AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.’s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball,
A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater During the past four decades, more than 320 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of more than seven million people; today, A.C.T.’s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 230,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.’s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award. In 2001, to celebrate
A.C.T.’s 35th anniversary and Perloff’s 10th season, A.C.T. created a new core company of actors, who have become instrumental in every aspect of its work.

Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater (now American Conservatory Theater) in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and financial stability. In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which now serves as a venue for student productions and exciting new plays. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, now serves 3,000 students every year. It was the first actor training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington,
Anika Noni Rose, and Elizabeth Banks are among the conservatory’s distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

Dear Friends,

Big open-hearted holiday greetings to every one of you! Whether you’re here for the very first time, or because A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is an indispensible part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created five seasons ago, grew out of the very depths of A.C.T.’s being. We are, uniquely, an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned M.F.A. programs in America, and because we are blessed with a truly one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory in which eight- to nineteen-year-olds study and perform and grow, we knew that A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol would feature an extraordinary range of artists of all ages, collaborating together on this exquisite tale of redemption and transformation.

This year, our Carol is particularly blessed by the presence of so many of our core acting company members: Gregory Wallace (Bob Cratchit), René Augesen (Mrs. Cratchit), Jack Willis (Marley), and Anthony Fusco (understudying Scrooge). It also features 21 children from our Young Conservatory and the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2010. This is an incredible gift: a chance for the whole A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists of all ages.

Paul and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of three ghosts who perform a series of interventions on Scrooge until his empathy is reawakened and he begins his life anew. Our magnificent theater is the perfect envelope for this tale of vision and transformation. On January 10, 2010, the American Conservatory Theater turns 100 years old. It was conceived a century ago as a magical space, the perfect theater for the “joyous [city] who always wears flowers in her hair,” as the San Francisco Chronicle exclaimed when the building first opened its doors. It took remarkable craftsmanship, dedication, artistry, and attention to detail to bring this theater to life, and the building serves as a benchmark and an inspiration to all of us, artists and audience, all these years later. We hope you all will join us on January 9, 2010, for a festive community open house, to mark the birthday of this extraordinary playhouse and to toast its glorious future!

Now more than ever, the themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal resonate, as we struggle with the effects of a global recession on our cities, our families, our morale, and our well-being. It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. We hope you feel that you’ve given yourselves a gift by being here, and we wish you a fulfilling and empathetic year ahead. I invite you to return again and again to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s extraordinary 2009–10 subscription season.

Yours,

Carey Perloff, Artistic Director

The children performing in A Christmas Carol are students in the A.C.T. Young Conservatory.
Young Conservatory Performance Monitor—Christine L. Plowright
In 1843, the year that he wrote A Christmas Carol, the world belonged to Charles Dickens. His first book, Sketches by Boz, had been published in 1836, and his career had been on an upward trajectory since. Boz had been followed by one success after another, including The Pickwick Papers, Oliver Twist, and Nicholas Nickleby. He married Catherine Hogarth in 1836 and by 1839 was living with her and their four children (six more would follow) in a fine house in the Regent’s Park section of London with marble columns in the dining room, rich mahogany-paneled doors, a well-stocked library, a walled garden, and a coach house complete with coach and groom. Every inch the dandy, he was instantly recognizable with wavy brown hair down to his shoulders. His velvet and satin waistcoats in deep greens and reds, often embroidered with brightly colored flowers, were festooned with gold watch chains matched with gold tiepins and rings. These were not affectations but irrefutable expressions of physical vitality and intellectual exuberance. He was a character of his own creation, and he knew it: he nicknamed himself “The Inimitable.”

Dickens’s energy could not be held in check by writing alone. In his early years, the books came almost unbidden; he could be found in the parlor amidst family and friends, contributing to the lively conversation while simultaneously working on the latest installment of Oliver Twist. Games, jokes, puns, songs, laughter poured from him around the dinner table and hearth, which he dominated with his oversized presence; after dark he stalked London, including its worst slums, often until sunrise, working off an inexhaustible fund of excess energy and exercising keen powers of observation and memory. He struck one, a biographer wrote, as “all fire and charm.”

Beneath the blaze thrown off by his outward life was the darkness of another one, as vital to his work as the light. His vivacity, vigor, and high spirits were complemented by driving ambition, restlessness, and profound dissatisfaction. Something in the darkness had created the need for the light; the outward joy was rooted in desolation. Where the light took the form of boundless comic energy in his work, the darkness emerged as the melodrama of innocent people, children mostly, abandoned by parents and endangered by the callous, greedy, and cruel.

Where did the darkness originate? In 1822, when he was ten, the family moved from the town of Chatham to London, where the financial condition of his father, John (never strong to begin with), went from bad to worse. Young Charles, who had a voracious appetite for learning and reading, was taken out of school and sent to the pawn shop with the meager family belongings. Among the first items to go was the small library they’d brought from Chatham.

In 1824, as John Dickens’s debts mounted, Charles was put to work. For twelve hours a day, six days a week, he pasted labels on jars of bootblack in a creaking, rat-infested warehouse on the Thames. Soon after, his father was sent to Marshalsea Prison for indebtedness, and, while the rest of the family went to live there with him, Charles was on his own, living in lodgings. When not laboring at the warehouse or visiting his family in the Marshalsea, the solitary 12-year-old boy walked the city, almost always hungry. After about five months, John Dickens was released, and Charles, over the objection of his mother, who thought the family needed the money, was taken out of the blacking house and returned to school. Although his time in the ramshackle warehouse on the water was relatively short, Dickens never got over the experience or forgave his parents for thrusting him into a frightening, alien world where he had to survive on his own.

No words can express the secret agony of my soul. . . . The deep remembrance of the sense I had of being utterly neglected and hopeless; of the shame I felt in my position; of the misery it was to my young heart to believe that, day by day, what I had learned, and thought, and delighted in . . . was passing away from me, never to be brought back any more; cannot be written. My whole nature was so penetrated with the grief and humiliation of such considerations, that even now, famous and caressed and happy, I often forget in my dreams that I have a dear wife and children; even that I am a man; and wander desolately back to that time in my life.

Dickens never spoke of the episode to anyone other than his friend and biographer John Forster. Neither his wife nor children learned of it until they read about it in Forster’s biography after Dickens’s death. For all his charm and volubility, there was in Dickens a well of feelings he never revealed; he held this inner life close. None of the people who knew, or thought they knew, the ebullient author of later years had any notion of the darkness he carried inside and could not forget, but as of yet could only approach sidewise in his work through a generalized, if sharp, sympathy for the poor.

A number of events led to the writing of A Christmas Carol; the two most immediate balanced the pulls in him toward light and dark. A speaking engagement in the northwest industrial city of Manchester in the fall of 1843 took him to the Manchester Athenaeum, a charitable organization that provided education, exercise, and culture to the working and middle classes. As he looked down from the platform over “the bright eyes and beaming faces” of the crowd, he spoke of his gladness that it provided outlets for body and mind amid the clanking machinery of the city’s booming textile factories. Then, returning to London, his walks through the city took him to several Ragged Schools. These were free schools run by volunteers who taught the poorest of the poor. He described the sight in a letter to his friend the philanthropist Angela Burdett-Coutts. The school was held in three most wretched rooms on the first floor of a rotten house: every plank, and timber, and brick, and lath, and piece of plaster shakes as you walk. I have very seldom seen . . . anything so shocking as the dire neglect of soul and body as exhibited among these children. . . . To find anything within them—who know nothing of affection, care, love, or kindness of any sort—to which it is possible to appeal, is, at first, like a search for the philosopher’s stone.

Dickens was so appalled by the conditions and so inspired by the efforts of the volunteer teachers that, in addition to seeking Burdett-Coutts’s aid, he suggested to the editors of the Edinburgh Review that he write an article about them. Almost as soon as he suggested it, however, he put the idea aside in favor of writing a book for the holiday season: A Christmas Carol.

A Christmas Carol tells us, among other things, that a man like Scrooge cannot live fully in the light of the present until he comes face to face with the darkness of his past.
The story poured out of him. “[T]he little book established over him a strange mastery that drove it on to completion before the end of November,” writes Edgar Johnson, Dickens’s first major 20th-century biographer. Dickens himself wrote that as he worked, he wept and laughed, and wept again, and excited himself in a most extraordinary manner in the composition; and thinking whereof he walked about the black streets of London 15 and 20 miles many a night when all sober folks had gone to bed.

He felt a great release when it was done. He described to a friend how he “broke out like a madman,” and during the holidays that followed he threw himself into festivities as he’d never done before. “Such dinings, such dancings, such conjurings, such blind-man’s-buffing, such theatre-goings, such kissings-out of old years and kissings-in of new ones never took place in these parts before,” he wrote.

What had A Christmas Carol unlocked that caused a release of energy extraordinary even for him? In it, Dickens didn’t use the terrible memories that had haunted him for two decades, but he made a discovery that would, in fits and starts over the next few years, allow him to turn them into literature for the first time. For A Christmas Carol is the story of a man redeemed by his memories. For years, Ebenezer Scrooge had either blocked them out or chased them away, and as a result, could not live as a whole person. He worked, he ate, he slept, and rarely if ever raised his eyes above his ledger to see the hunger and need or the happiness of the people around him. The story tells us, among other things, that a man like Scrooge cannot live fully in the light of the present until he comes face to face with the darkness of his past. This is exactly what he does. As Scrooge watches his painful childhood and youth, he remembers, too, the happier times he has also forgotten. The pain of the lonely young Ebenezer is assuaged by the love of a sister; a boy abandoned by his father finds comfort and love in a family of Fezziwigs. “Do You Remember?” asks a song in A.C.T.’s version, and the answer is crucial. The man without a past has no future; in recovering his, Scrooge finds a life, a family, and a purpose.

Dickens couldn’t yet draw directly on the experiences of his childhood for A Christmas Carol, but in it he created a character who could face the darkness in his past and, rather than make an orphan of it, acknowledge its value. That opened the way to David Copperfield and Little Dorrit, rich novels that draw on the full range of Dickens’s life and experience, both the darkness and the light. Carol was Dickens’s gift to the world, and to himself, as well.

THE CHILD IN ALL OF US

The notion of ongoing training for actors at every stage of their careers has been a fundamental part of A.C.T.'s mission since the company's founding in 1965. Our annual production of A Christmas Carol—written specifically to include the entire third-year class of the Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program and almost two dozen Young Conservatory (YC) students, in addition to some of the Bay Area’s most beloved actors—is a powerful example of that philosophy in practice.

"My first year here we had an actor in the company whose name was Sidney Walker," remembers YC Director Craig Slaight, "one of the oldest people in the company at the time. He was playing Scrooge. I came through the office reception area one day, and I saw him sitting, talking to the boy playing Tiny Tim. I thought, That’s about as rich as it gets, somebody in his 70s talking to an eight-year-old about the work."

Taking the notion of intergenerational training a step further, A.C.T. formalized a mentorship program that pairs Carol’s M.F.A. Program cast members (who are themselves mentored by actors in A.C.T.’s core company) with younger cohorts from the YC. Before rehearsals begin with the full cast, the M.F.A. Program and YC actors come together for a week of classes, where they discuss the world of Dickens’s play and begin to learn the period movement and voice technique required for the show, as well as the elements of professionalism they will need to know when they step into what is, for many, their first professional rehearsal process.

A rich dialogue ensues, and deep and often lasting bonds are formed between the older and younger students. “It’s a once-in-a-lifetime experience for the kids and for the M.F.A. students,” says Slaight. “I know it pays off onstage. But I also think it pays off in their lives, in discovering the humanness of creating art, in a place that’s very different from most theaters.”

Opportunities for YC and M.F.A. Program students to study and play together have grown to include coproductions of new plays by writers commissioned to write for them by the YC’s internationally acclaimed New Plays Program. Recent collaborations have included Amy Herzog’s The Wendy Play, Rob Ackerman’s Volleygirls, and Riot, by Irish writer Ursula Rani Sarna, which premieres at Zeum Theater in April 2010. Last summer, the multigenerational Riot team traveled to England to develop the play as part of the YC’s ongoing exchange program with Theatre Royal Bath.

In addition to these performance opportunities, M.F.A. Program and YC students often meet in the classroom during the summer, as many of the M.F.A. actors spend their “vacation” teaching their skills to children in YC programs. “I’m excited because I’ve seen the way that mentoring the YC has changed the M.F.A. students,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. “On the one hand, the YC actors develop relationships with actors who aren’t adults to them, and on the other hand, when the M.F.A. Program actors teach, they solidify the things that they’ve been learning themselves.”

“W. C. Fields said, ‘Never act with dogs and children,’” adds Slaight. “I don’t think he would have had a good time at A.C.T. We celebrate the child in all of us here all the time.”

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A NEXT GENERATION CAMPAIGN DONOR

Three years ago, A.C.T. embarked upon the most ambitious fundraising effort in our history—The Next Generation Campaign—to raise $30 million and create A.C.T.’s first-ever endowment. With the campaign scheduled to conclude on December 31, 2009, Marilee Gardner, a lifelong theater lover and A.C.T. trustee, seized the opportunity to make a meaningful, lasting commitment to fostering the rich tradition of excellent actor training at A.C.T. by creating A.C.T.’s first endowed M.F.A. Program scholarship fund. Gardner’s visionary philanthropy will allow some of the most talented actors of future generations to study in A.C.T.’s rigorous actor-training program. She explains why excellent actor training is so important to her:

I majored in theater in college, but my love of live theater started much earlier when I appeared onstage at age five as a teddy bear. Then, when I saw Rene Auberjonois [an original company member] in Charley’s Aunt in 1967, I was so astounded by his beyond-brilliant acting that I knew I had found something special at A.C.T. Over the years, A.C.T. has attracted the best actors of each generation to this stage in bitingly courageous productions, and I confess to seeing shows over and over again, maybe five or six times just to see the actors perform. You read a book or see a movie multiple times—why not the theater?

That is why I feel it is important to endow the arts, and actor training in particular, so that actors can be the voice of passion, of beauty, of political upheaval when every other voice has been muted. I wanted to make a meaningful gift to A.C.T. that would live long beyond our lifetimes in the brilliant performances of the actors trained in our conservatory.

A subscriber for more than 25 years, Gardner lives in Atherton with her dog, OhMy, and joined the A.C.T. board of trustees in 2006. She frequently attends opening night performances with one of her sons, Bill or Michael, and looks forward to seeing the M.F.A. Program class of 2010’s showcase tour this coming April.

More information about The Next Generation Campaign is available in Fred’s Columbia Room in the lower level of the theater. Please contact Tim Whalen, Director of External Affairs, at 415.439.2472 to discuss how to make your gift to the campaign.
In si d e

A.C.T. has long been committed to the notion that playwrights do their best work in community with other artists, and that the development of vibrant writing for the stage depends on investing in and nurturing writers’ talents. As part of this continuing effort to develop new plays, adaptations, and translations, in September 2003 A.C.T. launched the successful First Look program with a production of Philip Kan Gotanda’s Yohen.

Dedicated to meeting the individual needs of the artists for their unique projects, First Look has taken a variety of approaches to new work development. Some pieces, like Gotanda’s play and José Rivera’s Brainpeople, have been performed in fully realized productions. Other workshops have wrapped up without any presentation component, but have given writers open access to A.C.T.’s skilled core company, Master of Fine Arts Program actors, and other resident artists in developing their work. Between those two extremes are private table readings and semistaged presentations, public showings of works in development, and open rehearsals and discussions with the artists about their nascent ideas. “We strive to develop projects according to different models, each one customized to the needs of the specific work and writer,” explains Artistic Consultant Beatrice Basso, current curator of First Look. “We do not want to be bound to a one-model-fits-all programming paradigm for new works. The length of a workshop and what is expected from it varies based on the actual needs of a project at a certain point in time.”

Although First Look is not restricted to a specific period within a season—it is rare, in fact, when exploration of new work is not happening in our artistic department, M.F.A. Program, and/or Young Conservatory—this January promises a rich concentration of First Look projects. For three weeks at the top of the new year, A.C.T. company members, core faculty, and students will collaborate with writers, actors, and directors on seven different projects. Among these artists are promising emerging playwright Christina Anderson, iconic author/director Ping Chong, Bay Area–born and –raised actress/singer/writer Eisa Davis, playwright and A.C.T. alumnus Sharr White, and, an A.C.T. favorite, Gotanda.

Each artist will come to A.C.T. with a creation at a different stage of development. Gotanda, for example, will arrive with a finished draft of I Dream of Chang and Eng, a play about the beginnings, adventures, fights, and reconciliations of 19th-century conjoined twins, from their departure from the Chinese province of Siam to the spotlight in the world of American attractions. Alternatively, the workshop of Anderson’s Blacktop Sky—a nearly finished piece about a girl who comes to care for a supposedly crazy young man in the courtyard of her housing project—will focus on the physical expression of the play under the direction of Stephen Buescher, head of physical theater at A.C.T. Meanwhile, Davis will begin working on a brand-new piece, which may or may not have something to do with air travel and/or optimistic perspectives on climate change. “Each will bring stories we are eager to discover,” says Basso. “I can’t wait for all the artists to be here and see the seeds grow. It can be a messy process, but also the most fertile and glorious.”

A.C.T. and the San Francisco Conservatory of Music Tell a Soldier’s Tale

On November 14, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program and the New Music Ensemble of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music (SFCM) collaborated for the very first time. Students from both programs presented Igor Stravinsky’s rarely performed The Soldier’s Tale, a cautionary parable about a Russian soldier who unwittingly makes a deal with the devil, trading his beloved fiddle in exchange for economic success.

Jointly guided by A.C.T. Associate Artist Giles Havergal and the artistic director of the SFCM’s New Music Ensemble, Nicole Paiement, The Soldier’s Tale was a “unique opportunity for our students to collaborate with their counterparts at another leading and respected San Francisco organization that shares our commitment to training future artistic leaders,” says A.C.T. Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. Paiement adds, “For us, this was a long-dreamt-of opportunity to collaborate with actors and dancers in the creation of theater works other than opera. Finally, with The Soldier’s Tale, we had the perfect platform to launch such a collaboration with A.C.T. We hope this will be the beginning of a long and fruitful partnership to create many similar projects.”

The Soldier’s Tale, part of the SFCM’s BluePrint series, which is committed to building new music, featured Dan Wood Clegg, Marisa Duchowny, Patrick Lane, and Richard Prioleau, all members of the A.C.T. M.F.A. Program class of 2011. “The opportunity to collaborate with a group of very talented classical musicians while furthering our own work was incredibly exciting,” says Lane. “For me, this project has ignited a passion very close to my heart, as I am, myself, a classical musician and have been for 20 years. Stravinsky’s score is beautifully surprising and virtuosic in the brilliance it requires of the musicians. The end result was almost Wagnerian, in that all the different pieces came together to create this ‘total work.’ Ultimately, I think this project was a true representation of what arts collaboration can be.”

M.F.A. ON THE MAINSTAGE

We train our students to light up any stage in the world. What better test of their artistry than A.C.T.’s very own mainstage? The third year of the A.C.T. M.F.A. Program is designed to provide students a wide variety of public performance opportunities, including roles in professional productions at the American Conservatory Theater—like A Christmas Carol, which includes the entire graduating class each year. As Actors’ Equity Association Interns, the students work towards earning their union membership while collaborating with consummately professional actors in one of the most spectacular venues in the country.

In addition, this January Sophia Holman and Mairin Lee, both members of the M.F.A. Program class of 2010, will join the Stratford Shakespeare Festival cast of Jean Racine’s Phèdre as, respectively, Panope and Ismène. Following Phèdre, classmates Nick Childress, Caroline Hewitt, and Omozé Idehenre will join members of A.C.T.’s core acting company in John Doyle’s innovative production of A Caucasian Chalk Circle. Come watch them shine!

MEET MAGGIE RASTETTER

A.C.T. M.F.A. PROGRAM CLASS OF 2012

In each program of the A.C.T. mainstage season, we are pleased to introduce to you one of A.C.T.’s remarkable first-year M.F.A. 8 students. In this issue, meet Maggie Rastetter.

NICKNAME Mags, Magma.

BIRTHPLACE Portland, Oregon.

HOMETOWN Portland, Oregon.

FIRST THEATER EXPERIENCE I played Lady Macbeth in the fourth grade. Talk about a breakout role!

FAVORITE THEATER EXPERIENCE Playing Vivian in Naomi Iizuka’s Aloha, Say the Pretty Girls. A real feeling of ensemble emerged almost immediately, which inspired a lot of play. The 15-minute monologue at the end of Act I required so much of me—it was a test of endurance every night. I had an enormous fake pregnant belly and opened a plant store in Alaska! I floated in bubbles! I learned to hula! Iizuka writes for actors to have fun, and, to put it simply, it was the most fun I’ve ever had.

IF I COULD PLAY ANY ROLE, I WOULD WANT TO PLAY Nell in Endgame, Martha in Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, Ruth in The Homecoming, or Lady Anne Neville in Richard III.

MY STORY I think I can attribute a large majority of my journey to well-timed, well-placed words of encouragement. I’ve always had the instinct to perform but lacked confidence. The decision to carve a career for myself in the arts was too big, too daunting to ever seriously consider, despite it being where I felt at home. I was fortunate enough to have a support group of family, friends, teachers, and even complete strangers. I can’t stress enough how important other people have been in my development as an artist. Singular commendations have proved to be the nurturing force behind my creativity.

RANDOM FACT I have an extensive collection of argyle socks.

EDUCATION I hold a B.S. in theater from Skidmore College.

SPECIAL SKILLS I pick up foreign languages quickly, and I am a goddess in the kitchen.

HOBBIES Traveling the world, photography, and fostering dogs.

RECOMMENDATIONS Books: Lolita, by Vladimir Nabokov; In Cold Blood, by Truman Capote; and Infinite Jest: A Novel, by David Foster Wallace. Films: Badlands and Harold and Maude. Music: Bon Iver’s For Emma, Forever Ago has been my favorite album for the last couple of years. Recently, I’d say Columbus’d the Whim, by Holiday Shores, plays loudly and often in my apartment.
DID YOU KNOW . . .

. . . that A.C.T.'s historic theater is celebrating its 100th birthday in January 2010? We invite you to honor this momentous anniversary with us in a Landmark Celebration open to the entire Bay Area community.

On Saturday, January 9, we will throw open the doors of the American Conservatory Theater from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. for a free daylong celebration of craft, design, and performance. The first half of the day (10 a.m.–1 p.m.) will be dedicated exclusively to A.C.T. subscribers and donors, to honor your generous, steadfast support over the past 40+ years. In the afternoon the festivities will be open to the general public, and everyone is welcome to join in the fun.

During both sessions, the entire building will be open from top to bottom for self-directed walk-about tours, with A.C.T. staff on hand at every turn to tell the behind-the-scenes story of San Francisco’s grandest playhouse. This is a great chance to explore all the nooks and crannies most of us never get to see, from the uppermost lighting catwalk to the depths of the trap room beneath the stage—as well as a rare chance to have your moment in the spotlight standing on one of the most glorious stages in U.S. history.

A host of entertaining activities are also scheduled throughout the day, including:

- A reading by actors in A.C.T.’s core company and Master of Fine Arts Program of George Ade’s Father and the Boys, the play that inaugurated the theater (then known as the Columbia) on January 10, 1910
- An inside look at the magic of the theater, featuring demonstrations by A.C.T. professionals of the tricks of the theatrical trade, including stage combat, wigs, makeup, costumes, and stage technology
- An open Young Conservatory cabaret rehearsal, where you can observe A.C.T.’s talented young students in the process of creating a musical performance
- Historical displays honoring the people, productions, and artistry of the theater over the decades
- Prize drawings and other opportunities to win A.C.T. subscriptions and memorabilia
- Complimentary light refreshments and birthday treats, served in Fred’s Columbia Room in the lower lobby of the theater

A.C.T. subscribers and donors will also be treated in the morning to an exclusive sneak peek at our upcoming production of The Tosca Project, as San Francisco Ballet legends Lorena Feijoo and Pascal Molat perform a beautiful pas de deux from this remarkable interdisciplinary work (which will premiere on the A.C.T. stage in June). The performance will be followed by a gathering of all A.C.T. subscribers and donors, who are invited to a group photo and celebratory toast honoring the centennial birthday of San Francisco’s splendid dramatic dame.

EVERY DOLLAR YOU GIVE MAKES GREAT THEATER HAPPEN!
Did you know that A.C.T. is a nonprofit organization, and that the price of your ticket covers just 60% of our expenses? Your gift to the Annual Fund helps make up the rest. No matter what the amount, you can play an important role at A.C.T.
As a donor, you’ll receive exciting benefits designed to bring you closer to the work you see onstage. Get an inside look at the making of live theater with a visit to our prop and scene shop or costume backstage, or a technical rehearsal.

AT THE THEATER
The American Conservatory Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
A.C.T.–branded merchandise, as well as books, scripts, and Words on Plays, are on sale in the main lobby, at the Ticket Services office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the auditorium.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Rest rooms are located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower lobby level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the theater. Please call 415.749.2ACT in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.
