ABOUT A.C.T.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.'s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people; today, A.C.T.'s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 250,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.'s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award.

Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and renewed financial stability. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, now serves 3,000 students every year. It was the first training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among the conservatory's distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America's actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

Come to A.C.T. for the most entertaining education in town. A.C.T. offers several ways for you to learn about the season’s productions and to express your views on the issues they raise:

A.C.T. PROLOGUES
These lively half-hour presentations are conducted by each show’s director and are open to the public regardless of whether you are seeing the performance that evening. Prologues, sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, are a perfect way to get a look at the creative process behind each production. Prologues are held before the Tuesday preview of every production, at 5:30 p.m., in the Geary Theater. Doors open at 5 p.m.

AUDIENCE EXCHANGES
These informal sessions are a great way to share your feelings and reactions with fellow theatergoers. Audience Exchanges take place in the Geary Theater for 30 minutes immediately after selected performances and are moderated by A.C.T. staff members and artists.

WORDS ON PLAYS
Each entertaining and informative audience handbook contains advance program notes, a synopsis, and additional background information about the play. A subscription for seven handbooks is available by mail to full-season subscribers for $42; limited copies for individual plays are also available for purchase at the Geary Theater Box Office, and at the merchandise stand in the Geary Theater, for $8 each.

The importance of truly customized investing.

Clark Winter, Chief Investment Strategist

Sally Cates, Global Head of Public Relations

SC: Every client is different. Is every strategy?
CW: There is no one rule for investing. Today the possibilities are enormous, especially when you factor in the global side of the equation.

SC: Why should a wealthy investor choose the Citigroup Private Bank?
CW: In a bull market, success is relatively easy to come by. But during times of uncertainly, the stakes are much greater, the outcome less assured. A relationship that offers experienced guidance, proven management and global reach is invaluable.

SC: So what is your approach?
CW: Uncover ideas, objectively evaluate all the alternatives, and determine what is appropriate for a particular client, right down to hand-picking the fund managers.

SC: You're a matchmaker, too?
CW: Among many other things.

SC: Clients must appreciate your scrutiny of their needs.
CW: Along with Citigroup's enormous scope of opportunities, our job is to examine all of them and come up with the correct plan. It's that simple and that complex.

“Luigi Pirandello, Check Your E-Mail!”

by Carey Perloff

“Luigi Pirandello, check your e-mail!” trumpets a recent New York Times article, which goes on to describe the incredible story of a high-tech executive who managed to conceal his past lives as embezzler and forger from his present employer while never even changing his name. The point of the piece, which describes our country as “a nation of fresh starts,” is that “the Internet has put persona-hopping within the reach of all Americans.”

Personal reinvention is a fascinating and seductive subject for the theater, so closely bound as it is to the act of making theater. Pirandello’s Enrico IV asks a series of passionate characters to keep reinventing themselves and the roles they play to stay in the game of life. The more clearly we see that these characters are inventing reality, the more gripping and “real” their situation paradoxically becomes, until it is impossible to determine which of the many personae represents the truth.

According to anthropologists, postwar Italy has been a particularly potent locus for this kind of “identity confusion.” To quote the Times again: “Italy, perhaps the most polarized country in western Europe, with large communist and neofascist parties for most of the postwar period, is a country where it is understood that everyone has a different version of reality and history. Editorials appear on the first, not the last, page of the newspapers, and the ideological bias is so open that some readers buy five or six newspapers to try to piece together the day’s events.”

Pirandello, I believe, would have seen this fragmented truth not as ideological bias but as existential reality: the “self” being essentially unknowable, we are like moles in the dark, groping for self-definition through trial and error. His plays, which broke radically with the naturalistic theater of Ibsen and influenced an entire generation of 20th-century playwrights from Brecht to Beckett to Pinter, created new forms that allowed him to play with the rich paradoxes of modern life. Pirandello’s work in fact celebrates the notion of “play.” He never asks us to suspend disbelief when watching his plays; on the contrary, just when we are seduced into believing that what we are seeing onstage is “real,” he flips a piece of scenery or unmask a character, and we suddenly see the theatrical experience for what it is: a construct, a game, an invention of life. And then we realize in the deepest sense that the continuously turning kaleidoscope of roles we play in our own lives also defies logic and continuity, and that we are all, always, in a constant process of reinvention that is both exhilarating and exhausting.

Pirandello’s plays are simultaneously joyful and despairing: joyful in their celebration of the human imagination, despairing in their dramatization of the impossibility of ever truly knowing oneself or one’s closest companions. Because he was a passionate Sicilian, this joy and despair are played out against a landscape of vendetta, seduction, love, and betrayal; his plays are not cerebral works of art but dramatic bolts of lightning, at once chaotic and beautifully formed.

There is no correct answer to the questions Enrico IV raises about madness and sanity, illusion and reality, youth and aging. The characters are desperately searching for connection, for love, for coherence. If these things are not readily available, they make them up, or they dress up like someone else and try their luck again. “Forgive them, it’s

by Paul Walsh

Nineteen twenty-two was a watershed year for what has come to be called Modernism—an international movement in the art and literature of the early decades of the 20th century that looked for new ways to express the new content of the age. It was not only the year that Pirandello’s Enrico IV was first performed, it was also the year that T. S. Eliot’s “The Waste Land” and James Joyce’s Ulysses were first published, as well as Virginia Woolf’s Jacob’s Room, e. e. cummings’s The Enormous Room, and Herman Hesse’s Siddhartha.

Pirandello’s play is considered a masterpiece of Modernism and shares with other works of the period a tone of ironic dismay that seeks to dispel a debilitating despair with humor and bravado.

When at the end of “The Waste Land” the narrator confesses, “These fragments I have shored against my ruins,” he speaks volumes about the private and provisional consolation that fragments of past cultures, the flotsam and jetsam of history, might provide in the modern world to a man of delicate sensibility. But he does so with a certain self-deprecating irony that seems to call his whole project into question. The same can be said of the unnamed 20th-century Italian aristocrat of Pirandello’s Enrico IV, who for the past 20 years has found himself trapped in the persona of the 11th-century Holy Roman emperor. Pirandello’s character seeks consolation in the fragmented history that seems both to confine and to define him. Instead he is constantly reminded of the years that have passed unlived. His actions seem calculated, though not particularly rational, especially when he exacts revenge for an offense that is itself two decades old. But he is suffering, as the doctor so astutely observes, from a delusion precipitated by a blow to the head, or perhaps from a passion too extravagant to contain.

This strange madness, this ironic delusion, is not so difficult for us to understand even now at the beginning of the 21st century, precisely because it is so decidedly and passionately irrational. “One of the novelties that I have given to the modern drama,” Pirandello once declared, “consists in converting the intellect into passion.” It is this “novelty” that makes Pirandello’s plays so remarkably human and so distinctly theatrical. His are ancient stories of revenge and retribution, but told with a new twist of uncertain humor and ironic provisionality that continue to resonate today.

Towards the end of the second act of Enrico IV, the aristocrat for whom the play is titled extols the seductive virtues of the fantasy life he has been leading:

Here, everything’s worked out. We know what’s going to happen because it already has... And sad though may be my fate—awful things happened to Enrico IV, terrible battles and terrible times—I know what’s coming. And nothing can change. It’s all set. So all that’s left is to sit back and enjoy—act following act, never changing, in exactly the same way as you knew it would. This comfort has been yours for the taking. This comfort—of history.

The “comfort of history” lauded here is the reassuring comfort of a fictional sense of certainty at a time early in the 20th century when the old certainties had begun to unravel. The previous century had been a century of hope based on a profound and enthusiastic worship of the possibilities of progress preached since the Enlightenment. In the universe of Newton, progress had been a simple and elegant fact, as elegant as the mechanistic metaphors by which the world had been described. Later the optimism inherent in the biological metaphors of Darwinism, with their assurances of progress through evolutionary accommodation, continued to bolster public confidence in scientific and economic progress. Still later the positivistic solutions of the new social sciences seemed to offer cures for all of society’s ills.

In the new century, however, all that changed. Simplicity and elegance were supplanted by a new and terrifying complexity that called into question even the certainty of progress. The familiar philosophical construct began to come apart; Einstein introduced a universe governed by laws of relativity; Freud described the human psyche as a mass of conflicting forces and drives. Truth was fluid and unknowable. Even a belief in the virtues of authoritarian rule and Victorian manners began to dissolve. Certainty was replaced by what Eliot called “the immense panorama of futility and anarchy which is contemporary history.”

“A COMIC AND CRAZY PHANTASMAGORIA”

The decisive blow to the old order of humane and reasoned progress came on the battlefields of a war more devastating than anything ever imagined, a war that encompassed the whole world, a war that could only be called the Great War. Here science, the avatar of human betterment, proved completely amoral, providing implements of war more efficient than anything seen to date, capable of destroying the enemy without even laying eyes on him. While airplanes dropped bombs from overhead, mustard gas crept across the fields of Europe, slaughtering an enemy that remained faceless and unknown. When the destructive potential of science was revealed on the fields of war, the last glimmer of the Enlightenment died out. In fact, it can be said, the greatest casualty of the Great War was hope.

“I feel that my whole life is devoid of meaning,” Pirandello wrote to his son in 1915, “and I no longer see any reason in the acts I perform or in the words I say, and it astonishes me that other people can move about outside this nightmare of mine, that they can act and speak.” The world seemed mad to Pirandello, a chaotic dreamscape of nihilistic relativism that he sought to escape by moving inward, as he wrote to his son a few months later: “I am digging, digging...I have reduced myself to a well from which I can no longer escape. And why should I escape? For life now seems more and more like a comic and crazy phantasmagoria.”

The madness of which Pirandello speaks was more than a social metaphor. It was a painful reality in his life. Pirandello’s own wife, Antonietta, to whom he remained devoted throughout his life, suffered from acute paranoia, which manifested itself as maniacal jealousy. After a series of nervous breakdowns dating back to as early as 1899, she was eventually hospitalized in 1919, shortly before Pirandello wrote Enrico IV, which has been called an apology for madness and a personal act of penance for having had to institutionalize his wife. Though Pirandello denied any knowledge of Freud and his cohorts, whose articulation of the science of psychoanalysis was remaking the way we think about the human psyche, just as he denied any influence on his work, he wrote several novels and short stories about various mental afflictions in the first two decades of the century that demonstrate a sophisticated knowledge of and interest in contemporary thinking about madness. “To see life transposed in the mind of my poor companion,” Pirandello told an interviewer in 1924, “enabled me to convey the psychology of the alienated in my creative writing. Not the logic. The lunatic constructs without logic. Logic is form and form is in contrast with life. Life is formless and illogical. So I think that the mad are closer to life.”

We look back from our position at the beginning of a new century and a new millennium to the landmarks of early 20th-century Modernism with wonder and terror, perhaps because they delve so astutely into larger questions of existence and the intricacies of illusion and imagination. Enrico’s hero has faced up to the modern world like an ostrich, and time has had its way with him as inevitably it will. He has become a kind of artist—author, actor, and director in the fictional story of his life by proxy—in order to dispel the feelings of emptiness that overwhelm him, as they have overwhelmed Pirandello and so many of his contemporaries. But imagination proves inadequate to the reality it had thought to escape. Try as we might we cannot transform life into an event frozen in time and therefore repeatable and known. Whether we watch or hide our eyes, time marches on, stripping us of our youth and leaving us with only the memories of our past desires. “I grow old...I grow old,” the narrator of Eliot’s “The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock” laments, “I shall wear the bottoms of my trousers rolled.” To discover that one is suddenly 46 years old, when one has no memory of having been 30 or 35, is to have lost sight of who one is and even of who one might have been. It is not only traumatic, it is devastating. And this is the tragedy at the heart of Enrico IV.

THE USES OF HISTORY

Pirandello wrote Enrico IV as Mussolini’s black-shirted Fascists began to terrorize the Italian countryside, promulgating a renewal of ancient Italian greatness through programs of aggressive modernization in agriculture, industry, and business.
1922, the year that Enrico IV premiered, Mussolini led his militia into Rome, where King Victor Emmanuel III invited him to form a coalition government. Four years later the Fascist leader had transformed Italy into a single-party totalitarian state. Pirandello, like so many of his contemporaries, hailed Mussolini as the one who would return Italy to greatness and reestablish the values of old. For his part, Mussolini embraced the authority of history, or at least the symbols of the past, as a source of greatness. Even the name chosen for his party, Fasce di Combattimento, looked to the past: a fascio was a bundle of sticks bound to an axe that Roman senators carried in ancient times as a symbol of the power of civic unity and of their authority to punish wrongdoers. History found new currency in the symbols of fascism just as it does in the fictional court of Pirandello’s 20th-century Enrico IV. But then, as Karl Marx wrote with characteristic wit: “Hegel remarks somewhere that all facts and personages of great importance in world history occur, as it were, twice. He forgot to add: the first time as tragedy, the second as farce.”

Luigi Pirandello
(1867–1936)

Nobel Prize–winning Italian playwright, novelist, and short-story writer Luigi Pirandello wrote a great number of novels, collected in 15 volumes under the title Novelle per un anno (1922–37). Of his six novels, the best known are The Late Mattia Pascal (1904), The Old and the Young (1913), Shoot! (1916), and One, None, and a Hundred Thousand (1926). Pirandello’s greatest achievement, however, is in his plays, which explore issues of identity and the conflict between illusion and reality with humor, compassion, and an acute sense of psychological observation. He wrote some 50 dramas, published under the collective title Naked Masks (1918–35). He first achieved theatrical success in 1917 with Right You Are—If You Think You Are, followed by Six Characters in Search of an Author (1921) and Enrico IV (1922), considered his finest works. Other notable plays include All for the Best (1920), To Clothe the Naked (1923), Each in His Own Way (1924), and Tonight We Improvise (1930).

The Emperor and the Pope

The title character of Pirandello’s Enrico IV is caught in the world of the 11th-century Holy Roman emperor Henry IV of Bavaria, a member of the Salian dynasty remembered today for the battles he waged against the growing power of the papacy. Henry ascended the throne of the Holy Roman Empire at the age of six upon the death of his father in 1056. His mother, Agnes of Poitou, served as regent until she was forced to resign when Anno, Archbishop of Cologne, kidnapped the young emperor and held him hostage at Cologne until the queen-regent accepted his demands.

Bishop Anno took control of the young emperor’s education and the government of the empire for a while but was soon superseded by the ambitious Adalbert, archbishop of Bremen, who treated Henry more generously. Eventually Adalbert gained such power over the boy-emperor that rival clerics and nobles forced the emperor to ban him from the court. In 1069, Henry IV incurred the wrath of the pope when he decided to divorce his wife, Bertha of Sosa, and summoned a council of bishops to ratify his decision and annul his marriage. The pope sent the implacable hermit-bishop Peter Damian to persuade the emperor to abandon this reckless decision. Henry IV agreed to avoid public scandal and dropped his plan to divorce.
When Gregory VII ascended the papal throne in 1073, the troubles between papacy and emperor came to a head. Demanding that bishops and abbots cease their material dependence on the emperor, Gregory forbade the investiture of bishops by laymen at the Lenten synod in Rome in 1075. Henry IV considered it a matter of life and death for the empire that the emperor retain influence over bishops and abbots, since imperial church domains were a major source of income for the empire. Henry IV called a synod of bishops in 1076 that deposed the pope; Gregory VII responded by excommunicating the emperor. The German nobles took this as a signal to revolt against Henry IV and threatened to depose him.

This time Henry IV took a most surprising step. Before the nobles could meet to elect a new emperor, Henry traveled secretly to the castle of Countess Matilda of Tuscany at Canossa in northern Italy, where he knew Pope Gregory VII was staying. Henry crawled through the snow before the pope, doing solemn and public penance, which compelled Gregory VII to lift the excommunication. While Henry won a decisive political victory at Canossa by removing all canonical arguments against his continued reign, he had also admitted the legitimacy of the pope’s measures and thereby relinquished the traditional position of the Holy Roman Emperor as protector of the faith and the equal or even superior to the pope.

Tradition has it that Henry waited three days in the snow before Matilda and Hugh of Cluny, the abbot of the famous Benedictine monastery that spearheaded clerical reform in the 11th century, could persuade Gregory to see him. After Henry’s second excommunication in 1080, Matilda was often at war with the emperor, donning armor, it was said, to lead her troops against him herself. Matilda eventually convinced Henry’s son Conrad to rebel against his father, and Henry spent the last years of his life attempting to reestablish order in the empire. Hugh of Cluny continued to intercede on behalf of Henry IV, trying to reconcile the pope and the emperor.

Though little known, the intricate history of this period of civil war and international intrigue, when the power of the papacy came into direct conflict with the power of the Holy Roman emperor, serves Pirandello’s purposes well in Enrico IV, as does the fact that at Canossa the emperor proved himself a superb showman. In fact, it might be argued, the “Investiture Controversy” was itself a kind of theatrical dispute about whether the pope or the emperor would control the garments and symbols of clerical office and preside over the dispensation in the anointing of bishops. This was a period in which actual power resided in the symbols of power, and the rituals of church and state actually created and conferred the power they celebrated.

SCOTT ASTI (Young Servant) makes his Geary Theater debut in Enrico IV. He is in his third year of the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program, where he has been seen in The Beaux’ Stratagem at the Magic Theatre, as well as The Son of Adelechino, Othello, Lorenzaccio, and The Water Engine.

MARCO BARRICELLI (“Enrico IV”), an associate artist at A.C.T. since 1997, has appeared in Glenary Glen Ross, The Invention of Love (Dean Goodman Award), Long Day’s Journey into Night, Hecuba, Mary Stuart, Insurrection: Holding History, A Streetcar Named Desire, and The Rose Tattoo (Drama Logue Award). Theater credits also include Tamanura on Broadway, Magic Fire at the Guthrie Theater, Silence with the Japanese theater company Suhara, A Moon for the Misbegotten at Milwaukee Repertory Theater, The Taming of the Shrew at South Coast Repertory (Drama Logue Award), and Hamlet, Henry V, Richard III, and many other plays at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival. He has also worked with Missouri Repertory Theatre, the Intiman Theatre, Virginia Stage Company, Actors Theatre of Louisville, Indiana Repertory Theatre, Arizona Theatre Company, Portland Center Stage, and the Utah, California, and Illinois Shakespeare Festivals, among others. Screen credits include “L.A. Law,” Romeo and Juliet, and 11th Hour. A graduate of The Juilliard School, Barricelli teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program.

TOM BLAIR (John) has worked at many of this country’s leading regional theaters, including A.C.T. (The Three Penny Opera, Tartuffe, Indian Ink, The Guardsman, The Royal Family, Othello), Arena Stage, the Kennedy Center, Cleveland Play House, Stage West in Springfield, Massachusetts, Berkeley Repertory Theatre, and 15 years at Milwaukee Repertory Theater. His recent work includes King Henry in Henry IV, Parts 1 and 2 at the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival last summer. He has performed in Tadashi Suzuki’s The Tale of Lear throughout the United States and at the Toga and Mitsui festivals in Japan. Through his association with Mr. Suzuki, Blair has worked often in Japan as an actor and director.

CHRIS FERRY (Berthold) graduated from the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program with the class of 2000. He has performed on the Geary stage as Citandre in The Misanthrope, Mertevis in Edward II, and Fich in The Three Penny Opera. A.C.T. credits also include Touchstone in As You Like It, Freder in Pains of Youth, and Madame Tomba in Girl Gone in M.F.A. productions at the Magic Theatre. Ferry is a graduate of Dartmouth College.
FELICITY JONES (Donna Matilda) makes her A.C.T. debut in Enrico IV. She was last seen as Penelope in Mary Zimmerman’s The Odyssey at Seattle Repertory Theatre. Other recent roles include Betty LeRoux in The Captain’s Tiger with Athol Fugard at Manhattan Theatre Club, Lisa in Collected Stories at the Huntington Theatre Company, Imogen in Cymbeline at Hartford Stage Company, and Rosalind in As You Like It with The Acting Company. For ten years she was artistic associate with Theatre de la Jeune Lune in Minneapolis, where she cowrote and performed in such works as Cross, Friday and the Island of Hope, Don Juan Giovanni, and Children of Paradise: Shooting a Dream. Television credits include “Wonderland” and “Deadline.”

CHARLES LANYER (Doctor Dionysus Genoni) most recently appeared in After the Fall at Playhouse West in Walnut Creek. GREGORY HOFFMAN (Fight Choreographer) is A.C.T.'s resident fight director and teaches in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. The founder and director of Dueling Arts International, Inc., a company offering training opportunities in movement and theatrical combat throughout the world, he has been teaching movement and theatrical combat and directing fights throughout Europe, Asia, and the U.S. since 1984. Theater credits include: Edward II, Insurrection: Holding History, Mary Stuart, Hexab, Long Day's Journey into Night, Indian Ink, and Wrong Mountain at A.C.T.; Hydriotaphia, Galileo, and The Beauty Queen of Leenane at Berkeley Repertory Theatre; Mary Stuart at the Huntington Theatre Company; and Hamlet and The Taming of the Shrew for the California Shakespeare Festival.

RICK ECHOLS (Hair and Makeup) has worked on more than 250 A.C.T. productions since 1971. He designed Cyrano de Bergerac, A Christmas Carol, and The Taming of the Shrew for A.C.T. and public television, as well as many other television and major film productions. He also designed for the original Cinderella at the San Francisco Ballet, Christopher Walken's Hamlet for the American Shakespeare Festival, and Angels in America for the Eureka Theatre Company. Echols also works for the San Francisco Opera and teaches in the A.C.T. Conservatory, as well as occasional hairstyling at the Oscars. In 1996, he returned to A.C.T. after almost five years with Les Misérables on the road with the national tour and on Broadway.

KIMBERLY MARK WEBB (Stage Manager) is in his seventh season at A.C.T., where he works most recently on Glengarry Glen Ross, The Misanthrope, Edward II, The Invention of Love, and The Threepenny Opera. During 19 years with Berkeley Repertory Theatre he stage-managed more than 70 productions. Other credits include Picasso at the Lapin Agile in San Francisco, The Woman Warrior for Center Theatre Group in Los Angeles, Mary Stuart and The Lady from the Sea at Boston’s Huntington Theatre Company, Hexab at the Williamstown Theatre Festival, and The Philanderer at Aurora Theatre Company. the clothes,” Enrico explains, “It does things to one.” In this world of shifting realities, nothing is canned; anything can happen. There is no message; only a richly imagined set of possibilities. Enrico IV wakes us up to the flux and surprise of our own lives and feelings. It makes us long to know and to understand our existence, and at the same time reminds us that whatever meaning or shape we assign to experience will always be our own imaginative invention.

IN MEMORIAM

All of us at A.C.T. have been deeply saddened by the loss of our beloved shop foreman, Randall A. Reid, who died at home in Oakley, California, on January 21 at age 51. A talented and dedicated craftsman, Reid joined A.C.T. in the early 1970s and celebrated his 25th anniversary with the company last spring. As foreman of the A.C.T. Scene Shop, Reid supervised the set construction of more than 200 A.C.T. productions; his meticulous craftsmanship and technical expertise contributed immeasurably to the unique look and feel of the A.C.T. theatrical experience. Reid was also instrumental in helping the company through the process of moving back into the rebuilt Geary Theater after the devastation of the Loma Prieta earthquake.

A proud 30-year member of I.A.T.S.E (International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees) Local No. 16, Reid enjoyed a gratifying career and earned the respect of the many artisans with whom he worked on creative projects throughout the Bay Area, from A.C.T. to Winterland to the San Francisco Opera House to Industrial Light & Magic. He openly shared his techniques and imaginative talent with younger colleagues and reveled in his reputation as an intractable negotiator in any and all disputes that could benefit “the working man.”

“I enjoyed working with Randy on every production I’ve directed here,” said Artistic Director Carey Perloff. “He taught me so much about the sheer love of the craft and the problem solving that goes into making theater. He also taught a huge number of theater people how to take themselves and their work seriously—and to still have a sly laugh at the end of the day.”

A fourth-generation San Franciscan, Reid treasured living and working in the Bay Area; the many people he touched with his generous spirit will surely miss him. Our hearts go out to his family: his wife, Ellen; children Shannon Currie and Hillary and Mason Reid; granddaughters Maura and Emma; mother, Janet; brothers Brian and Thomas; and many respected in-laws and relatives, including ten nieces and nephews. Reid died too young to access his pension. Contributions to the family will be appreciated, and may be sent to Ellen Reid care of L.A.T.S.E. Local No. 16, 240 Second Street, San Francisco CA 94105.

A.C.T. CELEBRATES LIFE IN THE GEARY THEATER

In January, A.C.T. staff, students, and friends gathered in the lower lobby of the Geary Theater for the fourth annual celebration of the opening of the Geary in 1910 and the reopening of A.C.T.’s theatrical home in 1996. (After suffering extensive damage in the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and undergoing extensive reconstruction, A.C.T.'s landmark Geary Theater reopened on January 10, 1996.

A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen bestowed annual awards on selected staff members whose contribution to A.C.T. in the last year has been particularly outstanding. This year's recipient of the A.C.T. Artistic Director’s Award was Geary Theater House Manager Eva Ramos, who has been with A.C.T. since 1972. "Eva is unbelievably well connected with our subscribers and has her finger on the pulse of the A.C.T. audience," says Perloff. "She takes great care with them every night in the theater, listening to their likes and dislikes and making every single patron feel they have been welcomed and heard."

The Managing Director's Award was shared this year by both members of the Conservatory Financial Aid Department: Director of Financial Aid Susan Pace and Financial Aid/Conservatory Assistant Christopher Rader. Pace is a dedicated A.C.T. veteran who has committed six years to A.C.T. Rader joined A.C.T. in 1999. Together they have worked hard to ensure that A.C.T.'s student body receives the financial assistance necessary to make their theater training possible. "Susan and Chris have had to face tremendous obstacles in the past couple of years, including personal illness, and they always knew when and how to ask for support, making sure that A.C.T.'s students and staff were consistently served fully and professionally," says Kitchen. "This was the first year that every single A.C.T. student met his or her financial aid commitments in full, which is an extremely rare occurrence in the world of higher education. This achievement is in large measure the product of the dedication and attention to detail Susan and Chris bring to their jobs."

Happy (re)birth day to the Geary, and congratulations to this year's honorees!

HELP THE YOUNG CONSERVATORY GET TO LONDON

The A.C.T. Young Conservatory will embark on its second theater trip to London in July, and is hoping to fund their much-anticipated journey with financial assistance from the A.C.T. community.

This summer's journey is a significant milestone in the ongoing expansion of the Young Conservatory's acclaimed New Plays Program (which has been commissioning new plays from distinguished American playwrights since 1989). Young Conservatory Director Craig Slaitght initiated the New Plays Program's first transatlantic commission and production in 1999, in association with London's distinguished Royal National Theatre (RNT), by commissioning British playwright Bryony Lavery to write a new play for A.C.T.'s teenage students. With Lavery in residence and Suvi Graham-Adriani (director of the RNT's youth theater projects) directing, Ilyria premiered at A.C.T. in August 2000.

As the next step in the transnational collaboration, the cast of the Young Conservatory's production of Timothy Mason's Time on Fire (which was commissioned by and premiered at A.C.T. in 1999) will reprise the production at the RNT July 7-14, under Slaitght's direction. "The RNT has been the leader in new playwriting for young people in Europe for the last ten years," says Slaitght. "Our collaboration has already brought new works from America and England to countless theater companies in both countries. With Time on Fire, Tim's haunting portrait of young people during the American Revolution, we begin the next phase of this exciting venture: young actors traveling between the two countries to share their work. In this production, the role of Philip Caldwell, a British officer working as a spy, will be played by a young actor from the National Theatre who will come to A.C.T. for rehearsals and local performances of the play and will appear in the production at the National. Continued support for this project allows us to commission more writing, develop more intergenerational productions, and extend more travel experience to young actors.

MASTERING COMMEDIA

In celebration of A.C.T.'s production of Enrico IV, A.C.T. and the Istituto Italiano di Cultura have partnered to present a series of public events. Italian commedia master teacher Valeria Campo will be at A.C.T. during the week of April 2 teaching master classes for students in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. The weekend of April 7 and 8, Campo will offer the general public a commedia intensive taught through Studio A.C.T. For details, call Studio A.C.T. at (415) 439-2332.

To show your support of A.C.T.’s young adult theater training programs and help the talented cast of Time on Fire fund their theatrical adventure, please contact Julie Anne Connolly at (415) 439-2353 or send checks made out to “YC-RNT” to the A.C.T. Development Department, 30 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94108.

THE GALLERY AT THE GEARY

Find yourself with some extra time before a performance or during intermission? Want to expose yourself to more fine art, but don’t make it to San Francisco’s art galleries as often as you’d like? Now you need no further than the Geary Theater itself. A.C.T. invites you to visit the second floor of the theater (just outside the auditorium doors and along the north bank of windows) to view the work of Bay Area artists in a series of rotating exhibits throughout the 2000-01 season.

Currently on view are paintings by landscape and figurative artist Nick Mullahy. Mullahy reflects on his work: “I take my paints and sculptural tools on all my journeys, recording the fleeting moment of my experiences. Whether a moonrise over Sausalito, a sun-struck day in Santa Barbara, thunderstorms in Costa Rica, or an abstract canvas combining elements of all, it comes down to the same theme: a search for balance. The elements of this balance encompass color and composition and emotion and the artist’s personal feelings and his or her ideology. If you look, like most things you can find it all.”

Each artwork purchase benefits A.C.T. Mullahy is represented locally by Kourosh Ghadishah, (415) 205-0072.
CAREY PERLOFF (Artistic Director) assumed artistic leadership of A.C.T. in 1992. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has staged for A.C.T. acclaimed productions of Euripides' Hecuba, the American premieres of Tom Stoppard's Invention of Love and Indian Ink, The Threepenny Opera, Mary Stuart, Old Times, Arcadia, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Creditor, Uncle Vanya, Home, the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian's Singer's Boy, and the Geary Theater inaugural production of Shakespeare's Tempest. This season she directs new translations of Moliere's Misanthrope and Pirandello's Enrico IV.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound's Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter's Mountain Language and The Birthday Party, and many other works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous Obie Awards, including the 1988 Obie for artistic excellence. In 1993, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot's opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Perloff received a B.A. in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

HEATHER M. KITCHEN (Managing Director), now in her 26th year of professional theater, joined A.C.T. as managing director in 1996. She currently serves as a member of the executive committee of the League of Resident Theatres (LORT) (the national consortium of regional theaters), the board of governors of the Commonwealth Club of California, the board of directors of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, San Francisco and the Peninsula, and the leadership board of the San Francisco chapter of the American Red Cross. Before joining A.C.T., she served as general manager of the Citadel Theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, where she was responsible for a five-theater complex that produced up to 16 productions annually. A native of Canada, Kitchen received an honors degree in drama and theater arts from the University of Waterloo and earned her M.B.A. from Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director) oversees the administration of the A.C.T. Conservatory’s Master of Fine Arts Program, Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T., in addition to serving as the master acting teacher of the M.F.A. Program. Before joining A.C.T., Smith served as director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting, scene study, and Shakespeare for six years. Also a professional actor, she has performed in regional theaters and in numerous off-off Broadway plays, including work by Mac Wellman and David Greenspan. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIREE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne's National Repertory Theater. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water. Off-Broadway he produced Ibsen's Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw's Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics’ Circle.

TAKE STOCK IN A.C.T.
There are many creative ways to give to A.C.T. All are tax deductible and offer A.C.T. donors a tremendous opportunity to:

Avoid capital gains taxes on the sale of appreciated stock;

Create an income-tax deduction equal to the fair-market value of the stock at the time of transfer; and Generate a more significant gift than if you were just writing a check.

Additional ways to contribute to A.C.T.'s success include:

Cash—one of the most familiar ways to give;

Property—most real estate and personal property qualify as tax-deductible charitable gifts; and Life insurance—the cash value of your current paid-up life insurance policy can benefit A.C.T.

PLANNED GIVING
Many people who could not otherwise contribute to A.C.T. as generously as they would like find they are able to do so with a carefully planned gift. You can make a valuable long-term contribution to great theater by:

Making a bequest to A.C.T.—please let us know if you have included A.C.T. in your will or estate plans; or

Creating a life-income charitable trust with A.C.T.—you can gain an immediate and substantial tax deduction, increased annual income paid to you for life, freedom from investment worries, and avoidance of capital gains taxes when you transfer appreciated property to a charitable remainder trust.

TONI REMBE AND ARTHUR ROCK
INDIVIDUAL SPONSORS
First elected to the A.C.T. Board of Trustees in 1989, Toni Rembe served as president of the board for four years and became increasingly involved with company planning and fundraising during the renovation and 1996 reopening of the Geary Theater. A member of the law firm of Pillsbury Winthrop LLP, Rembe has been attending A.C.T. productions since the company’s 1967 San Francisco premiere. She has served on the boards of Van Loben Sels Foundation, Potach Corporation, SBC Communications Inc., and AEGON N.V., a Dutch company. She was recently elected president of the board of governors of the Commonwealth Club of California.

Arthur Rock has been securing investments for companies on the forefront of the new-technology industry for more than 40 years. A founder of Intel in 1968, Rock has also been instrumental in the founding of such leading companies as Scientific Data Systems (which later merged with Xerox Corporation), Teledyne, Inc., Dianetics, and Apple Computer. Rock is also a committed philanthropist; he serves as president of the Basic Fund and is a member of the board of directors of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and the San Francisco Opera Association.
American Conservatory Theater is deeply grateful for the generous support of the many individuals, corporations, foundations, and government agencies whose contributions make great theater possible.

HONORING A.C.T.'S FRIENDS

Do you enjoy working with diverse people and learning more about the theater? The Friends of A.C.T., the company's volunteer auxiliary, offers many opportunities for people interested in contributing their time and talent to A.C.T. Volunteers assist with mailings and work with administrative departments, help at selected performances, staff the library, and more.

Friends do so much for A.C.T. throughout the year that we can never thank our volunteers enough for the critical support they provide. We would like to recognize the friends listed below who have volunteered recently:

G. David Anderson
Alison Augustin
Marie Bauer
Helen Buckner
Joan Cahill
Geraldine Collins
Maureen Dau
Elaine Foreman
Frances Frieder
Barbara Gerber
Celina Gerso
Dorothy Griggs
Pauline Hoff
Gerri Holmes
Han Jean
Esther Jennings
Iris Johnson
William & Gladys Kan

For information about the Friends of A.C.T., call (415) 439-2301. For information about ushering, call (415) 439-2349.
AT THE THEATER

The Geary Theater is located at 415 Geary Street. The auditorium opens 30 minutes before curtain.

A.C.T. Merchandise
Posters, sweatshirts, t-shirts, nightshirts, mugs, note cards, scripts, and Words on Plays are available for purchase at the Geary Theater Box Office.

Refreshments
Bar service is available one hour before the performance in the lower lobby and on the second balcony level. Reservations for refreshments to be served at intermission may also be made, at either bar or in the main lobby, during that time. Food and drink are not permitted in the auditorium.

Beepers!
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Or you may leave it and your seat number with the house manager, so you can be notified if you are called.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leaving your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call (415) 439-2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A.C.T. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A.C.T. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A.C.T. performances are strictly forbidden.

Restrooms are located in the lower lobby, the balcony lobby, and the uppermost lobby.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the Geary Theater. Please call (415) 439-2ACT in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

AFFILIATIONS

A.C.T. operates under an agreement between the League of Resident Theatres and Actors Equity Association, the union of professional actors and stage managers in the United States. Some IMPORT wines from France.

For our FRENCH OAK finished whisky,
we imported barrels.

We're not so crazy about wine.

---

Meet the newest member of The Glenlivet Family: For centuries, FRENCH LIMOUSIN OAK has lent rich and delicate flavors to fine European wines and cognacs. So we asked ourselves: What would happen if we finished our 12-YEAR-OLD WHISKY in casks of French Oak? Quite a lot, actually. And so our newest single malt was born.

THE GLENLIVET FRENCH OAK FINISH.
