TO ALL SYMPHONIES UNHEARD.

The advent of virtuosity is so subtle and serene, it may be utterly unnoticed, much less applauded. More often, genius evolves quietly. Without fanfare.

Who knows what thousandth hour of effort echoing in an empty auditorium produces perfection. It is only that it does. And converges to create art-music which is greater than the sum of its voices.

Imperial Savings salutes such dedication. It is strikingly similar to our own professional commitment. And serves as a model to hone and orchestrate our own talents. And raise the realm of financial services to an art in its own right.

San Francisco has an enviable heritage of fine, larger homes. The City also has a retailer that provides service worthy of these dwellings. McGuire Real Estate.

And what's enviable about McGuire is that the personal care, attention to detail and the dedication that accompanies these transactions is extended to every home we sell.

You see, at McGuire Real Estate, we've been selling homes in San Francisco since 1919. We know the business, we know the territory, and we'd like to get to know you.

Because we've got the keys to the city.

The wines of The Monterey Vineyard.
A unique expression of the winemaker’s art. Unique because Monterey, where our wines are born, is unique.
Walk along Big Sur, the narrow streets of Carmel, the wharf where Steinbeck’s legends lived.
You can feel the strong sense of art that permeates every minute of life here. Even the cool, gentle climate urges our varietals to be more original.
Urges them to stay on the vine longer ripening to their truest, fullest varietal character.
Uncork a hundred other Chardonnays. You’ll not match the subtle complexities unique to ours.
And because we see each new planting as a bare canvas, we’re careful to match precisely the right
grape variety to precisely the right spot of ground.
Not every winemaker has that freedom.
But the result is varietal wines unlike any other. The result is The Bottled Art of The Monterey Vineyard.
We think of our wines as Bottled Art.

A resident director for three years at A.C.T., he has returned regularly to direct plays, including The English Mystery Plays, Cat Among the Pigeons, Travesties and An Evening with Tom Stoppard, which he devised with Mr. Stoppard's participation. Some of her other Ashland credits include Julius Caesar, Macbeth, The Father, The Matchmaker, Wild Oats, Dr. Faustus, Dracula and Translations. Mr. Duarte holds an M.F.A. in Theater Technology from U.C.L.A.

JESSE HOLLIS (Scenery) joins A.C.T. for the first time this fall to design scenery for The Majestic Kid and Opéra Comique. Earlier this year he provided scenery for the production of The Majestic Kid at the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, where he has also designed Crimes of the Heart, Death of a Salesman and Of Mice and Men. Last March, Mr. Hollis designed sets for Stephen Paulus’ The Postman Always Rings Twice at the Fort Worth Opera. In recent seasons, he has designed Cold Storage, Dreamhouse and A Midsummer Night’s Dream at the Sacramento Theatre Company, where he will be returning for four plays in the 1985-86 season. Locally, Mr. Hollis’ credits include productions for the Berkeley Repertory Theatre, designs for The Lamplighters, including this fall’s Countess Maritza and the original production of Sam Shepard’s True West at the Magic Theater. He has created scenery for the San Francisco Ballet, San Francisco Opera Showcase and Merola Program, Civic Arts Repertory of Walnut Creek, Contra Costa Music Theater, West Bay Opera of Palo Alto, Opera Piccola of San Francisco and the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival.

FRITHA KNUDSEN (Costumes) continues a long association with A.C.T. After earning a B.A. in costume design from California State University/Hayward, she worked at A.C.T. as a scene painter on Hay Fever and The Visit and was Assistant Shop Supervisor for Ah, Wilderness!, The Winter’s Tale, and The Circle. In addition to three seasons with A.C.T, she has also served on the staffs of Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts in Santa Maria, Seattle Repertory Theatre and the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, where she created costume props for Timon of Athens. In 1978 she left the theatre and opened The Costume Studio, a commercial design firm which thrived for six years supplying costumes for visiting entertainers and retailers and by fabricating large character pieces for advertising. Her achievements include a 56’ Remy Martin bottle, a tomato 8’ in diameter and giant chickens for Lynden Farms. She has also designed period costumes for porcelain dolls, toys and masks.

A Night At
The Opera:
Nagle Jackson on “Opéra Comique”

The play deals literally with a night at the opera, with all the events and person-gages of that opening night, both real and imagined, and with the irrelevance of the social event to the artistic event. In fact the artistic event took on a smaller and smaller profile as the work progressed—art imitated reality. The play is partially a personal statement I suppose, for every playwright and director has gone through the belief
Bizet was not unaware of this atmosphere, indeed of the musical atmosphere in general in the Paris of the late 1800s. He once wrote to a friend: “In art (music, painting, sculpture particularly) as in literature, it is the talent and not the idea that makes success. The public (and I am speaking of the intelligent public, the defenders don’t count; that is my own kind of democracy), the public does not understand the idea until later. To reach this later time, the artist’s talent must, by means of attractive form, ease the way.”

Certainly Bizet had mastered the “attractive form.” He purposely opens Carmen with two delightful tunes, one of which—the “Toreador Song”—is probably the biggest pop hit in all of opera. This was done consciously to woo the lazy audiences to more intriguing depths. Bizet was a great fan of Wagner, and wanted to bring French music to those heights. It is frustrating in the extreme to think what might have been had he survived, emotionally and physically, the disappointment of Carmen’s temporary failure.

A few years ago while rummaging
through a San Francisco bookstore, during one of my many visits to this gracious
city, the finger of fate, or pure accidental happenstance, directed my hand towards a copy of Mina Curtiss’ splendid biography of Georges Bizet. As nineteenth century Paris and its artistic denizens are a sort of unofficial hobby with me, and as I realized that I knew next to nothing about the composer of Carmen, I plucked it from its shelf with more than passing interest.
It made a delightful “read,” after which I added it to my collection and thought no more about the matter. Or rather, my conscious self thought no more about the matter, but apparently curious things were going on backstage in my mind because nearly a year later, while going over the galleys of another play of mine
then in the throes of publication, the form of Opéra Comique began to emerge.
I had been tremendously moved by Bizet’s difficult time with the Parisian public and press, and by the melancholy circumstances of his death. That he should die convinced that his towering masterpiece was a failure seemed to me
the most tragic kind of leave-taking imaginable.

Since most of his trials and tribulations centered around the musical theater, and the Opéra Comique in particular, it was that house which seemed the necessary arena for whatever dramatic action might occur. The Opéra Comique, now technically the Salle Favart, was the lesser house
in the subsidized world of French music,
taking a second place to the Grand Opéra, nearly installed in the Salle Garnier the same year as that of Carmen’s debut: 1875.
The Comique was a temple of lighter fare,
good solid “family entertainment” and a perfect haven for the tired homme d’affairs—and indeed many affaires both mercantile and romantic were instigated there. It was a place where often what was going on onstage was the least important aspect of the evening. Into this dubious arena came Bizet with his revolutionary and fiery masterpiece. It would be rather as if someone were to exhibit an X-rated film at Radio City Music Hall.

Any serious criticism of the work was buried in the social outrage. How dared anyone put on something real at the Opéra Comique? How dared there be an ending not only unhappy but graphic in its violence. The leading lady is stabbed.... in

But does one write a play about the misunderstood artist? Yes, many do and they are boring and, usually, dripping with self pity. I don't think artists are terribly good subjects for the dramatic scene; their conflicts are too specialized perhaps. (Amadeus is an interesting exception in that it deals with an artist suffering from unwarranted success.) At any rate, I knew I did not want to write about "poor old Georges," but rather about the totally frivolous world which surrounded him at the Opéra Comique and, indeed, that term "opéra comique" became the key signature of the work and eventually its title.

The play deals literally with a night at the opera, with all the events and personages of that opening night, both real and imagined, and with the irrelevance of the social event to the artistic event. the astonishing and revelatory experience of "proving the lobby" during intermission to see how the audience is responding, only to find that all anyone discusses in a lobby is the parking problem or the restaurant situation. This is probably as it should be; the event exists within "the close and holy darkness" of the auditorium, not in the lobby, but of course for us so actively involved it would seem to exist everywhere.

A note should be made here concerning two historical personalities who appear in this play: Guiraud and Gounod. Ernest Guiraud, Bizet's good friend to the death, is remembered only for the music he added to Carmen after Bizet's death; music to replace the spoken dialogue and thereby to elevate the work to Grand Opera. Interestingly, contemporary producers discard M. Guiraud's interpolations in favor of the original spoken words.

Charles Gounod, that marvelous old hypocrite, was considered by the public and by himself to be the god of French music. His vaguely religious sentimentality and his wonderful melodic gift still hold the major operatic stages, but through one work only, Faust. Gounod spent a year in a monastery during his middle years, tended to sign his letters "Abbé Gounod", but managed to carry on extensive and highly publicized affairs while Madame Gounod sulked in their elegant Parisian apartment. Gounod believed the French aphorism which states that marriage is such a heavy responsibility it takes three people to fulfill it.

I should add on a personal note that I saw my first performance of Carmen at the age of fourteen at the Opéra Comique in Paris. This was also the time of the revival of interest in Feydeau. Perhaps during that year the combination of first operatic experience and first exposure to the king of Boulevard farce was to incube all these many, many years and only now erupt in such bizarre juxtaposition on the stage.

I have many people to thank: firstly, of course, Bill Ball who heard the wonderful A.C.T. acting company read the play last fall (while I was here staging The School for Wives) and who had the courage or folly—or both—to schedule the work for this '85 season. Then, to those wonderful actors, for this play was truly written with this company, and only this company, in mind. I must also thank Michael Pratt, distinguished conductor and member of the faculty of music at Princeton for valuable technical assistance in things musical. I suppose my greatest "merci" should go to Mina Curtis whose biography, Bizet and His World started the whole thing rolling in my unenervable mind. Or perhaps I should thank the bookstore where I happened upon the book. But I can't remember where it was . . .

LOUIS VUITTON
SUICHOCE MADE IN FRANCE
The First Night Of "Carmen"

Thanks to Nagle Jackson, our playwright and director, we have a farcial look at the social life of the evening of Carmen's premiere. But what of the artistic life born that evening? What went on on the other side of those luxury boxes? What of Carmen?

While history does not remember Bizet's now legendary opera as an instant success, it was also not the unmitigated disaster that night that popular lore now reputes it to have been. True, the records show that the auditorium was never filled and that the box-office receipts did not pay the cost of the production, but Carmen was performed forty-eight times in the following six months—hardly a flash-in-the-pan.

In fact, what is recalled as a hostile opening night reception only became that as the evening wore on. Following the fifty-eight minute first act the applause was warm, the singers were recalled and the stage was crowded with people congratulating the composer.

It was only when the more shocking themes—themes which incensed critics later called immoral and out of place at the bourgeois Opera Comique—were trotted out that the audience turned against Carmen. Perhaps the empty house at the final curtain was more of a reaction to the unexpected than a negative statement, a reflection of astonishment rather than loathing.

Though history records the disfavor of the popular press and the first night's audience, Carmen was not universally panned. As sensitive and musically astute a critic as composer Camille Saint-Saëns, whom Bizet considered his peer, saw the production a week after opening and came out in favor of Carmen, bailing it "a great success."

It was also reported by Pierre Barton, a distinguished member of the Comédie-Française company and a friend of Bizet's, who attended a performance of Carmen following its premiere that "the whole audience vibrated in unison. Everything had been understood, appreciated, emphasized.... This crowd with which I rubbed elbows in the corridors and lobbies, whose naive appreciation I overheard, seemed quite as enchanted as I was. "It was the snobs, those who felt that Bizet and his "courtiers" would forever soil the reputation of an upstanding theatre, who were the loudest and most frequent cries of failure.

Whether or not the bad press was responsible for Bizet's despondency, which was said to have led, in turn, to his decline both physically and artistically, is another matter entirely. But perhaps the reputation Carmen has as a work of art unappreciated in its own time is unwarranted.

If it took you this long to get the idea that Johnston & Murphy shoes are worth every cent you have to pay for them, then it was worth writing this ad.

That Johnston & Murphy fourth law: nothing worth having ever comes easy.

Johnston & Murphy's Law

As in Mr. Murphy's observation, too often what can go wrong does go wrong. But not with a Johnston & Murphy shoe. Our passion for quality, which approaches the ruthless, assures that what could go wrong won't. Because you make a great dress shoe one slow step at a time. More than 165 steps in all. You make them with dozens of craftsmen's hands. Hands that know what great leather feels like. Hands that cut gently. Hands that stitch patiently.

JSM'S FIRST LAW: GREAT LEATHER MAKES GREAT SHOES

We import our finest calf skins from Europe, Italy and Germany mostly. We pore over them with meticulous fingers and ever-probing eyes in a controlled environment at our J&M plant. Here the humidity is a constant 65 percent so these precious calf skins will be soft and supple to our shoemaker's touch.

We give them machine tests for strength and durability because we want you to have a great pair of shoes that lasts. We probably reject more calf skins than anybody else in the world. Too thin. Ugly scars. Even tack bits. We don't buy large flabby skins. We use only the finest skins for our top leathers.

JSM'S SECOND LAW: GREAT PEOPLE MAKE GREAT SHOES

We don't let just anybody cut our great feathers. Our Willard Adams Hermès boots J&M markers insist. So they are always soft, supple and easy to work.

JSM'S THIRD LAW: HARD WORK PAYS OFF

Right now, a pair of Johnston & Murphy shoes is half finished. Eight working days to this point. Another ten to the end. There's lasting. And more stitching. And insoles. And outsoles. And even a special ground cork formulation that creates a cushion between the insole and outside.

Our soft cork stays soft and so do your feet.

If you want a longer story of why Johnston & Murphy shoes are worth every cent you have to pay for them, then it was worth writing this ad. That's Johnston & Murphy fourth law: nothing worth having ever comes easy.

Love Yosemite in summer?
It sings in the winter.

With Yosemite as the stage, you'll have one of the best seats in the house for our Musicians' Holidays. Enjoy arias from Handel to the present, highlights of Bizet's "Carmen," and Cimarosa's "The Secret Marriage." Or revel in a Richard Rodgers revue, songs from "Kismet," a concert performance of "West Side Story," and a one-woman show by Joanne Worley.

This festival, coordinated by Bracebridge Director Andrea Fulton, will feature two sessions on opera and two on Broadway musicals, all hosted by leading composers, singers, and directors.

Choose your lodging, the Ahwahnee Hotel or Yosemite Lodge. And enjoy a grand dinner, followed by a show.

The Musicians' Holidays are scheduled Jan. 26 through Feb. 6. For more information or reservations, call our Holiday Hotline at (209) 252-2700.

And find harmony with nature.

If your bank hands you a new trust officer every time you call, hand yourself a new bank.

Unfortunately, some giant banks rotate officers through their trust department as if it was a career stepping-stone for something bigger.

Fortunately, there's an alternative; the Private Banking group at Hibernia. We go to great lengths to make sure that the career professional assigned to manage your affairs is permanently assigned to you.

If you've been waiting for a bank to hand you consistency and quality instead of just handing you another trust officer, call Hibernia. At The Hibernia Bank, the wait is over.

The waiting is over.
