Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Executive Director Ellen Richard, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.’s creative work.

A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater (now known as the American Conservatory Theater) in 1967; more than 320 A.C.T. productions have since been performed to a combined audience of more than seven million people. Today A.C.T. is recognized internationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting, honored with a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training (1979) and the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award (1996). In 2001, A.C.T. began producing alternative work at Zeum Theater, which serves as a venue for conservatory productions and exciting new plays.

The first actor training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree, A.C.T.’s conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, serves 3,000 students every year. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America’s actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.
Season’s Greeting

Wishing you the very best this holiday season and a warm and prosperous New Year.
Dear Friends,

Big open-hearted holiday greetings to everyone! Whether you’re here for the very first time, or because A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol is an indispensable part of your annual solstice celebration, we’re thrilled and honored to have you with us.

This version of Dickens’s beautiful story, which Paul Walsh and I created six seasons ago, grew out of the very depths of A.C.T.’s being. We are, uniquely, an intergenerational theater in which children and adults, professionals and students, masters and emerging artists train, create, and play together on a regular basis. Because we house one of the most renowned M.F.A. programs in America, and because we are blessed with a truly one-of-a-kind Young Conservatory in which eight- to nineteen-year-olds study and perform and grow, we made sure that A.C.T.’s A Christmas Carol would feature an extraordinary range of artists of all ages, collaborating together on this exquisite tale of redemption and transformation.

This year, our Carol is, as always, blessed by the presence of some of the Bay Area’s most beloved veteran actors—including Jim Carpenter, our inimitable Scrooge—familiar to A.C.T. audiences from numerous productions on our magnificent stage. It also features 19 children from our Young Conservatory and the entire M.F.A. Program class of 2011. This is an incredible gift: a chance for the larger A.C.T. family to work together and for you, our Carol audience, to see the breadth of A.C.T.’s commitment to artists of all ages.

Paul Walsh and I wanted this Carol to salute the power of the imagination to transform even the crustiest of souls. Dickens’s novella is exceptionally theatrical: much of it is written in dialogue, and it centers around the striking presence of four ghosts who perform a series of “interventions” on Scrooge until his heart is reawakened and he begins his life anew. Now more than ever, the themes of Dickens’s story of greed and renewal resonate, as we struggle to hold on to our empathy and imagination in an increasingly divisive world. It is worth remembering that Dickens trusted the artistic imagination to lift us out of the darkness and set us on a more inspiring path. It is also worth noting, for those of you who are here with children, that it has been proved again and again that when young people are exposed to the transformative power of live theater, their scholastic work and world view open up in wonderful and surprising ways. It is our hope at A.C.T. to become even more deeply engaged in the lives of young people in the Bay Area in the years to come. Meanwhile, we hope you feel that you’ve given yourselves a gift by being here, and we wish you a fulfilling and empathetic year ahead. I invite you to return this winter and spring to experience the artists and artistry of A.C.T.’s extraordinary 2010–11 subscription season.

Yours,

Carey Perloff

In 1843, the year that he wrote A Christmas Carol, the world belonged to Charles Dickens. His first book, Sketches by Boz, had been published in 1836, and his career had been on an upward trajectory since. Boz had been followed by one success after another, including The Pickwick Papers, Oliver Twist, and Nicholas Nickleby. He married Catherine Hogarth in 1836 and by 1839 was living with her and their four children (six more would follow) in a fine house in the Regent’s Park section of London with marble columns in the dining room, rich mahogany-paneled doors, a well-stocked library, a walled garden, and a coach house complete with coach and groom. Every inch the dandy, he was instantly recognizable with wavy brown hair down to his shoulders. His velvet and satin waistcoats in deep greens and reds, often embroidered with brightly colored flowers, were festooned with gold watch chains matched with gold tiepins and rings. These were not affectations but irrefutable expressions of physical vitality and intellectual exuberance. He was a character of his own creation, and he knew it: he nicknamed himself “The Inimitable.”

Dickens’s energy could not be held in check by writing alone. In his early years, the books came almost unbidden; he could be found in the parlor amidst family and friends, contributing to the lively conversation while simultaneously working on the latest installment of Oliver Twist. Games, jokes, puns, songs, laughter poured from him around the dinner table and hearth, which he dominated with his oversized presence; after dark he stalked London, including its worst slums, often until sunrise, working off an inexhaustible fund of excess energy and exercising keen powers of observation and memory. He struck one, a biographer wrote, as “all fire and charm.”

Beneath the blaze thrown off by his outward life was the darkness of another one, as vital to his work as the light. His vivacity, vigor, and high spirits were complemented by driving ambition, restlessness, and profound dissatisfaction. Something in the darkness had created the need for the light; the outward joy was rooted in desolation. Where the light took the form of boundless comic energy in his work, the darkness emerged as the melodrama of innocent people, children mostly, abandoned by parents and endangered by the callous, greedy, and cruel.

Where did the darkness originate? In 1822, when he was ten, the family moved from the town of Chatham to London, where the financial condition of his father, John (never strong to begin with), went from bad to worse. Young Charles, who had a voracious appetite for learning and reading, was taken out of school and sent to the pawn shop with the meager family belongings. Among the first items to go was the small library they’d brought from Chatham.

In 1824, as John Dickens’s debts mounted, Charles was put to work. For twelve hours a day, six days a week, he pasted labels on jars of bootblack in a creaking, rat-infested warehouse on the Thames. Soon after, his father was sent to Marshalsea Prison for indebtedness, and, while the rest of the family went to live there with him, Charles was on his own, living in lodgings. When not laboring at the warehouse or visiting his family in the Marshalsea, the solitary 12-year-old boy walked the city, almost always hungry. After about five months, John Dickens was released, and Charles, over the objection of his mother, who thought the family needed the money, was taken out of the blacking house and returned to school. Although his time in the ramshackle warehouse on the water was relatively short, Dickens never got over the experience or forgave his parents for thrusting him into a frightening, alien world where he had to survive on his own.

No words can express the secret agony of my soul. . . . The deep remembrance of the sense I had of being utterly neglected and hopeless; of the shame I felt in my position; of the misery it was to my young heart to believe that, day by day, what I had learned, and thought, and delighted in . . . was passing away from me, never to be brought back any more; cannot be written. My whole nature was so penetrated with the grief and humiliation of such considerations, that even now, famous and caressed and happy, I often forget in my dreams that I have a dear wife and children; even that I am a man; and wander desolately back to that time in my life.

Dickens never spoke of the episode to anyone other than his friend and biographer John Forster. Neither his wife nor children learned of it until they read about it in Forster’s biography after Dickens’s death. For all his charm and volubility, there was in Dickens a well of feelings he never revealed; he held this inner life close. None of the people who knew, or thought they knew, the ebullient author of later years had any notion of the darkness he carried inside and could not forget, but as of yet could only approach sidewise in his work through a generalized, if sharp, sympathy for the poor.

A number of events led to the writing of A Christmas Carol; the two most immediate balanced the pulls in him toward light and dark. A speaking engagement in the northwest industrial city of Manchester in the fall of 1843 took him to the Manchester Athenaeum, a charitable organization that provided education, exercise, and culture to the working and middle classes. As he looked down from the platform over “the bright eyes and beaming faces” of the crowd, he spoke of his gladness that it provided outlets for body and mind amid the clanging machinery of the city’s booming textile factories. Then, returning to London, his walks through the city took him to several Ragged Schools. These were free schools run by volunteers who taught the poorest of the poor. He described the sight in a letter to his friend the philanthropist Angela Burdett-Coutts. The school was held in three most wretched rooms on the first floor of a rotten house: every plank, and timber, and brick, and lath, and piece of plaster shakes as you walk. I have very seldom seen . . . anything so shocking as the dire neglect of soul and body as exhibited among these children. . . . To find anything within them—who know nothing of affection, care, love, or kindness of any sort—to which it is possible to appeal, is, at first, like a search for the philosopher’s stone.

Dickens was so appalled by the conditions and so inspired by the efforts of the volunteer teachers that, in addition to seeking Burdett-Coutts’s aid, he suggested to the editors of the Edinburgh Review that he write an article about them. Almost as soon as he suggested it, however, he put the idea aside in favor of writing a book for the holiday season: A Christmas Carol.
WHAT THE DICKENS?

CHARLES DICKENS was born February 7, 1812, in Portsmouth, England. The eldest son of a large middle class family, he experienced real poverty when his father was imprisoned for outstanding debts, and 12-year-old Charles was forced to leave home and work in a London factory. The experience deeply affected the boy and served as creative inspiration for the writer, whose many novels naturalistically depict the difficult conditions of 19th-century British working-class life. Dickens later went on to work as an office boy and a reporter and experienced instant success as an author when The Pickwick Papers, a series of comic narratives written to accompany artistic engravings, was published in 1836. He followed The Pickwick Papers with the novels Oliver Twist (1839), Nicholas Nickleby (1839), Barnaby Rudge (1841), Martin Chuzzlewit (1844), A Christmas Carol (1843), and David Copperfield (1850). Featuring wild plot twists and lively depictions of London street life, his work, primarily published first in serial format, was easily adapted for the stage and appeared frequently at playhouses throughout England. In the 1850s Dickens’s marriage to Catherine Hogarth dissolved, and his work began to tackle darker themes and more fully criticize industrial society. The novels of this period include Bleak House (1853), Hard Times (1854), Little Dorrit (1857), A Tale of Two Cities (1859), and, often considered his masterpiece, Great Expectations (1860). An exhausting series of reading tours late in life led to a decline in Dickens’s health, and he died in 1870 working on the unfinished manuscript of The Mystery of Edwin Drood.

The story poured out of him. “[T]he little book established over him a strange mastery that drove it on to completion before the end of November,” writes Edgar Johnson, Dickens’s first major 20th-century biographer. Dickens himself wrote that as he worked, he walked about the black streets of London 15 and 20 miles many a night when all sober folks had gone to bed.

He felt a great release when it was done. He described to a friend how he “broke out like a madman,” and during the holidays that followed he threw himself into festivities as he’d never done before. “Such dinings, such dancings, such conjurings, such blind-man’s-buffing, such theatre-goings, such kissings-out of old years and kissings-in of new ones never took place in these parts before,” he wrote.

What had A Christmas Carol unlocked that caused a release of energy extraordinary even for him? In it, Dickens didn’t use the terrible memories that had haunted him for two decades, but he made a discovery that would, in fits and starts over the next few years, allow him to turn them into literature for the first time. For A Christmas Carol is the story of a man redeemed by his memories. For years, Ebenezer Scrooge had either blocked them out or chased them away, and as a result, could not live as a whole person. He worked, he ate, he slept, and rarely if ever raised his eyes above his ledger to see either the hunger and need or the happiness of the people around him. The story tells us, among other things, that a man like Scrooge cannot live fully in the light of the present until he comes face to face with the darkness of his past. This is exactly what he does. As Scrooge watches his painful childhood and youth, he remembers, too, the happier times he has also forgotten. The pain of the lonely young Ebenezer is assuaged by the love of a sister; a boy abandoned by his father finds comfort and love in a family of Fezziwigs. “Do You Remember?” asks a song in A.C.T.’s version, and the answer is crucial. The man without a past has no future; in recovering his, Scrooge finds a life, a family, and a purpose.

Dickens couldn’t yet draw directly on the experiences of his childhood for A Christmas Carol, but in it he created a character who could face the darkness in his past and, rather than make an orphan of it, acknowledge its value. That opened the way to David Copperfield and Little Dorrit, rich novels that draw on the full range of Dickens’s life and experience, both the darkness and the light. Carol was Dickens’s gift to the world, and to himself, as well.

THE CHILD IN ALL OF US

The notion of ongoing training for actors at every stage of their careers has been a fundamental part of A.C.T.’s mission since the company’s founding in 1965. Our annual production of A Christmas Carol—written specifically to include the entire third-year class of the Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program and almost two dozen Young Conservatory (YC) students, in addition to some of the Bay Area’s most beloved actors—is a powerful example of that philosophy in practice.

“My first year here we had an actor in the company whose name was Sidney Walker,” remembers YC Director Craig Slaight, “one of the oldest people in the company at the time. He was playing Scrooge. I came through the office reception area one day, and I saw him sitting, talking to the boy playing Tiny Tim. I thought, ‘That’s about as rich as it gets, somebody in his 70s talking to an eight-year-old about the work.’”

Taking the notion of intergenerational training a step further, A.C.T. formalized a mentorship program that pairs Carol’s M.F.A. Program cast members (who are themselves mentored by actors in A.C.T.’s core company) with younger cohorts from the YC. Before rehearsals begin with the full cast, the M.F.A. Program and YC actors come together for a week of classes, where they discuss the world of Dickens’s play and begin to learn the period movement and voice technique required for the show, as well as the elements of professionalism they will need to know when they step into what is, for many, their first professional rehearsal process.

A rich dialogue ensues, and deep and often lasting bonds are formed between the older and younger students. “It’s a once-in-a-lifetime experience for the kids and for the M.F.A. students,” says Slaight. “I know it pays off onstage. But I also think it pays off in their lives, in discovering the humanness of creating art, in a place that’s very different from most theaters.”

Opportunities for YC and M.F.A. Program students to study and play together have grown to include coproductions of new plays by writers commissioned to write for them by the YC’s internationally acclaimed New Plays Program. Recent collaborations have included Karen Hartman’s Wild Kate, Ursula Rani Sarna’s Riot, Rob Ackerman’s Volleygirls, and Amy Herzog’s The Wendy Play.

In addition to these performance opportunities, M.F.A. Program and YC students often meet in the classroom during the summer, as many of the M.F.A. actors spend their “vacation” teaching their skills to children in YC programs. “I’m excited because I’ve seen the way that mentoring the YC has changed the M.F.A. students,” says Conservatory Director Melissa Smith. “On the one hand, the YC actors develop relationships with actors who aren’t adults to them, and on the other hand, when the M.F.A. Program actors teach, they solidify the things that they’ve been learning themselves.”

“W. C. Fields said, ‘Never act with dogs or children,’” adds Slaight. “I don’t think he would have had a good time at A.C.T. We celebrate the child in all of us here all the time.”

LIFE IS A CABARET FOR THE YC

Last month the A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC) cabaret and musical ensembles turned the fifth-floor Garret space of the American Conservatory Theater into a swinging club for a presentation of Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered. The program featured a collection of songs about magic, angst, and bafflement, ranging from Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer’s “That Old Black Magic” to “Some Enchanted Evening” from South Pacific. It was the first of four such cabaret presentations that will span the 2010–11 season.

Now in its sixth year, the YC Cabaret Ensemble began in 2005 as a class but quickly expanded into a series of public presentations when YC Director Craig Slaight realized that the Garret provided an ideal setting for cabaret performances. The shows—scheduled for 5 p.m. on select Saturdays and Sundays after matinees of mainstage A.C.T. productions—are simple, elegant, and intimate affairs, with the area’s best high school performers showcasing their singing and acting chops. “Where else in San Francisco can you have a cocktail, watch incredibly gifted singers and actors—dressed beautifully—and be out in time for dinner?” says Slaight. “We sell out every show. And it’s a completely intergenerational audience. Little kids come in, hoping they will one day be able to join a group like this. The parents of the performers, the grandparents, the aunts, the uncles, and the friends arrive in hordes and take over banks of seats. There’s a lot of energy in that room.”

That energy is also found in the rehearsal room every Saturday over the nine-month cabaret season. YC Cabaret Ensemble member Mackenzie Adams tells us, “Everyone is really good and serious about singing, and it is great to be around people like that.” Slaight’s codirector of the ensembles, Jane Hammett, compliments her students: “They are intuitive musicians. They have an innate understanding of music. They listen to a lot of it, and many also play other instruments. Whatever desire is there, I’m going to support that; whatever ability is there, I’m going to try and stretch that.”

With just 17 slots, membership in the YC Cabaret Ensemble has proved to be a hot commodity. For the 2009 season, 70 hopefuls auditioned for the 8 slots being vacated by graduating seniors. Unwilling to pass up all that talent, Slaight and Hammett decided to create a second track—the YC Cabaret Musical Ensemble—doubling the number of young performers they could accommodate.

Slaight and Hammett have clear goals for the groups: “We are teaching cabaret performance as the combination of the actor and the singer, which, so often with teenagers, gets shoehorned into bad recreations of Broadway musicals. We’re not interested in doing Les Mis Junior, Guys and Dolls Middle School—there’s now a Rent Junior. We’re interested in teaching good interpretive skills, the combination of the singer-actor and the actor-singer. The intimacy of the cabaret environment not only facilitates this but demands it; these young men and women learn how to present themselves elegantly and articulately in front of a group of people, really owning the songs and expressing their points of view.”

Slaight contends that cabaret training serves performers well no matter where their interests lie. It is no surprise that many ensemble members pop up in other YC productions, such as Karen Hartman’s Wild Kate, which closed the same weekend as Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered; next spring’s M.F.A. Program coproduction of two plays from Horton Foote’s Orphans’ Home Cycle; and next summer’s world premiere of the original musical Homefront, with a book by Slaight and music and lyrics by American songwriter Creighton Iorns. “We’re busy!” Slaight admits. “But the cabarets are one of the most fulfilling things we do. I just find it gives everybody hope.”

Next up for the YC ensembles: a perennial favorite, Singer’s Choice, which plays the weekend of January 29, 2011. Sentimental Journey: Songs from the Second World War follows the weekend of April 9, and the season ends the weekend of May 21 with the annual Comedy Tonight. “Always leave them laughing,” Slaight smiles.

MEET REBEKAH BROCKMAN
A.C.T. M.F.A. PROGRAM CLASS OF 2013

In each program of the A.C.T. mainstage season, we are pleased to introduce to you one of A.C.T.’s remarkable first-year M.F.A. Program students. In this issue, meet Rebekah Brockman.

NICKNAME Brockman (said with a grumble).

BIRTHPLACE Meadville, PA.

HOMETOWN Erie, PA.

FIRST THEATER EXPERIENCE
I was Cotton Candy in an Odyssey of the Mind skit in grade school. It was a skit promoting health food. I was the villain.

FAVORITE THEATER EXPERIENCE
After rehearsing for a month to play Juliet in Romeo and Juliet, I was taken to see New York City Ballet’s performance of Romeo and Juliet. It was, also, the first time I had been to a professional ballet. I will never forget the experience of seeing this story come alive through physicality, music, and nonverbal acting.

MY STORY
My mum grew up performing with a group called the Golden Triangle Tamburitzans, a performance troupe started by her parents and their friends that focused on ethnic song and dance from Croatia and other European cultures. When it came time to involve my siblings and me in part of our heritage, my parents chose Irish dancing because they were both of Irish descent. I started my performance experience there. Since then it has been a series of events and people—including Melanie Bradish, my grade school theater teacher, and Almi, a local community theater director—who have supported me and nourished my fascination with the arts. I am forever grateful for my upbringing and the mentors and teachers that have shaped me as an artist.

RANDOM FACT I broke my nose once . . . a cowbell was involved . . . long story.

EDUCATION B.F.A. in musical theater from The American Musical and Dramatic Academy.

SPECIAL SKILLS I eat fire.

From 1983 to 2005, Richard enjoyed a rich and varied career with Roundabout Theatre Company. What It Means to Be Parents of a YC Student and Supporters of A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and Season Gala

Susan Berston and Patty Stanton were first introduced to A.C.T. through their son, Samuel, when he signed up for a musical theater class in the A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC). In the YC, which is led by A.C.T. Associate Artist Craig Slaight, students ages 8 to 19 develop their talents, perform in professional-level productions, and gain the confidence to succeed on- and offstage in courses taught by theater professionals who understand and enjoy working with young people. “We were attracted to the caliber of the instructors,” says Berston, a San Francisco native who teaches business at City College of San Francisco. “Craig has established the YC as not only a well-known Bay Area training ground, but as one that has a stellar reputation well beyond the area.”

Currently performing in the roles of Ned Cratchit and Rory Wilkins in the 2010 production of A Christmas Carol, Samuel, a seventh grader at Brandeis Hillel Day School, has already appeared alongside A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts (M.F.A.) Program students and professional actors in several productions. Since his performance on the A.C.T. mainstage in last year’s Carol, he has been seen in the YC production of Barbara Field’s I Was a Rat! and as Nathan, the wise son of an out-of-work millworker, in this fall’s M.F.A. Program cabaret production of The Full Monty. Samuel explains, “The classes and shows are really fun. I’ve learned a lot about myself and to be myself.”

The involvement of Stanton (who volunteers in press and public relations for Muttville, a senior dog rescue program) and Berston with A.C.T. has extended beyond watching their son in class and onstage. They support A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and the company’s annual season gala, which raises funds for A.C.T.’s actor training and education programs, because they have seen firsthand how students build self-confidence, feel a part of something greater than themselves, and make deep friendships through A.C.T.’s programs. “It’s so important to have trust among the actors onstage, and the team-building techniques students learn as they develop that trust are essential life skills,” says Stanton.

The two-month commitment that parents make so their child can rehearse and perform in A Christmas Carol is tremendous, but Stanton and Berston are convinced that the rewards of the experience, and other educational opportunities at A.C.T., are invaluable. “A.C.T.’s programs are developing tomorrow’s audiences and are vital to the future of theater,” says Berston.

By contributing to A.C.T.’s Annual Fund and season gala, Stanton and Berston are directly supporting the work that happens in the YC, the three-year M.F.A. Program, and other A.C.T. training programs. You don’t need to have a child onstage to be involved in magical, life-changing events like A Christmas Carol.

Endow Your Annual Support and Join the Prospero Society

Thank you, subscribers and Annual Fund donors! Your longstanding support, year after year, makes an immeasurable difference to A.C.T. and the work we do. Being able to count on your generosity allows us to take artistic risks, produce the best possible work on our stage, and train the next generation of theater artists. What will happen to this wonderful legacy of support in future generations when you are no longer here to give?

Endowing your annual gift or your annual subscription purchase through your will or other estate plan is a wonderful way to continue your current support after your lifetime and will make you an honored member of A.C.T.’s Prospero Society.

“At the Theater
The American Conservatory Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The lobby opens one hour before curtain. Bar service and refreshments are available one hour before curtain. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
A.C.T.–branded merchandise, as well as books, scripts, and Words on Plays, are on sale in the main lobby, at the box office, and online.

Refreshments
Full bar service, sweets, and savory items are available one hour before the performance in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level and the Sky Bar on the third level. You can avoid the long lines at intermission by preordering food and beverages in the lower- and third-level bars. Bar drinks are now permitted in the auditorium.

Cell Phones!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Text messaging during the performance is very disruptive and not allowed.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call 415.439.2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before the first intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Restrooms are located in Fred’s Columbia Room on the lower level, the Balcony Lobby, and the Garret on the uppermost lobby level.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the theater. Please call 415.749.2228 in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

A.C.T. is pleased to announce that an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED) is now available on site.

Lost and Found
If you’ve misplaced an item while you’re still at the theater, please look for it at our merchandise stand in the lobby. Any items found by ushers or other patrons will be taken there. If you’ve already left the theater, please call 415.439.2471 and we’ll be happy to check our lost and found for you. Please be prepared with the date you attended the performance and your seat location.
