the best in a company in a creative and engaging way.

LOVE, SQUID MONSTERS, AND THE AMERICAN DREAM

Monstress Comes to The Strand Theater

BY | SHANNON STOCKWELL
WHEN A.C.T. ARTISTIC DIRECTOR CAREY PERLOFF first read Monstress, by Lysley Tenorio, she was immediately enraptured and knew that, somehow, she had to help these vibrant short stories find their way to the stage. Tenorio’s book was met with nearly universal praise when it was published in 2012. The Los Angeles Times compared his writing to that of Pulitzer Prize-winning authors Junot Díaz and Jhumpa Lahiri. Slate named Monstress Book of the Week, saying, “Tenorio’s characters are zany, witty, and beautifully drawn. . . . It is the unassuming pitch of these stories that makes [Monstress] so exquisitely deadly.”

As a part of New Strands, A.C.T.’s recently created new-play development and commissioning program, we reached out to some of our favorite local artists and offered them the opportunity to select one of Tenorio’s short stories to adapt for the stage. While these playwrights were hard at work, we realized that two of these plays—Remember the I-Hotel, adapted by Philip Kan Gotanda, and Presenting . . . the Monstress!, by Sean San José—could share the same cast and the same set, and would be perfect to present as one evening of theater in the newly opened and intimate Strand.

Presenting . . . the Monstress! is a fast-paced comedy with tragedy brewing just under the surface. Set in a period of Filipino cinema history when Hollywood movies dominated box offices throughout the archipelago, Presenting . . . the Monstress! tells the story of Checkers Rosario, director of low-budget horror movies, and his girlfriend, Reva Gogo, who (to her chagrin) plays all of his monsters. When Checkers is fired from his studio, all seems lost—until a shady American director offers Checkers and Reva the opportunity to work alongside him in the United States. This is a play about big dreams, the lengths we will go to in order to achieve them, and what happens when, for whatever reason, we are forced to give them up.

Remember the I-Hotel flashes back to 1937, when Nado visits San Francisco for the first time after a long day of working in the asparagus fields near Stockton. He’s trying to prove to himself that he was right to leave his home in the Philippines for America, but he’s shy and can’t seem to work up the courage to approach the women in the dance hall. Luckily, he meets Vicente, who takes him under his wing, showing him around Manilatown and getting him a room at San Francisco’s International Hotel, right next door to his own. In a time when laws made it virtually impossible for Filipino men to build families in America, Nado and Vicente find solace in each other’s company—but everything changes when Vicente meets Althea, a white maid at the hotel where the two men work. More than 40 years later, Nado and Vicente—who have never left the I-Hotel—pack their bags and wait together for the imminent eviction, which was a historical event that made headlines across the nation. Remember the I-Hotel is a stirring tale about the dangers of love that crosses forbidden territory, and the yearning for home and family in a strange place.

Given the importance of the I-Hotel in the history of San Francisco, A.C.T. is honored to be working with Filipino community organizations in the Bay Area. Kularts, a nonprofit dedicated to presenting contemporary and tribal Filipino art, organized a reading of Remember the I-Hotel on August 2. The event, sponsored by the Kearny Street Workshop and Philippine American Writers and Artists, Inc., took place at the I-Hotel Manilatown Center, which is located on the site of the original I-Hotel. Today the Center is home to the Manilatown Heritage Foundation, which is dedicated to promoting social and economic justice for Filipinos in the United States.

Tenorio, who has attended every reading of Remember the I-Hotel and Presenting . . . the Monstress!, has loved watching his short stories find their place onstage. “Of course, I hoped the adaptations would stay true to the stories,” he says. “But seeing the ways in which they have transformed has been hugely exciting for me.”

A PLACE TO GROW

A.C.T. Opens The Strand Theater

BY | SHANNON STOCKWELL

AFTER A YEAR AND A HALF OF CONSTRUCTION, renovations, anticipation, and a $34.4 million capital campaign, A.C.T. was thrilled to open The Strand Theater, our new educational complex and performance venue in the Central Market district of San Francisco. A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff was joined by San Francisco Mayor Edwin Lee; District Supervisor Jane Kim; A.C.T. Board of Trustees Chair Nancy Livingston; Michael Duncan, the head of design at Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, LLC; and Jeff Ubben, the chair of the Strand Capital Campaign.

At the ribbon cutting, the speakers expressed their profound thanks to all who made The Strand possible, and pointed to its opening as an example of how important the arts are to the life and culture of San Francisco. “When you invest in the arts, you can clearly revitalize entire neighborhoods and allow them to come alive with their own artistry,” said Mayor Lee. “That is a powerful, powerful message.”

Over the next month, A.C.T. welcomed donors, subscribers, and community members into the space for opening celebrations. Attendees were invited to walk through the space, where they could admire the fresh design and state-of-the-art technology The Strand offers, while docents provided information about the theater’s fascinating history. From the 27.5’-x-17.5’ LED screen in the lobby, to the 283-seat Toni Rembe Theater, to the multipurpose Rueff, The Strand is prepared for a wide variety of performances and events. The inaugural production at The Strand Theater was Caryl Churchill’s Love and Information, directed by Casey Stangl, and during the summer, the Young Conservatory performed I’m Still Standing in the Toni Rembe Theater and Snakes in the Rueff, a collaboration with Destiny Arts and our Education & Community Programs. This season, A.C.T. will produce Monstress, a world-premiere adaptation of two of Lysley Tenorio’s short stories, by Philip Kan Gotanda and Sean San José; The Unfortunates, created by Jon Beavers, Kristoffer Diaz, Casey Hurt, Ian Merrigan, and Ramiz Monsef; and Chester Bailey, by Joseph Dougherty.

A.C.T. is excited to explore all of the possibilities our new versatile and intimate performing arts space has to offer. “The Strand is about growing new things,” Perloff said at the ribbon cutting. “I want this to be a place that grows new audiences; that grows artists, actors, directors, designers, choreographers, composers—artists from a wide range of disciplines who need a place to launch. I want this to be a place to grow our remarkable school, and where our extraordinary education programs will have a home. And because we get to be in this confluence of spaces, we get to think about what kind of art will provoke and collide and surprise and bring people together.”

“City National helps keep my financial life in tune.”

So much of my life is always shifting; a different city, a different piece of music, a different ensemble. I need people who I can count on to help keep my financial life on course so I can focus on creating and sharing the “adventures” of classical music. City National shares my passion and is instrumental in helping me bring classical music to audiences all over the world. They enjoy being a part of what I do and love. That is the essence of a successful relationship.

City National is The way up® for me.
