AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.'s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people; today, A.C.T.'s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 250,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.'s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujumeyn Theaters Award.

Today A.C.T. is recognized nationally for its groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwrighting. Since the reopening of the Geary Theater in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of audience expansion and renewed financial stability. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, now serves 3,000 students every year. It was the first training program in the United States not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Benning, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among the conservatory's distinguished former students. With its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America's actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.

"Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun; it shines everywhere."

—Twelfth Night

The pantheon of comic partnerships—which includes Laurel and Hardy, Abbott and Costello, and Burns and Allen—has had to make room for another couple of comedy masters, Bill Irwin and David Shiner. Experimental theatrical innovators as well as popular entertainers, Irwin and Shiner wreak havoc with traditional definitions of theater, honoring the silent-comedy traditions of the past while putting their own ironic spin on the future of comedy performance.

Shiner and Irwin share a nostalgic reverence for slapstick and the vaudevillian arts and exemplify the clown's ability to triumph over stage dilemmas great and small that mirror our own human aspirations and shared imperfections. By breaking down the barrier between themselves as performers and the audience as spectators, they demystify their own outrageous skill, as if to suggest that their small victories are achievable by all of us, if only we could suspend reality long enough to join in the fun.

NO FINER FOOLS

Irwin has been variously described by awed critics as “America's clown prince,” “this generation’s most purely physical comic,” and “a clown by whom future clowning will be benchmarked.” His diverse performing background is reflected in the amalgam of styles and references at play in his work, which simultaneously pokes fun at the conventions of traditional theater while triggering a cultural memory of clowns from the golden era of American vaudeville.

Irwin acquired a lifelong love for making people laugh with physical comedy as a child, avidly watching his earliest role models—Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, and Danny Kaye—on television. “I remember early television having lots of physical language, much more than it does now,” Irwin remembers. “The language of the body was primary—in my memory, at least—and it really attracted me.” In the early 1970s he immersed himself in avant-garde theater as a member of Herbert Blau’s experimental KRAKEN ensemble, and developed his wondrous soft-shoe dance skills with San Francisco’s Oberlin Dance Company (ODC). Torn between the refined art of the stage and the libertarian spirit of the circus, Irwin took to San Francisco’s streets, entertaining sidewalk audiences around town with fire eating, pantomime, and comedy monologues.

Tormented by the refined art of the stage and the libertarian spirit of the circus, Irwin took to San Francisco’s streets, entertaining sidewalk audiences around town with fire eating, pantomime, and comedy monologues.
In 1974, after an eight-week course with the Ringling Brothers Clown College, Irwin answered an ad for performers in a local newspaper and found himself at the door of Larry Pisoni and Peggy Snider, co-founders of San Francisco's now-celebrated Pickle Family Circus. Short on circus experience but long on talent, Irwin became the Pickles' first white-faced clown and toured with the one-ring show for the next five years, his Willy the Clown fooling around alongside Pisoni's alter ego Lorenzo Pickle and Geoff Hoyle's mischievous Mr. Sniff. The Pickle Family's chaotic blend of vaudeville, theater, modern dance, and silent-screen slapstick comedy was the perfect environment for Irwin's own bold eclecticism.

When he left the circus in 1979 and began creating original work for the stage, Irwin's experimental impulses and love of popular entertainment united in surrealistic pieces of physical and verbal comedy like The Regard of Flight, in which his graceful clown battles a pretentious critic and, in his signature comic dilemma, the forces of an invisible vacuum that threatens to suck him offstage. Critics lauded Irwin's physical grace and uncanny ability to perform old-fashioned routines with a modern sense of irony. In 1984 he was awarded a five-year MacArthur "genius grant," the first to go to a performing artist.

Boston-born Shiner meanwhile honed his comedy skills as a street performer in cities throughout Europe during the 1980s, climbing over cars and people and stirring up general mayhem among his gathered crowds. A German resident for the last 15 years, Shiner has perfected his art in the tradition of Europe's famed clowns, in prestigious festivals and national circuses in France, Germany, and Switzerland. After a successful tour of his original two-man show with colleague Rene Bazinet, Shiner joined the Canadian Cirque du Soleil as their featured performer in 1990 and toured for a year and a half with the New Age circus spectacle. His old-school slapstick methods were highlighted against the blaring background of Cirque du Soleil's sophisticated juxtaposition of music, high-tech imagery, and dreamlike narratives. Shiner's love of audience interaction was given free rein in sketches like the one that remains central to Fool Moon: as a domineering silent-film director, he casts four people from the audience and orchestrates their involvement in a five-minute tale of love, betrayal, and revenge.

Irwin and Shiner were already mutual admirers when serendipity threw them together for the first time on the set of Sam Shepard's 1992 film Silent Tongue. "It was a real blessing to be cast together," remembers Irwin. "We were on location, in the middle of nowhere in New Mexico, on a dusty medicine-show stage. The Red Clay Ramblers would play, and David and I would improvise. Shepard told us to start fooling around. They gave us two minutes, and we did nine."

The comics immediately discovered their natural affinities for each other's distinct clown personalities. Shiner's quick-witted humor and more aggressively urban style proved the perfect foil for Irwin's more benign clown, the hapless everyman for whom life is a constant struggle against forces, including gravity, that threaten to limit his freedom. "Working with Bill was so fluid," says Shiner. "With other clowns it never clicked that quickly." When Shiner was asked, during the shooting of Silent Tongue, to participate in Lincoln Center's Serious Fun! festival, he agreed and brought his new cohorts in comedy with him. They crafted their improvisations into a full-length production—a fusion of tried-and-true tricks from their individual repertoires and newly imagined routines—and Fool Moon was born. Their reunion at the Geary Theater follows sold-out Broadway runs in 1993 and 1995, tours to Los Angeles, Vienna, and Munich, and a standing-room-only A.C.T. run in 1998.

THE AUDIENCE GETS IN THE ACT

The spontaneous spirit of audience participation that invigorates Fool Moon has always been central to Shiner and Irwin's individual work, and it is one of the secrets to the show's success—bringing audience members into the act keeps every performance unpredictable, and therefore unique, and taps, as all successful clowning does, the audience's desire to escape from everyday reality into the world of fantasy they see onstage. Clowning has always recognized people's need to puncture the reverence surrounding life's formalities and to join in the merrymaking, and Irwin's attraction to the work of Bertolt Brecht (he performed A Man's a Man at the La Jolla Playhouse in 1985) and his earlier work with KRAKEN are rooted in a desire to make a direct and meaningful connection with the audience. Yet it is Shiner, says Irwin, who "has a sort of mystical ability" to choose audience members who become real partners in the comedy onstage, often confounding critics and other audience members who can't believe Shiner's picks aren't plants.

Shiner believes this uncanny ability to select the right people out of an audience of strangers was learned very early in life. "When there are a lot of unspoken things happening within a family, a child

THE AUDIENCE GETS IN THE ACT

The spontaneous spirit of audience participation that invigorates Fool Moon has always been central to Shiner and Irwin’s individual work, and it is one of the secrets to the show’s success—bringing audience members into the act keeps every performance unpredictable, and therefore unique, and taps, as all successful clowns do, theatergoers’ desire to escape from everyday reality into the world of fantasy they see onstage. Yet it is Shiner, says Irwin, who “has a sort of mystical ability” to choose audience members who become real partners in the comedy onstage, often confounding critics and other audience members who can’t believe Shiner’s picks aren’t plants.

Shiner believes this uncanny ability to select the right people out of an audience of strangers was learned very early in life. “When there are a lot of unspoken things happening within a family, a child starts to develop a very sensitive awareness to the unspoken dialogue between people. I didn’t even know that was what I was doing, and then it appeared spontaneously in my work. I realized I can read people very quickly.

“When I go out into the audience, I’m looking at how people are sitting, how they are talking to their neighbors, how they are dressed, all of which tells me more or less what kind of person they are in general terms. Once they come onstage, and I shake their hands, look into their eyes, and feel their energy, all kinds of information emerges to which I have become sensitive over the last 20 years. The more an artist studies himself, the more aware he or she becomes of the psychology of other people.”

A TIMELESS ART
The art of the clown has been central to the theatrical experience since audiences first laughed together. Clownish figures appear in the rituals and mythologies of early cultures worldwide, and pantomime is known to have existed in ancient China, Persia, and Egypt. Clowns also figured prominently in the farces of ancient Greece and Rome as foils to more serious characters, their actions often explained by accompanying songs. The acrobatic harlequin and other familiar clown characters grew out of the parodies, pantomimes, and burlesque routines of 16th-century Italy’s commedia dell’arte tradition, which deeply influenced Shakespeare and Molière. The modern clown, with fanciful, exaggerated costumes and gestures—the model for work like Shiner and Irwin’s—developed in 19th-century Europe and was exemplified by Joey Grimaldi, a comically self-serving clown who alternated between arrogant gloating and cringing cowardice in his fantastically popular London pantomime routines.

Twentieth-century foolery took on a more global critique of human affairs in the postwar work of master satirists like Samuel Beckett and Dario Fo (both of whom have influenced Irwin’s work). Beckett’s archetypal Didi and Gogo, the tramp clowns who wait for Godot—like the unnamed hero of Beckett’s Texts for Nothing, Irwin’s one-man show that recently completed a successful run at A.C.T.—express the absurdity of the human condition by commenting on the impossibility of existence in a world over which we have no control. Irwin and Shiner’s fools are likewise caught in a world that, while more optimistic than Beckett’s, remains riddled with potential pitfalls, and their struggle for survival is refreshingly transcendent.

The thrill of watching a stage performer transcend the ordinary limits of realism has continued to generate an exhilaration that other media rarely evoke. Clowns confront obstacles and dilemmas with which we can all relate; the simple act of falling down and getting up is a perfect metaphor for our own vulnerability and daily battles with imposed limitations. Especially in today’s information-saturated, high-tech society, a single act of physical virtuosity can affirm our individual potential to soar in unimagined ways without the aid of machines, or—as Shiner and Irwin remind us—even without spoken language.

Both men are fluent in the universal language of physical comedy, which at its best transcends generational and cultural boundaries, as Shiner knows from his work in Europe, where language barriers are dissolved by the humane truth of his silent physical antics. Although the first version of Fool Moon incorporated some dialogue, both comics soon realized that words were superfluous. “After the first preview on Broadway we took out the dialogue, and we haven’t spoken a word since,” Irwin explains.

“For this particular show, dialogue just didn’t work,” adds Shiner. “It killed the magic of the show because the characters were already funny without saying anything. There was no reason to talk. Silent, physical comedy is actually the hardest comedy you can do, but the laughter somehow feels deeper.”

“Fool Moon is actually full of language,” Irwin points out, “but it’s the language of the body, which in many ways is older—and, some people say, richer and more powerful—than spoken language. Spoken language, after all, is actually the second language we learn, and our first language is the language of the body. It often gets lost as we grow to depend on spoken language.”

The comedy in Fool Moon continues the tradition of master vaudevillians by exuberantly expressing the universality of the human condition—the ways in which we are all bound together by struggles that, when lamponed onstage, can be funny to everyone.

“Red Skelton, for example, has always made me laugh,” says Shiner. “His comedy is not based on social issues, or politics, or pop culture. Every generation has its own way of communicating what is hip and what is not, what is in and what is out. Those are all passing things that come and go. It’s the reality of human life that endures: our experience of fear, love, loneliness, death. Pop culture, the kind of comedy in popular magazines or on television, plays to a narrower audience and just doesn’t last that long. Clowns go beyond that, make us feel the depth of the human condition. So we’re always funny.”
starts to develop a very sensitive awareness to the unspoken dialogue between people. I didn’t even know that was what I was doing, and then it appeared spontaneously in my work. I realized I can read people very quickly.

“When I go out into the audience, I’m looking at how people are sitting, how they are talking to their neighbors, how they are dressed, all of which tells me more or less what kind of person they are in general terms. Once they come onstage, and I shake their hands, look into their eyes, and feel their energy, all kinds of information emerges to which I have become sensitive over the last 20 years. The more an artist studies himself, the more aware he or she becomes of the psychology of other people.”

A TIMELESS ART

The art of the clown has been central to the theatrical experience since audiences first laughed together. Clownish figures appear in the rituals and mythologies of early cultures worldwide, and pantomime is known to have existed in ancient China, Persia, and Egypt. Clowns also figured prominently in the farces of ancient Greece and Rome as foils to more serious characters, their actions often explained by accompanying songs. The acrobatic harlequin and other familiar clown characters grew out of the parodies, pantomimes, and burlesque routines of 16th-century Italy’s commedia dell’arte tradition, which deeply influenced Shakespeare and Molière. The modern clown, with fanciful, exaggerated costumes and gestures—the model for work like Shiner and Irwin’s—developed in 18th-century Europe and was exemplified by Joey Grimaldi, a comically self-serving clown who alternated between ardent gloating and cringing cowardice in his fantastically popular London pantomime routines.

Twentieth-century foolery took on a more global critique of human affairs in the postwar work of master satirists like Samuel Beckett and Dario Fo (both of whom have influenced Irwin’s work). A.C.T. WELCOMES NEW TRUSTEES

A.C.T. is thrilled to announce that five prominent Bay Area professionals have recently dedicated their expertise and enthusiastic support for A.C.T. by joining the company’s board of trustees. As the governing body of A.C.T., the board is responsible for the overall artistic, educational, and financial integrity of the institution. Each trustee’s enthusiasm for theater and unique professional and personal perspective on the complicated process of nonprofit-theater production prove incalculable assets to the company and help ensure A.C.T.’s ongoing fiscal stability and success. Introducing the newest members of The American Conservatory Theatre Foundation:

HELLOS AND GOODBYES
A.C.T. bid bon voyage to the Master of Fine Arts Program class of 2001 at graduation ceremonies held May 12 in the Geary Theater. Honorary M.F.A. degrees were conferred on consummate clown/actor Bill Irwin and director Laird Williamson.

Before graduation, the third-year class traveled to New York and Los Angeles to perform their audition showcase for invited audiences of agents and casting directors. The class also performed an impressive cabaret to an invited audience of A.C.T. donors who contributed funds specifically to support actor training at A.C.T.

To the class of 2001: Hearty congratulations, a tearful farewell, and a joyful welcome to the A.C.T. family of professional artists.

THE GALLERY AT THE GEARY
Find yourself with some extra time before a performance? Want to expose yourself to more fine art, but don't make it to art galleries as often as you'd like? Now you need look no further than the Geary Theater itself. A.C.T. invites you to visit the second floor of the theater (just outside the auditorium doors and along the north bank of windows) to view original artwork by a diverse range of artists in a series of rotating exhibits throughout the season.

Currently on view are paintings and mixed-media works by Boston painter Deborah Barlow, whose work has been influenced by her frequent travels to the coasts of Wales, Scotland, and Ireland and the American Southwest.

Each artwork purchase benefits A.C.T. Barlow is represented locally by Kevin Simmers, (415) 474-1066. Her work can also be viewed online at www.deborahbarlow.com.

enjoy equal access to justice. Barnes’s professional commitment to inclusiveness also informs her eagerness to attract ever broader audiences to A.C.T. “I have always loved theater and attended plays,” says Barnes, “but A.C.T. really got my attention when I went to the reading of Robert O’Hara’s Insurrection: Holding History [at San Francisco’s First Congregational Church] a few years ago. I definitely felt that A.C.T. reached out to me with that event. A.C.T. in fact reached out to the community, and I am part of that community. So I began to think of A.C.T. as a place to go, not just to be entertained, but to grow. I decided that I want to help A.C.T. continue to do that with everyone. Theater can speak to all of us.”

Janet Lamkin is senior vice president for public policy at Bank of America, which includes state-government relations and the development and analysis of public policy issues affecting the company. She has also served on the boards of several state-level organizations, including the California Bankers Association, California Foundation on the Environment and the Economy, Professional Businesswomen of California, and State Government Affairs Council. Lamkin was appointed by former Governor Wilson to the California Advisory Council on Economic Development. “I have long been a fan of live theater,” says Lamkin. “My involvement with A.C.T. dates back to my junior high school days in the Central Valley. Our school participated in A.C.T.’s wonderful Student Matinee Program, which brings children from all over Northern California to A.C.T. I’ve been a fan ever since.”

Thomas A. Larsen heads the real estate practice of law firm Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Falk & Rabkin. In addition to serving as an A.C.T. trustee, Larsen also serves on the board of the Presidio Heights Association of Neighbors. He has served on the faculty of the Practicing Law Institute and was president of the board of trustees of the Bay Area Discovery Museum. Currently, he is leading an effort to develop affordable housing in San Francisco for a coalition of nonprofit groups. “My 14-year-old daughter and my wife have taken many terrific classes at A.C.T., and my 11-year-old son has acted in plays due to A.C.T.’s inspiration,” says Larsen. “A.C.T. is a unique and significant educational force in the community, and I am pleased to have the opportunity to be more involved in its mission.”

Young Conservatory in Performance

This month the A.C.T. Young Conservatory (YC) embarks on its first-ever touring production to London, marking a significant milestone in the ongoing expansion of the YC’s acclaimed New Plays Program. YC Director Craig Slaight initiated the program’s first transatlantic commission and production in 1999, in association with London’s distinguished Royal National Theatre (RNT), by commissioning British playwright Bryony Lavery to write a new play, Illyria, for A.C.T.’s teenage students. With Lavery in residence and Suzi Graham-Adriani (director of the RNT’s youth theater projects) directing, Illyria premiered at A.C.T. last August.

As the next step in this unique transnational collaboration, the cast of the YC’s production of Timothy Mason’s Time on Fire (which was commissioned by and premiered at A.C.T. in 1999) will reprise the popular production—which features “Master Harold... and the boys’s” Jonathan Sanders—at the RNT July 7–14, under Slaight’s direction. The cast (composed mostly of A.C.T. students, with one role set aside for British student Tom Mison) will be the first American theater company of young people ever to play the RNT.

Following the London debut, the YC will present public performances in San Francisco of Time on Fire July 26–August 5, followed by Eddie Mundo Edmundo, by Lynne Alvarez (originally commissioned by the New Plays Program in 1993), directed by Dominique Lozano, August 16–August 26.

For detailed performance information, please visit the A.C.T. Website at act-sfbay.org or call the box office at 415 749-2ACT.

CAREY PERLOFF (Artistic Director), assumed artistic leadership of A.C.T. in 1992. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff has staged for A.C.T. acclaimed productions of Euripides’ Heracle, the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s Invention of Love and Indian Ink, The Three-Penny Opera, Mary Stuart, Old Times, Arcadia, The Rose Tattoo, Antigone, Credited, Uncle Vanya, Home, the world premiere of Leslie Ayvasian’s Singer’s Boy, and Shakespeare’s Tempest. This season she directed new translations of Molière’s Mesaurbras and Pirandello’s Enrico IV; she will open the 2001-02 season with the first American production of Pinter’s Celebration and The Room.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language and The Birthday Party, and many classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won numerous OBIE Awards, including the 1998 OBIE for artistic excellence. In 1999, she directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Perloff received a B.A. in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. She is the proud mother of Lexi and Nicholas.

HEATHER M. KITCHEN (Managing Director), now in her 26th year of professional theater, joined A.C.T. as managing director in 1996. She currently serves as a member of the executive committee of the League of Resident Theaters (LORT) (the national consortium of regional theaters), the board of governors of the Commonwealth Club of California, the board of directors of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, San Francisco and the Peninsula, and the leadership board of the San Francisco chapter of the American Red Cross. Before joining A.C.T., she served as general manager of the Citadel Theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, where she was responsible for a five-theater complex that produced up to 16 productions annually. A native of Canada, Kitchen received an honors degree in drama and theater arts from the University of Waterloo and earned her M.B.A. from Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director), oversees the administration of the A.C.T. Conservatory’s Master of Fine Arts Program, Young Conservatory, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T., in addition to serving as the master acting teacher of the M.F.A. Program. Before joining A.C.T., Smith served as director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting, scene study, and Shakespeare for six years. Also a professional actor, she has performed in regional theaters and in numerous off-Broadway plays, including work by Marc Wellman and David Greenspan. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne’s National Repertory Theater. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of Andre Maurois’ Drinks a Little and George (a musical by Carol Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen’s Don’t Drink the Water. Off-Broadway he produced Isaac’s Little Eyoff (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International’s award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics’ Circle.
