1976-77 SEASON
A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO THE AUDIENCE

Since its first San Francisco season in 1967, A.C.T. has provided free programs for its patrons in both the Geary and Marines' Memorial Theatres. This season, A.C.T. produced its own program as a result of the "for sale only" policy adopted by Performing Arts Magazine, which had provided Geary Theatre programs.

Beginning with the summer season of theatre and dance attractions, A.C.T. is pleased to announce that The Hagen Group, which has been publishing the San Francisco Ballet program for the past two years, will also be printing A.C.T.'s.

In addition to the economic advantage of publishing for two performing arts companies, this arrangement will provide A.C.T. greater assurance of continuing the free program service.

Potential advertisers are encouraged to contact The Hagen Group at (415) 929-7170.

“PEER GYNT”
A TALE OF TWO LEGENDS

Joy Callin & Daniel Davis

Ibsen had great purpose for his melange of styles and was consequently disturbed by the stir Peer Gynt caused when first produced in Norway in 1876, nine years after the play was written. It was viewed either as a satire of boasters or as a protest against selfishness. But the Norwegian playwright had written his drama as the journey of a man's soul, using legends to reflect the emotional and psychological states of Peer's life.

It was a life strikingly similar to Ibsen's own legendary career. He was born in March of 1828, the son of a highly successful merchant. But in 1835 severe financial reverses forced the family to sell its holdings and move to a farm on the outskirts of town, not unlike the poor farm of the Gynt.

Public disgrace drove Ibsen's father to drink and young Henrik—again like Peer—grew up dreaming of the time when he could leave the burden of family bitterness behind. Like his dramatic creation he was a wayward aloof fellow who began writing poems and stories as an outlet for his emotions.

At 15 Ibsen did leave home, to become an apothecary's apprentice where he dreamt about a career in medicine. Instead, he fathered an illegitimate child and continued writing poetry. At the age of 21 he completed his first play, Cataline, an historical drama.

His real introduction to the theater occurred in 1853 when he was hired as dramatist of the newly founded National Theater in Bergen, serving six years as stage manager and director.

Ibsen's growing interest in Norwegian folklore is evident in the poems he wrote at this time. He received a grant to spend part of 1862 on a walking tour through rural areas where he heard first about Peer.

But unlike Peer once again, Ibsen showed his feelings of inferiority through jealousy of the success of others. To prove his worth, he applied for a writer's pension. It was refused and he exiled himself for 27 years. During that period he wrote his greatest plays, however, including Peer Gynt.

Finally like the legendary Peer, Ibsen also made his peace with Norway. His homecoming in 1891 was a national holiday. He settled in Oslo where he died in 1906.

The legend of Peer Gynt, like the life of its creator Henrik Ibsen, is a soul-stirring search for wisdom.

The title character is based on the legendary life of a storyteller who lived in the mountainous rural region of Norway circa 1800. He was a local laughingstock for telling tall tales which always featured himself as the hero. The word "Gynt" means "boaster."

The stories Peer told were familiar to Norwegians as traditional folk-tales. Yet he became a part of that lore and was recorded in Norwegian Fairy Tales and Legends, which Ibsen had read.

In what he originally intended as a poem, Ibsen tried to capture the touch and quality of this folklore. He consequently declined to use classic verse and switched instead to rhyming couplets.

Director Allen Fletcher worked closely with the original rhyme scheme to get the legendary quality of the drama.

"The thing to remember," he explains, "is that Ibsen wanted it to sound like a fairy tale."

But it wasn't easy, for the complexity of the play evades simplistic translation. Fletcher says: "The beginning of the play when Peer is a young man, living on a Norwegian farm in Gudbrandsdal, is fairly realistic. But after he abducts the bride and has carried her off into the mountains, the whole atmosphere shifts into a fantastic world where trolls influence Peer's life. In the end he returns to where he began, in Gudbrandsdal."

GOOD SEATS AVAILABLE FOR ‘TRAVESTIES’ HOLODOVER

One of the most popular shows in A.C.T.’s current repertory, Travesties will be held over after the company’s scheduled May 28 1976 season closing, Tom Stoppard’s rollicking comedy, directed by Nagle Jackson, will continue at the Geary for one week only May 31 through June 4.

Stoppard mixes history and fantasy in his dazzling parody of art and politics and the geniuses responsible for it all. The play is based on a theatrical experience of an actual historical figure by the name of Henry Carr. A minor British consular official, he played Algermon Moncrieff in a 1918 production of The Importance of Being Ernest, which proved to be a major event in his otherwise colorless life.

Stoppard’s comedy begins half a century later as Carr recalls—with considerable license—his fictional encounters with Lenin, novelist James Joyce and the dastard Tristan Tzara.

Tickets are now on sale at A.C.T.’s Geary Theatre box office for the Travesties extended dates and all A.C.T. productions.

One weekend over several years ago, I was driving with a friend through bleak countryside.
We passed a stable. Suddenly he was reminded by it of an alarming crime which he had heard about recently at a dinner party in London. He knew only one horrible detail, and his complete mention of it could barely have lasted a minute—but it was enough to arouse in me an intense fascination.
The act had been committed several years before by a highly disturbed young man. It had deeply shocked a local bench of magistrates. It lacked, finally, any coherent explanation.
A few months later my friend died. I could not verify what he had said, or ask him to expand it.

Peter Shaffer’s other works include Five Finger Exercise (1958), The Private Ear and The Public Eye (1962), The Royal Hunt of the Sun (1964), Black Comedy (1965) and The Battle of Shrivings (1970), which opened in London within weeks of his brother Anthony’s Stlee. The British playwright, who now resides in New York, has recently completed the screenplay for Equus, which is still running on Broadway.

A NOTE ON ‘THE BOURGEOIS GENTLEMAN’

King Louis XIV of France was seeking as much an act of low vengeance as high comedy when he commissioned Molière to write The Bourgeois Gentleman. In the play about a colossal fool who pretends to be a nobleman, the French monarch got both.

In the summer of 1670, an envoy of the Turkish Grand Sultan had arrived in Paris to discuss prisoner exchange with Louis. Instead of coming to an agreement, the pair managed to nearly come to blows, with the envoy walking out on his host.

Originally ruffled by the incident, Louis ultimately treated the matter as a joke and assigned Molière to compose a musical entertainment to include some “funny bits of Turquerie.” At the chateau of Chambord, Molière’s troupe first presented those results, The Bourgeois Gentleman.

“It’s really the first musical comedy,” explains William Ball who staged the classic. “Molière fused three elements: the musical of the song and dance, the commedia that is almost vaudeville and the classicism of a perfectly balanced play.”

So musical was The Bourgeois Gentleman originally that the Gazette de France critic called it “a ballet with six entrees, accompanied by a comedy which was prefaced by a marvelous concert, followed by a most delightful musical dialogue.”

Through the passage of 300 years the play has come to be performed more for its comedy than its music. Nevertheless, the song and dance is invariably retained.

“The interlude, the dancing lesson, the dressing scene, the final ‘Mamamouchi’ ceremony are all part of the action developing the celebration of a grand fool,” Ball points out.

Though comedy is not usually symmetrical, Molière managed with The Bourgeois Gentleman to create a play with classical proportions, with all the action taking place in one day of one general place, with a balance of speeches, jokes and even characters evident throughout the play.

Nowhere either in all of Molière’s writing is the commedia dell’arte acting style with its vigorous farce, instant improvisation, wit and pure physical exuberance more evident than in this play. Jokes, slapstick, puns and sightgags rapidly accumulate in this parody of a “nobleman.”

The court, it is reported, received The Bourgeois Gentleman with far less than acclaim. But Louis savored his revenge on the Turks as he delightedly watched Molière in the role of the Turkish “Mamamouchi” whirl grotesquely and finally tumble into a heap— all in order to join the rarified ranks of French nobility.

Alarmed by the courtiers’ lack of enthusiasm, Molière feared the play’s premiere in Paris would be a disaster. But Louis convinced his court jester to go ahead with the opening. He did and Parisians cheered the play for 24 consecutive performances.

Those Parisians recognized, as have all succeeding generations, the grand musical and comic portrait of a man who will at all costs make a fool of himself.

A NOTE ON ‘TRAVESTIES’

In Travesties, playwright Tom Stoppard juggles history and fiction to create an enigmatic and eloquent parody of modern man and his ideas. The rollicking comedy unfolds through the highly suspect reminiscences of retired British diplomat Henry Carr, an elderly gentleman safely ensconced in his modern study as he struggles to recollect the events surrounding the part he played in a 1918 production of Oscar Wilde’s The Importance of Being Earnest. Carr took the role of Algernon Moncrieff in Wilde’s turn-of-the-century comedy.

“In an otherwise ordinary life, Carr’s participation in The Importance of Being Earnest was an extraordinary event,” explains A.C.T. guest director Nagle Jackson who staged Travesties. “As Algernon Moncrieff he was at his most comfortable and most admired. So now, to put himself back into 1918, he chooses that disguise.”

Carr, like Stoppard’s other famous faceless characters, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, is the common man observing uncommon events, but helpless to either understand or really participate in them.

Weaving in and out of his foggy memories are a trio of revolutionaries: the novelist James Joyce, the Bolshevik Vladimir Ilyich Lenin and the father of Dadaism Tristan Tzara, whose theories of anti-art presaged a revolt in non-establishment art forms such as surrealism. Throughout Travesties, the foursome incessantly and hilariously debate among themselves the meaning of art and revolution.

Travesties is all history—Stoppard-style that is. As he says about the play:

“Travesties is a work of fiction which makes use, and misuse, of history. Scenes which are self-evident documentary mingle with others which are just as evidently fantastical. People who were hardly aware of each other’s existence are made to collide; real people and imaginary people are brought together without ceremony; events which took place months, and even years, apart are presented as synchronous.”

Travesties was first produced by the Royal Shakespeare Company at London’s Aldwych Theatre in 1974. An immediate sensation, the company crossed the Atlantic to play on Broadway last season where again it was a hit. It was hardly Stoppard’s first triumph. At 40 he is England’s most successful and exported playwright since John Osborne or Harold Pinter. His first great success came in 1967 with Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, presented by A.C.T. for three seasons starting with the 1968-69 season. Subsequently he wrote the one-acts, The Real Inspector Hound and After Magritte, and the full length Jumpers, performed at A.C.T. during the 1974-75 season. He has also written a number of radio and television plays and has authored the novel, Lord Malquist and Mr. Moon.
“EQUUS”
RETURNS IN MAY BY POPULAR DEMAND

Peter Shaffer’s electrifying drama, Equus, a smash hit during A.C.T.’s 1975-76 season and in its revival edition last fall, returns by popular demand for three final performances. The award-winning play, directed by William Ball, returns to the Geary repertory for 8:30 curtain times on May 21, 25 and 28, the latter date representing the official close of the 1976-77 season.

The spine-tingling suspense of a mystery story and the terror of a psychological thriller unite to create a modern morality play as a psychiatrist delves for the truth about a teenager’s heinous crime against a stable of horses he loves.

An unqualified success since its 1973 premiere, Equus played to standing room only for over two years in London.

Transported to Broadway, the play is now in its third year as a solid hit, selling out every performance as it has in London and San Francisco.

In 1975 Equus won the New York Drama Critics Circle and Tony Awards as Best Play of the Year.

The choice central role of the psychiatrist has lured numerous leading men. Alec McCowen originally played the part in London. The role was assumed in New York by Anthony Hopkins and later, Anthony Perkins.

A year ago Richard Burton returned to the stage for the first time in over a decade to play the psychiatrist. Following his Broadway performance, Burton took on the role in Sydney Lumet’s upcoming film version of Equus.

In the spirit of true repertory for which A.C.T. is well-known, three members of the current acting company have been seen in the role of the psychiatrist, Peter Donat, Daniel Davis and Raye Birk, who will repeat the assignment for the May performances. Harry Hamlin returns as the troubled boy.

On-stage student seating will again be available in the limited number of bleacher seats comprising the rear of the set on a first-come-first-served basis 30 minutes prior to curtain time.

“RECIATIONS & COGITATIONS”
BY & WITH PETER DONAT

As his contribution to the California Association for A.C.T.’s Annual Spring Fund Drive which is currently occupying whatever free time and extra energy the entire A.C.T. company has, Peter Donat will present a special “one-man show” at the Marines’ Memorial Theatre on Sunday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m.

Intriguingly titled Recitations and Cogitations, the first part of the presentation will include readings of poetry, plays and other selections. The second half is comprised of Anton Chekhov’s extremely witty play for one actor, On the Harmfulness of Tobacco.

A featured performer with A.C.T. since its second San Francisco season, Donat will also conduct a question-and-answer discussion session with the audience after an intermission during which wine will be served.

Tickets are available for Recitations and Cogitations with Peter Donat at the Geary Theatre box office, which is open during intermission, or by calling or writing the California Association for A.C.T., 450 Geary St., San Francisco 94102, (415) 771-3880.

Beginning in the theatre as a designer, he soon turned to acting and appeared with regional companies and Shakespearean festivals across the country. He directed his New York directorial debut with Chekhov's little-known Ivanov in an Off-Broadway production that won the Obie and Vernon Rice Drama Desk Awards for 1986. The next few years found him directing at Houston's Alley Theatre, San Francisco's ACT, and a variety of other theatres around the country.

JAMES B. McKENZIE (Executive Producer) has been associated with A.C.T. throughout its history as a member of the Board of Trustees. In 1969 he became Executive Producer, took the company's first tour to Broadway, and has remained as Executive Producer since. McKenzie is an active participant in all phases of the theatre. He has produced three plays on Broadway, and 15 national tours of Broadway plays. He has been the producer of the Westport Country Playhouse in Connecticut since 1959 and of the Peninsula Players in Fish Creek, Wisconsin, since 1960. McKenzie is vice-president of the Council of Stooky Theatres, a director of The League of Resident Theatres and of the Council of Resident Summer Theatres, and is an active member of The League of New York Theatres and Producers. He is a working member of the Association of Theatre Press Agents and Managers, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Actors' Equity Association. His theatrical career encompasses more than 1,000 productions, and includes work in every state of the union.
