“City National helps keep my financial life in tune.”

So much of my life is always shifting; a different city, a different piece of music, a different ensemble. I need people who I can count on to help keep my financial life on course so I can focus on creating and sharing the “adventures” of classical music. City National shares my passion and is instrumental in helping me bring classical music to audiences all over the world. They enjoy being a part of what I do and love. That is the essence of a successful relationship.

City National is The way up* for me.

American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco’s Tony Award-winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and an ongoing engagement with our community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, we embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of our creative work. Founded by pioneer of the regional theater movement William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season in 1967. Since then, we’ve performed more than 350 productions to a combined audience of more than seven million people. We reach more than 250,000 people through our productions and programs every year.

Rising from the rubble of the catastrophic earthquake and fires of 1906 and immediately hailed as the “perfect playhouse,” the beautiful, historic Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped a gaping hole in the ceiling, destroying the proscenium arch and dumping tons of debris on the first six rows of orchestra seats, the San Francisco community rallied to raise a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild it. The theater reopened in 1996 with a production of The Tempest directed by Perloff, who took over after A.C.T.’s second artistic director, gentleman artist Ed Hastings, retired in 1992.

Perloff’s 23-season tenure has been marked by groundbreaking productions of classical works and new translations creatively colliding with exceptional contemporary theater; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and “locavore” theater—theater made by, for, and about the San Francisco area. Her fierce commitment to audience engagement ushered in a new era of InterACT events and dramaturgical publications, inviting everyone to explore what goes on behind the scenes.

A.C.T.’s 46-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, and our intensive Summer Training Congress attracts enthusiasts from around the world. Other programs include the world-famous Young Conservatory for students ages 8 to 19, led by 25-year veteran Craig Slaight, and Studio A.C.T., our expansive course of study for adults. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as stages and screens across the country.

A.C.T. also brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 10,000 Bay Area school students each year. Central to our ACTsmart education programs, run by Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen, is the longstanding Student Matinee (SMAT) program, which has brought tens of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and in-depth study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood marked by the opening of The Costume Shop theater, the renovation of The Strand Theater across from UN Plaza, and the launch of our mobile Stage Coach initiative, A.C.T. is poised to continue its leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

Dear Friends,

The idea of Eugene O’Neill writing a comedy is practically oxymoronic to many people (you may remember A.C.T.’s productions of his tragedies Long Day’s Journey into Night and Moon for the Misbegotten). But that is what he did with Ah, Wilderness! O’Neill looked through the complicated lens of his family history and found a heartbeat of joy and romance in a universe that would later yield much darker and more despairing work. Ah, Wilderness! is a play about youth, about first love, about parents and children, and, ultimately, about forgiveness and empathy. We all inherit the families we inherit. Often we wish we could change their composition, that we could alter their behavior or expectations in radical ways, but much of the journey of life is finessing these very delicate relationships in a way that both sustains us and allows us to grow up and be our own people. This is the story of Ah, Wilderness!

The idea for producing this play right now came to me last fall when I saw our beloved colleague Mark Rucker’s exquisite production of Anton Chekhov’s The Cherry Orchard with our second-year Master of Fine Arts Program actors. As was always the case with Mark’s work, he managed to elicit performances of remarkable depth, clarity, humanity, and poignancy from these young actors, and I was so inspired when I left the show that night to write down all the other plays I would love to see that particular group of young actors do. Ah, Wilderness! was at the top of the list—it is a play that is only possible with the participation of ten remarkable 20-somethings. And how wonderful it is that A.C.T. has a training program that provides just that. The week after I made my list, we held an informal reading of Ah, Wilderness!, which included a number of the professional actors who are also in this production, such as Dan Hiatt and Anthony Fusco. We were captivated. The yearning and hilarious awkwardness that Richard’s love for Muriel causes himself and his community at the turn of the twentieth century leapt off the page, and, surprisingly, felt very immediate and accessible. Love is still the most impossible thing to articulate. We don’t know what language to use, what behavior to adopt, what hope to hold out. O’Neill reminds us that, no matter how fraught and painful it can be, romance is always the richest possible destination and the most delicious thing to experience.

This production of Ah, Wilderness! was to be directed by Mark Rucker, whom we tragically lost on August 25. We are moved and grateful that Casey Stangl, who did such magnificent work on both Venus in Fur and Love and Information, agreed to step in. No one can ever take Mark’s place. But Casey and this beautiful company of artists have created a production in Mark’s honor that stands for everything he loved: community, imagination, passion, hilarity, and humanity. We hope you will experience the play in this spirit as we send so much light and love Mark’s way.

Our M.F.A. Program is showcased not only in this production—it is visible and shining all over the place at A.C.T. this season, from its new home at The Strand Theater to our upcoming production of A Christmas Carol, which will star many of the same young artists that you see performing in Ah, Wilderness! It is unusual for a producing organization to have as its creative engine a group of young artists so fiercely committed to the future of the profession, and it is they who help keep us nimble and creative. We hope that this season you will all have the opportunity to get to know this aspect of A.C.T.’s mission, and to be introduced to the wealth of training and educational opportunities afforded by A.C.T. Whether it’s watching a cabaret by our Young Conservatory teens, seeing the work of our community partners at The Costume Shop Theater, meeting our Downtown High School students, or coming to a reading of new work at The Strand, there are so many ways to access the creative life of this organization, and we invite you to do so whenever possible.

In the meantime, welcome to the magical world of Ah, Wilderness! Thank you for being here.

Best,
Carey Perloff

THE NECESSARY PLAY

BY | MICHAEL PALLER
THE TRAGEDIAN GOES HOME

By 1931, Eugene O’Neill, great American tragic playwright, had won Pulitzer Prizes for Beyond the Horizon, Anna Christie, and Strange Interlude. He’d written 23 full-length plays, including The Hairy Ape, Desire Under the Elms, The Emperor Jones, and All God’s Chillun Got Wings, which the police in New York attempted to close because it depicted a black man kissing a white woman. That same year saw the debut and critical acclaim of Mourning Becomes Electra, his seven-hour Americanization of Aeschylus’s Oresteia set in New England during the Civil War. He was lauded—not without justification—as the creator of the modern American theater.

Before O’Neill, American theater had been melodrama, vaudeville, and star-driven vehicles. With the aid of his collaborators at the Provincetown Playhouse, he forged an American theater that could aspire to stand beside the European accomplishments of August Strindberg, Henrik Ibsen, and Anton Chekhov. Like theirs, his was an experimental theater. In his early plays, O’Neill employed a host of theatrical conventions, from masks to spoken inner monologues, and styles, from naturalism to expressionism, to peel away the surface of everyday life and reveal the struggle and torment that he sensed seething underneath. O’Neill devoted himself to tragedy, striving to make it a viable genre for the twentieth century.

During the two-year gestation period of Electra, he felt himself encountering the limits of his talents. He wrote to his friend, the drama critic Joseph Wood Krutch, “Oh, for a language to write drama in! For a speech that is dramatic and isn’t just conversation! . . . But where to find that language?” Once he was finished with Electra, he feared such a language had eluded him once again. He didn’t know that the solution would soon present itself in a homely idiom and a genre for which he’d had little or no professional interest: comedy.

Waiting for fall rehearsals of Electra to get underway in New York, O’Neill and his wife, Carlotta, took a vacation home in Northport, Long Island. When the weather was clear, he could look across Long Island Sound toward the south shore of Connecticut and the town of New London, where he’d spent some of his unhappy boyhood and adolescence. Seized by a sudden desire to see the family house again, he told Carlotta he wanted to visit the once-thriving seaport town. She was dubious. “Don’t do it, darling,” she said, “Don’t ever try to go back. Keep your ideas, but don’t go back.” O’Neill was determined, however, and off they went. Once there, they couldn’t locate the house, so completely changed was the neighborhood. When they finally managed to find it down by the water, they discovered that—of course—someone else was living in it, and they had to settle for a view from across the street. According to Carlotta, O’Neill said, “I shouldn’t have come. Let’s go away. I don’t want to look at it.” It was back to Northport, where he made a few notes for a play tentatively called Nostalgia, which he stuck in a drawer.

A year later, in September 1932, at his home on Sea Island, Georgia, O’Neill awoke one morning from a dream in which the whole plot of Ah, Wilderness! unfolded itself. From 7 a.m. till late afternoon he wrote out an entire scenario, and over the course of six weeks, the play, he said, “simply gushed” out of him.

LIT, SONG, AND SLANG

The play reflects three of O’Neill’s abiding loves: literature, turn-of-the-twentieth-century popular music, and slang. As an adolescent, O’Neill read all the literature referred to in the play—and there’s a lot of it, from Omar Khayyám (whose Rubáiyát inspired the title), Algernon Charles Swinburne, George Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde, and Rudyard Kipling, to the anarchist writings of Emma Goldman, to the dime-novel exploits of detective Nick Carter and George Peck’s Bad Boy. Every summer O’Neill read the novels of Alexandre Dumas, Victor Hugo, and Charles Dickens, the philosophy of Ralph Waldo Emerson, and the poetry of Lord Byron. For all his reading, though, the teenaged O’Neill was much less worldly than he knew: like Arthur in Ah, Wilderness! he believed that Oscar Wilde went to prison for the unspeakable crime of bigamy.

Many people sang or played an instrument at home and on social occasions in early twentieth-century America, and this domestic pleasure was dear to O’Neill’s heart. He filled his plays with snatches of songs; according to O’Neill scholar Travis Bogard, only 8 of his 31 full-length plays are without music. Ten songs are heard or referenced in Ah, Wilderness!; one of them, “Bedelia,” is plunked out on a player piano at the Pleasant Beach House in Act III. After the play opened to great success, Carlotta surprised O’Neill with a like instrument; allegedly, it had once graced the parlor of a New Orleans bordello. He named it Rosie and would sit at it for hours at a time, happily singing along. In one of the few photographs that show O’Neill with a smile, he sits contentedly at Rosie, hands splayed across the keys. According to Bogard, once O’Neill had settled into his last home, Tao House, in the hills above Danville, California, on warm summer nights residents for miles around could hear Rosie crank out “The Sunshine of Paradise Alley.”

O’Neill may have strained for a tragic language, but the slang of his youth flowed from him freely. It’s even more ubiquitous in his plays than music. The slang he used came almost exclusively from the first decade of the twentieth century, and he used it in plays, letters, and everyday speech, long after it had gone out of fashion. In later years, some critics wondered if he knew any contemporary idioms; on the other hand, those who knew him would comment on the unique flavor the words lent his speech.

Many of O’Neill’s themes and character types appear in Ah, Wilderness!: the young man at odds with the world of his father, yearning for a mother figure and dreaming of illicit passion with prostitutes (or, in O’Neillian parlance, “tarts”); the grasping material life of America versus the higher callings of love and self-sacrifice; the divided nature of man’s soul. Here, though, these themes appear in a congenial atmosphere. The big thematic guns of tragedy in his other plays are rendered in Ah, Wilderness! as Fourth of July firecrackers. Dark issues lurk, such as Uncle Sid’s drinking problem and Aunt Lily’s lonely future and perpetual disappointments, but their implications are the shadows, not the substance, of the work.

Those shadows belonged to the true story of O’Neill’s youth, which Ah, Wilderness! decidedly is not. The play depicts, in his words, “the other side of the coin,” the family that he wished he’d had: parents who love each other and care for their children, and children who feel secure and loved, even while in full-blown adolescent rebellion. O’Neill’s own family—a self-involved father, tight with money and love; a mother who disappeared into the spare bedroom to emerge later in a morphine haze; an elder brother who spent his days and nights in brothels and bars on a lifelong bender of guilt and self-loathing—is erased in this telling.

Perhaps O’Neill had to imagine his youth in the fictional glow of comedy before he could face his family’s tragic truths. He would depict those with courage and honesty in the masterpieces that came later—Long Day’s Journey into Night, set in the same (yet very different) house as Ah, Wilderness!, and A Moon for the Misbegotten, which takes place just a few miles away on a piece of property that his father owned. Playwrights write the plays they need to write. Ah, Wilderness! is O’Neill’s most popular and most produced play. Even if it weren’t, the fact that it laid the groundwork for the last great ones makes it one of America’s most significant plays, too.

ALTHOUGH MANY ASSOCIATE EUGENE O’NEILL WITH the Northeast that served as the setting for so many of his plays, it was actually in the Bay Area that he composed some of his most revered work. O’Neill was living in Seattle when he won the 1936 Nobel Prize in Literature, and because he was constantly hounded by reporters, he and his wife, Carlotta, fled to the San Francisco Bay Area, where she had grown up. There they searched for a place to settle down where O’Neill could write in peace. They found the perfect spot in Danville, California. “We have a beautiful site in the hills of the San Ramon Valley with one of the most beautiful views I’ve ever seen,” he wrote in a letter in 1937. “This is the final home and harbor for me. I love California.” He spent his Nobel Prize winnings to build a house on the 158-acre plot of land, which he and Carlotta came to call Tao House due to their mutual interest in Eastern philosophy and aesthetics.

While living in Tao House, Carlotta regulated her husband’s correspondence and visitors, giving him time to write. In this environment of peace and solitude, he wrote some of his most famous plays, including The Iceman Cometh, Moon for the Misbegotten, and Long Day’s Journey into Night. He and Carlotta employed a handful of servants, including a driver, who brought O’Neill to his many medical appointments (neither O’Neill nor his wife drove). During World War II, however, it became increasingly difficult to sustain regular help. Meanwhile, O’Neill’s health worsened, making it necessary for him to visit his doctors more frequently. He and Carlotta began to feel marooned in the hills of Danville. They sold the house to Arthur and Charlotte Miller in 1944, who also bought the surrounding one thousand acres of land.

By 1965, however, the house and the surrounding land had been put on the market, and a realty company attempted to sell the land to develop a thousand condominiums. The plan fell through, but a woman named Thalia Brewer, a friend of Charlotte Miller, formed a group to prevent the loss of the land to development. Through the efforts of that group—which eventually became the Eugene O’Neill Foundation—and many others, Tao House was recognized as a National Historic Site in 1975.

Today, visitors can make reservations to visit the grounds, which also houses extensive archives full of information about O’Neill’s life and work. Tao House has several programs that support theater artists and nurture the future of the craft in the environment in which O’Neill’s genius once thrived.

Despite its title, Eugene O’Neill’s Ah, Wilderness! does not take place in the wild outdoors. Instead, it depicts the home of the Millers, a tight-knit American family. Helping to bring the Millers’ Connecticut home to San Francisco audiences is scenic designer Ralph Funicello. This is Funicello’s second time working on Ah, Wilderness! with A.C.T.—he designed the sets when the play was produced here in 1978. In that production, Funicello’s designs adhered to O’Neill’s textual specifications, exhibiting period-appropriate styles and architecture. This time, he approached the play through a new lens. He says, “O’Neill literally dreamt up Ah, Wilderness!, so I want the audience to fall into the dream with him.”
What is your design approach for this production of Ah, Wilderness!?

When I was asked to work on this production, my main concern was that the design approach would be a realistic representation of a Connecticut home. I had already done the show from that perspective, and I wasn’t interested in repeating the same design. When I found out that I could go in a completely different direction with the set, I got very excited and immediately began to brainstorm a new model. My intention for this new production of Ah, Wilderness! revolved around the idea that the scenes would unfold in a fuzzy, dreamlike, memory-infused environment. I then calculated how much detailed architecture I would include in the set and how much of it would be abstract. The play’s events take place in three locations: the Miller home, a bar, and a beach. What challenges does this create for your design?

The play jumps back and forth quite a bit from location to location. Within the house, we switch between the sitting room and the dining room. Then we get to Richard’s fiasco at the bar, which has a bare, back-room feel. And then we have the scenes on the beach, where Richard has these huge revelations about life and love under the moonlight. The beach is the most difficult environment to portray, since it involves the shore and waves crashing. The challenge of the scene on the beach was something that drove the whole design. I wanted to create a set that would accommodate the beach scenes within the context of the rest of the play. In order to do that, I concentrated on blurring the sharp lines of realism. A dreamy haze permeates the play.

Ah, Wilderness! is Eugene O’Neill’s only comedy. Did this deviation from the classic O’Neill genre influence your design?

I’ve designed a lot of O’Neill plays, and it always fascinates me that, during the time he was writing, his life was unremarkable. He had failures in his childhood, and then he traveled around for about ten years, and then he spent the rest of his life—particularly the rest of his playwriting life—rehashing all of it. He sort of tortured himself over all the things he had seen and done. It’s no wonder that he had to dream up a comedy, because he based so much of the material in his plays on the events of his difficult life. His childhood was so far removed from that of Richard’s that he had to invent characters to capture the essence of close family ties. In a way, the comedic aspect of Ah, Wilderness! comes from the fact that O’Neill is poking fun at his own childhood, but there is a subtle trace of tragedy in that. I let that idea come through in my designs by creating a sparse set with minimal architecture and only the essential furniture. Through those designs, this production takes on a darker undertone that ties the comedy back to O’Neill’s difficult life.

What are you most looking forward to regarding this production?

When I went to college at Boston University back in the 1960s, one of my teachers was the great theater critic Elliot Norton. He was a personal friend of O’Neill. Elliot Norton’s lectures on O’Neill are something I will never forget. He would go into a trance and talk about O’Neill’s work and everything that influenced his writing. It was wonderful. Elliot spoke about the development of the American theater, and it struck me that American theater history is a chain of people who can be traced back to O’Neill—and sitting in that classroom, hearing about Eugene O’Neill from this great man, I became a part of that chain. Working on Ah, Wilderness! allows me to be a part of Eugene O’Neill’s influence on the American theater tradition.
An avid reader, O'Neill included numerous literary references in his plays. This is especially true of Ah, Wilderness!, in which Richard Miller is himself an enthusiastic reader of poetry and prose. One of the most-quoted pieces in the play is the Rubáiyát, a poem first written in 1120 by Omar Khayyám, a Persian poet, mathematician, and astronomer. It was translated into English by Edward FitzGerald in 1859, and by 1860, his adaptation had gained popularity in England. It is from FitzGerald’s translation that Richard quotes in Ah, Wilderness! Emphasizing the poem’s importance to the play is the fact that the title comes from Richard’s favorite stanza of the Rubáiyát:

A Book of Verses, underneath the Bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou Beside me singing in the Wilderness—Oh, Wilderness were paradise enow!

In the play, Richard assumes that the older members of his family have not read the Rubáiyát, perhaps thinking that they found it improper. Indeed, when it was first published, the poem incited a degree of controversy, because the poet articulates a disbelief in the afterlife and emphasizes the importance of enjoying each day. Some more conservative critics interpreted this as an endorsement of debauchery, since the poet’s version of making the most of each day tended to include drinking. Of course, controversy can breed interest, and the poem’s popularity continued to grow throughout the end of the nineteenth and beginning of the twentieth centuries. By 1906, when Ah, Wilderness! takes place, it was regarded as an important piece of literature, and it was one that many had read—including the older members of Richard’s family.

FitzGerald professed that his poem told the story of the life and death of a poet, but on a grander scale, the Rubáiyát has been interpreted as a meditation on the unanswerable questions of existence. According to scholars William Henry Martin and Sandra Mason, “The story line . . . flows from the light of dawn and youth, through the ups and downs and philosophical concerns of mid-day and middle age, to thoughts of evening and death.” When interpreted through this lens, it is easy to see why O’Neill was so attracted to this poem in relation to Ah, Wilderness!; the play explores the struggles and foibles of many ages, from young Tommy and his obsession with fireworks, to the awkwardness of teenaged Richard’s first love, to Lily Miller’s poignant and sorrowful desire for companionship as she grows older.

WHAT DREW ME TO MARK RUCKER FROM THE DAY
I first encountered him was his unique combination of expansiveness and diffidence. As determined as he was never to take the spotlight, never to be the center of attention, never to dominate the rehearsal room but to always leave plenty of space for everyone else to shine, Mark was also the king of the amazing. When I look back on his productions at A.C.T., I think about the outrageous tap-dancing curtain call that ended Once in a Lifetime; the stunning postapocalyptic Greek-tragedy-meets-The-Simpsons operetta he staged for Anne Washburn’s Mr. Burns, a post electric play; and the wild Italian mock funeral for Napoli! that involved Marco Barricelli playing dead on a mattress stuffed with coffee beans. Mark took incredible pleasure in the wondrous possibilities of live theater, in the pleasures of theatricality and the sheer power of play. But I also remember the deep, tender acting work that bubbled up again and again in Mark’s productions: the exquisite moment in The Rainmaker when René Augesen’s Lizzie realized that she was capable of being loved, the ache and longing of Richard Prioleau’s young gay man in Tarrell Alvin McCraney’s Marcus; or the Secret of Sweet, the surprising discovery of desire between warring archaeologists that Mark unearthed in my play Luminescence Dating. As quiet and unassuming as Mark could be in person, he was exploding with passion, invention, wit, and longing inside. And he had an uncanny ability to find the humanity in every character, without judgment, without pressure. Both in life and in art, Mark left space around him for other people’s unique human experiences to spontaneously emerge. Such an artist is extremely rare.

I had had the joy of seeing Mark’s inventive work all across the country before he came to A.C.T.: from the Oregon Shakespeare Festival to South Coast Repertory to Yale Repertory Theatre. Mark’s wit and imagination kept popping up and flooding our national stages. He had such breadth and appetite, and was at home in a wide variety of dramatic literature. In 2001 Mark came to A.C.T. to stage a seriously sexy rendition of Amy Freed’s The Beard of Avon, and we all fell in love with him. We were overjoyed when he relocated to San Francisco to be near his sister and beloved nephew some years later, and, realizing what a perfect fit he would be for A.C.T., we invited him to become associate artistic director.
I remember the day I made him the offer: his big owlish eyes twinkled merrily, and he proposed that we take a walk and talk about it. Thus it was that my deep collaboration with Mark began with a memorable walk up a mountain and ended with a beautiful walk in a garden just a few days before he died. There’s a trail in the Marin Headlands that I love; it ascends quite quickly to a vista where one can see the vast, blue Pacific spread out below. So off we went one Sunday in 2009 to climb the hill and discuss Mark’s future. As it turned out, Mark Rucker was a man of vast talents, but hiking wasn’t one of them. He always joked later that I persuaded him to take the job at A.C.T. because he was too out of breath to demur. But we made it to the top of the hill, and together we sat and imagined where we wanted A.C.T. to go and how we might play together. As friends and colleagues, Mark and I were the most unlikely combination: I am restless and talkative and external, Mark was calm and quiet and internal. Perhaps that’s why we fit together so well.

"BOTH IN LIFE AND IN ART, MARK LEFT SPACE AROUND HIM FOR OTHER PEOPLE’S UNIQUE HUMAN EXPERIENCE TO SPONTANEOUSLY EMERGE."

I quickly learned that he was passionate about lots of things: screwball comedies, American classics, anything Shakespearean, and many things entirely new. But what he seemed to love most about A.C.T. was the fact that we were also an acting school and that our training programs were embedded in every aspect of our work. Clearly Mark recognized this model from his student days at Yale School of Drama; he regaled me with stories of outrageous impromptu productions at Yale Cabaret, and on and off for several years he helped run “the Bar” in the basement of The Geary, where on late-night occasions one could find M.F.A. Program actors and the casts of any number of shows singing at an open mike while Mark performed bartender duties and befriended everyone. He had a unique ability to bridge those two sides of A.C.T.: to direct, teach, and mentor young artists, and to give them the confidence and skills they needed to succeed on our mainstage. And that is exactly what he did. Over five seasons, Mark’s work at every level of A.C.T. was exquisite, but I think what I remember the most is his work with our M.F.A. Program actors. To get real nuance and depth out of Anton Chekhov, William Shakespeare, Caryl Churchill, or Georges Feydeau when you are directing young actors is a feat, but Mark did it. And he did it by leaving room. He never talked too much, he never overdirected, he never got impatient with inexperience. He directed students exactly the way he directed seasoned professionals: by giving them space to explore and by making them aware that he trusted them to chart their own path in their own unique way. He was the most active listener I have ever encountered. Nothing in the rehearsal room escaped his attention, and he had an uncanny ability to know exactly when to give a note or a nudge, and when to wait and let self-discovery happen. No one was better at giving confidence to a faltering ego, and no one more determined to let other people shine. In the end, it was the work he trusted; he never ever read reviews or took any stock in them, because that approbation wasn’t why he’d fallen in love with this crazy profession to begin with.

Once in San Francisco, Mark quickly became the glue of the Bay Area. He adored connecting one strand of the theater community to another: he ran A.C.T.’s Community Space-Sharing Initiative and invited everyone from Awesöme Orchestra to Singers of the Street to perform at our Costume Shop Theater; he fought for Santa Cruz Shakespeare to stay alive and directed a joyful As You Like It for Mike Ryan’s “resurrection” season there; he partnered with Jonathan Moscone and gave many of our M.F.A. Program actors their first jobs in his California Shakespeare Theater productions; he rejoiced in the resurgence of Z Space and looked for ways to collaborate there . . . again and again, Mark linked people up in his kind and expansive embrace, and took so much pleasure when the larger theater family treated each other as such. Mark and I never climbed that Marin mountain again, but we often walked as we talked. My last memory of Mark is a stroll we took through Yerba Buena Gardens shortly before he died. He had just returned from England and, knowing how much I love Greek tragedy, wanted to tell me about a brilliant production of the Oresteia he had seen. It was a cold San Francisco day and every time we sat down, the sun was swallowed by fog and we had to start walking again in search of a warmer spot. That is how I will always think of Mark. Eyes bright behind his glasses, attention truly and deeply focused on the person in front of him, with the most beautiful capacity to listen and the most generous impulse to share. He made you feel that you were enough, no matter what. He took such joy in the process of making something beautiful. We must all keep trying to do that, every day, in honor of his memory.
THE A.C.T. MASTER OF FINE ARTS PROGRAM is a cornerstone of our company. One of the most transformative aspects of this intensive three-year course of study is the opportunity to be cast and perform in one of the shows in A.C.T.’s subscription season.

In charge of finding the perfect roles for these talented students is A.C.T. Casting Director Janet Foster, who has been with A.C.T. since the 2011-12 season. In addition to casting almost every show at A.C.T., Foster spends much of her time getting to know the M.F.A. Program actors in order to find mainstage roles in which each of them will shine. Her relationship with them begins the moment they first set foot in our studios at 30 Grant Avenue as prospective students, and it continues to grow as she sees them perform as much as possible—in the Created Movement Project, in Conservatory productions, and in the annual Sky Festival.

After becoming acquainted with each actor’s unique skills, Foster invites them to audition for mainstage roles in which she feels they will truly excel. In the case of Ah, Wilderness!, she was extremely pleased with how well each student performed. “Everybody in the class came in and did a stellar audition,” she says. Then it was just a matter of figuring out who would play which role.

Once cast in a mainstage production, M.F.A. Program actors often express to Foster how amazing the experience is. “They learn so much through working with professionals, and it’s great to hear what they bring out of the process,” she says. “It’s hugely satisfying to see how the students step up—and they all seem to step up when they get to the Geary stage.”

The experience isn’t just beneficial to the students, however, as director Casey Stangl found out after working with four M.F.A. Program actors on A.C.T.’s recent production of Love and Information. “They each brought into the room a breath of fresh air, their own sensibility, and their own way of thinking.”

Stangl is particularly excited to have the M.F.A. Program actors in Ah, Wilderness!, which relies so heavily on a feeling of family. “They have been working together for almost three years,” she says. “They all know each other and have each other’s backs. They know the best and worst of each other. That’s just like being in a family, and that adds a lot to the depth of this production’s ensemble.”
MEET THE M.F.A. FAMILY IN AH, WILDERNESS!

ARTHUR WISE

AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Bartender
HOMETOWN: Cleveland, Ohio
UNDERGRAD: Baldwin Wallace University’s Conservatory of Music
WHAT HAVE YOU LEARNED ABOUT ACTING THAT YOU DIDN’T KNOW BEFORE A.C.T.?
How far you truly have to go: truth, honesty, vulnerability, and, ultimately, transparency. I never really knew how much of “you” you had to bring to the work until studying here. I thought it was all about technique—which it is, but the technique is about whittling yourself down to the most unfiltered, unbridled self that you can be.

CAITLAN TAYLOR

AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Belle
HOMETOWN: Houston, Texas
UNDERGRAD: Carnegie Mellon University
WHY ACTING?
Particularly now, when society is ruthlessly focused on technology and mainly operates through digital interface, we desperately need inner reflection and connection. Exploring our emotional centers and experiencing catharsis in the theater opens us up to compassion and empathy, bringing us closer to connection and belonging: closer to the purpose and meaning of our lives.

CHRISTINA LIANG

AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Mildred Miller
HOMETOWN: Short Hills, New Jersey
UNDERGRAD: New York University
WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST ACTING EXPERIENCE?
I played Peter Pan when I was 10 years old. I was at a summer music camp and my mother signed me up for a musical theater intensive. I was too big for my costume and green is definitely not my color, but I had a blast!

JENNIFER REDDISH

AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Norah
HOMETOWN: Brewster, Massachusetts
UNDERGRAD: University of Massachusetts Amherst
WHAT WAS YOUR MOST RECENT ACTING EXPERIENCE AT A.C.T.?
I was last in Crazy for the Country, directed by Stephen Buescher. I played another (much sassier) maid named Brigida. It was a crazy, physical, funny romp about love, money, and family. I got to mess around with a cartoon Cockney accent, I learned how to juggle plates (mostly successfully), and Brigida got the guy in the end.

LAUREN HART

AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Understudy for Mildred Miller and Norah
HOMETOWN: Palo Alto, California
UNDERGRAD: University of California, Berkeley
WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST ACTING EXPERIENCE?
I was in third grade, and my synagogue, Beth Am, was holding auditions for Fiddler on the Roof. I was so excited to audition, and I was cast as Bielke. I haven’t stopped since!
MATTHEW BALDIGA
AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Salesman
HOMETOWN: Apex, North Carolina
UNDERGRAD: University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
WHAT WAS YOUR MOST RECENT ACTING EXPERIENCE AT A.C.T.?
This past spring I was in a crazy (no pun intended) commedia dell’arte play called Crazy for the Country, directed by Stephen Buescher. I played a 90-year-old masked character trying to keep social norms alive in the Italian countryside.

MATTHEW CAPBARAT
AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Wint Selby
HOMETOWN: Walnut Creek, California
UNDERGRAD: University of California, Berkeley
WHAT’S THE BIGGEST CHALLENGE ABOUT BEING AN M.F.A. PROGRAM ACTOR?
Our rigorous and time-intensive schedule. We begin each morning at 9 a.m. and remain in classes until 5 p.m. Following a break for dinner, we start our evening rehearsals at 6 p.m. and work until 10 p.m. That’s a 13-hour day, five days a week. Sundays include a six- to eight-hour rehearsal, making our work week six days long. Our schedule is demanding and challenging, but it lets us be immersed in the craft and art form we love.

MICHAEL MCINTIRE
AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Arthur Miller
HOMETOWN: Kirksville, Missouri
UNDERGRAD: Columbia College Chicago
IF WE ASKED YOUR PARENTS, WHEN WOULD THEY TELL US THEY KNEW YOU WOULD BE ONSTAGE?
When I was in first grade, I played the lead in our church’s production of No Phibbin’ Mephibosheth. I was a young boy who walked around on a wooden crutch. After the production, the pastor called me back onstage and I walked on still in character—still on the crutch. That was when my mother claims she knew I was destined to be an actor.

ROSA PALMERI
AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Muriel McComber
HOMETOWN: Brattleboro, Vermont
UNDERGRAD: University of Evansville
WHAT ABOUT AH, WILDERNESS! DO YOU FIND RELEVANT TO YOUR GROWTH AS AN ACTOR?
Playing Muriel gives me a chance to exercise clown technique, which we’re learning from Stephen Buescher. So many of Muriel’s scenes reside in a state of not-knowing. She is an innocent making quick decisions in a world of new obstacles, and, as a result, her actions are often childlike.

THOMAS STAGNITTA
AH, WILDERNESS! ROLE: Richard Miller
HOMETOWN: Floral Park, New York
UNDERGRAD: Queens College, City University of New York
WHAT ADVICE WOULD YOU GIVE SOMEONE CONSIDERING A CAREER IN ACTING?
Get curious about the world. Have the willpower to change yourself. Be open, receptive, and patient, and the answers to your questions will reveal themselves when the time is right. Trust that you exist.

ARE YOU MAJORING OR MINORING IN THEATER?
ARE YOU READY FOR AN ARTISTIC, INTELLECTUAL, AND PERSONAL TRANSFORMATION?

TONY AWARD–WINNING REGIONAL THEATER AND ACTOR TRAINING IN THE HEART OF SAN FRANCISCO

415.749.2228
EACH DEPARTMENT AT A.C.T. HAS ITS UNIQUE FOCUS AND creates dynamic work on its own—but we recognize that there’s a special kind of magic that comes from the exchange of ideas among various departments. The new conversations, diverse voices, and powerful performances that such collaborations produce are crucial to the creative life of A.C.T.

Time and time again, A.C.T.’s many artistic, educational, and community programs work together to create art that’s fresh and vibrant. It’s simple arithmetic, really, but the result is incredible: the creativity of one department plus the creativity of another equals something truly transformative.

Let’s do some math!

THE M.F.A. PROGRAM + EDUCATION & COMMUNITY PROGRAMS = Artist curriculum, which supports the students’ yearning to enrich their craft by providing them with training, tools, and opportunities to get involved with A.C.T.’s arts education and community programs. In particular, they teach in our residencies with Downtown and Ida B. Wells high schools.

“The M.F.A. Program actors have told us that working with our programs feeds them artistically, helps them realize the value of their work as artists, and helps them understand their actor training on a deeper level,” says Brodersen.

THE M.F.A. PROGRAM + STAGE COACH = Since the establishment of the Education & Community Programs Department in 2011, the more the M.F.A. Program actors worked with our continuation high school students, the more they wanted to get involved in other aspects of A.C.T.’s work in the community. Stage Coach, A.C.T.’s participatory theater program that helps to develop and showcase the stories of traditionally marginalized communities in San Francisco, was the perfect opportunity for further collaboration. M.F.A. Program actors now participate in many Stage Coach residencies. and performances in San Francisco neighborhoods. This partnership between departments resulted in Stories from the ‘Loin and Home Is Where . . . , joint projects between M.F.A. Program actors and Stage Coach involving members of the Tenderloin community, exploring issues of homelessness and bringing powerful yet rarely heard stories to the stage.

One upcoming joint project between the M.F.A. Program and Stage Coach is also a collaboration with the One-Minute Play Festival, the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, and theaters across the nation. In October, A.C.T. Community Producer Rebecca Struch and playwright Aleshea Harris traveled to St. Louis to take part in Every 28 Hours, a week-long residency with artists from around the country to create a series of one-minute plays. Says Struch, “The work we created is part of a national artistic response to the events in Ferguson last year and the statistic that a black person is killed by police every 28 hours.” A.C.T. will host an event inspired by this work featuring M.F.A. Program actors at The Strand on October 28.

Stage Coach is also benefiting from the expertise of A.C.T. Director of New Works Beatrice Basso to create its first commission: an adaptation by Harris of Sophocles’ Oedipus—inspired by the stories and experiences of Bayview/Hunters Point community members, gathered in a series of neighborhood-based story circles over the course of several months. Following a reading by M.F.A. Program actors in December of Harris’s first draft, the finished script will be performed next summer by a cast of Bayview residents and professional actors in a variety of San Francisco venues—including our mobile Stage Coach unit.

The M.F.A. Program actors also have a rich history of working with our Young Conservatory. In addition to teaching YC classes each summer, M.F.A. Program actors are cast with YC students in our annual production of A Christmas Carol. Recognizing a valuable opportunity for collaboration, YC Director Craig Slaight launched a mentorship program that pairs M.F.A. Program actors with YC students during the rehearsal and performance process of our acclaimed holiday show. “Through the mentorship, the YC students have someone to look up to,” Slaight explains. “Meanwhile, M.F.A. Program actors embrace the joy of passing on what they’ve learned.”

Melissa Smith notes that this mentorship also helps M.F.A. Program actors cultivate professionalism and accountability. She says, “When M.F.A. students connect with YC students, it helps them realize they are made of the same cloth. They are all aspiring theater artists, just at different points in their lives.”

The M.F.A. Program + New Strands + Stage Coach =

The M.F.A. Program + The Young Conservatory =

For more than 20 years, the YC has been commissioning seasoned playwrights to write new works specifically for young actors and has published numerous volumes of sophisticated dramatic works exploring the world through the eyes of young people. Last summer, using this same model, YC Director Craig Slaight established the Collaborative Youth Arts Project: Slaight and Community Artistic Director Tyrone Davis commissioned playwright Chris Webb to create Snakes, a powerful and poetic play exploring issues of race, identity, and tolerance, for a cast of young actors made up of students from A.C.T.’s continuation high school residencies and the YC, as well as students from Oakland’s Destiny Arts Center. Performed at The Strand as well as Destiny’s new venue in Oakland. “The project was ambitious but ultimately rewarding,” says Slaight.

The Citizen Artist Component within the M.F.A. Program is an incredible opportunity to share our training with San Francisco’s communities and witness how theater can unite and inspire. It has profoundly impacted my growth as an actor and human being.

Diana Gonzalez-Morett, Class of ’17

These equations are only a few of the countless collaborations at A.C.T.—they happen every day, both big and small, through serendipity as well as focused intention, in ongoing projects as well as one-time events. “Ideas start as seeds in the hallway, on a bus, or at lunch,” says Struch. “Collaborating across departments makes our work stronger and more connected not only to A.C.T. but also to the city, the country, and the community as a whole.”
A.C.T. CELEBRATES PROSPERO MONTH

Remembering Our Lifetime Donors

BY | ROSE OSER

THE PROSPERO SOCIETY

THE PROSPERO SOCIETY RECOGNIZES LOYAL AND generous A.C.T. patrons who have provided for A.C.T. in their estate plans. Lifetime membership is extended to individuals who support A.C.T. through a bequest by will or living trust, or through other planned gifts that provide income for life and tax benefits to the donor.

Each November, A.C.T. celebrates Prospero Month to honor our forward-thinking members and to shine a spotlight on the benefits of legacy giving and membership in the Prospero Society. This year, we are beginning a new tradition of featuring exemplary members of the Prospero Society whose gifts have truly made a difference at the theater. Our first Prospero Society honoree, Tom Maryanski, passed away on December 24, 2013, at the age of 68.

Tom’s partner, Marla Ferrara, tells us, “Tom was an extremely kind, gentle, and generous human being in the truest sense of the word, yet he was also very successful as cofounder of Tiburon Systems, which provided defense software to the U.S. military. As director of software engineering at Tiburon, he supervised a staff of more than 200 and traveled all over the world for his job and for pleasure. He loved the theater and was a season ticket holder for many, many years. I came along just for the last three years and was lucky enough to join in that activity.”

A.C.T. was lucky, too, to have Tom as a patron and Prospero Society member. He first came to A.C.T. as a guest of his good friends Alan and Susan Fritz (also Prospero Society members). Knowing Tom was always up for any new event, they invited him to attend a production, and when he did, he was hooked. Tom loved the production so much that he quickly became a season ticket holder, and then Tom and the Fritzes (and later Marla) began the tradition of attending A.C.T. productions together, which they continued for more than 40 years.

We are grateful to Tom for providing funds that will help ensure A.C.T.’s ability to provide professional theater productions, actor training, and arts education for the San Francisco community well into the future. Thank you.
THE VIP LOUNGE

THIS SEASON, A.C.T. NAMED THE GEARY VIP LOUNGE

“The Mort,” in honor of Mortimer Fleishhacker III. A significant member of the A.C.T. family, Mort served on the A.C.T. Board of Trustees and played an important role in coordinating the restoration of The Geary Theater after the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake. His father worked with Cyril Magnin and Benjamin Swig to bring A.C.T. to San Francisco in 1967.

Mort’s wife, Frannie, carries on the legacy of the A.C.T. founders. She is a member of the A.C.T. Board of Trustees, a Co-Chair of the Producers Circle, and a valued member of the Prospero Society. In 2005, Frannie made a significant impact on A.C.T. in her own right by suggesting a special Producers Circle dinner on the Geary stage. This event has now become a favorite A.C.T. tradition. Frannie has also been instrumental in supporting the M.F.A. Program by serving as a member of the M.F.A. Board and awarding an annual scholarship in her husband’s name. We applaud Mort and Frannie Fleishhacker for their longtime support of A.C.T. and for ensuring that professional theater thrives in the San Francisco community.

CAREY PERLOFF (A.C.T. Artistic Director) is celebrating her 24th season as artistic director of A.C.T. This fall, she directs Monstress, adapted by Philip Kan Gotanda and Sean San José from the short stories by Lysley Tenorio. Last season, she staged the New York premiere of Tom Stoppard’s Indian Ink at Roundabout Theatre Company (nominated for a Lucille Lortel Award for Best Revival) before bringing the show to A.C.T. Recent A.C.T. productions also include Testament, Underneath the Lintel, Arcadia, Elektra (coproduced by the Getty Villa in Malibu), Endgame and Play, Scorched, The Homecoming, Tosca Café (cocreated with choreographer Val Caniparoli; toured Canada), and Racine’s Phèdre in a coproduction with the Stratford Festival. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has also directed for A.C.T. José Rivera’s Boleros for the Disenchanted; the world premieres of Philip Kan Gotanda’s After the War (A.C.T. commission) and her own adaptation (with Paul Walsh) of A Christmas Carol; the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s The Invention of Love and Indian Ink, and Harold Pinter’s Celebration; A.C.T.-commissioned translations/adaptations of Hecuba, The Misanthrope, Enrico IV, Mary Stuart, Uncle Vanya, A Mother, and The Voysey Inheritance (adapted by David Mamet); the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy; and major revivals of 'Tis Pity She’s a Whore, The Government Inspector, Happy End (including a critically acclaimed cast album recording), A Doll’s House, Waiting for Godot, The Three Sisters, The Threepenny Opera, Old Times, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditors, The Room, Home, The Tempest, and Stoppard’s Rock ‘n’ Roll, Travesties, The Real Thing, and Night and Day. Perloff’s work for A.C.T. also includes Marie Ndiaye’s Hilda, the world premieres of Marc Blitzstein’s No for an Answer and David Lang/Mac Wellman’s The Difficulty of Crossing a Field, and the West Coast premiere of her own play The Colossus of Rhodes (Susan Smith Blackburn Award finalist).

Perloff is also an award-winning playwright. Her play Kinship premiered at the Théâtre de Paris last October in a production starring Isabelle Adjani and Niels Schneider and was produced at the Williamstown Theater Festival last summer, starring Cynthia Nixon and directed by Jo Bonney. Waiting for the Flood has received workshops at A.C.T., New York Stage and Film, and Roundabout Theatre. Higher was developed at New York Stage and Film, won the 2011 Blanche and Irving Laurie Foundation Theatre Visions Fund Award, and received its world premiere in February 2012 in San Francisco. Luminescence Dating premiered in New York at The Ensemble Studio Theatre, was coproduced by A.C.T. and Magic Theatre, and is published by Dramatists Play Service. The Colossus of Rhodes was workshopped at the O’Neill National Playwrights Conference, premiered at Lucille Lortel’s White Barn Theatre, and was produced at A.C.T. in 2003.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1988 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A recipient of France’s Chevalier de l’Ordre des Arts et des Lettres and the National Corporate Theatre Fund’s 2007 Artistic Achievement Award, Perloff received a B.A. Phi Beta Kappa in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years, and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. Perloff is on the board of the Hermitage Artist Retreat in Sarasota, Florida, and is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas. Perloff is the author of Beautiful Chaos: A Life in the Theater (City Lights, March 2015).

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.’s artistic wing. She has also taught and directed in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught introductory, intermediate, and advanced acting. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages at various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University’s La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., California Shakespeare Theater, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep; and in England at the Barbican Theatre (London) and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a B.A. from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from Yale School of Drama.
