But red wine? Wine writer Joshua Wesson says: “Phooey!” to the conventional wisdom. We think he’s right. But don’t take our word for it. Come in for dinner, order any fish main course and present this ad. We’ll set up a pair of red wines to taste. For free. Wines like Duckhorn Merlot, Ravenswood Zinfandel, and Luna Sangiovese. Red wine with fish? You decide.

This is what happens when you send a lemon drop to France for a semester.
AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training in its conservatory, and an ongoing dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff and Managing Director Heather Kitchen, A.C.T. embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures that are our collective legacy, while exploring new artistic forms and new communities. A commitment to the highest standards informs every aspect of A.C.T.'s creative work.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people; today, A.C.T.'s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 220,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. In 1996, A.C.T.'s efforts to develop creative talent for the theater were recognized with the prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award.

Since Perloff's appointment in 1992, A.C.T. has enjoyed continued success with groundbreaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. Guided by Perloff and Kitchen, who joined the company in 1996, A.C.T. has enjoyed a remarkable period of record-breaking audience expansion and renewed financial stability. The company continues to produce challenging theater in the rich context of symposia, audience discussions, and community interaction.

The conservatory, now serving 1,900 students every year, was the first training program not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among the conservatory's distinguished former students. With the 1995 appointment of Melissa Smith as conservatory director, A.C.T. revitalized its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience. The A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program has moved to the forefront of America's actor training programs, while serving as the creative engine of the company at large.
It would bow if it could.

Come to A.C.T. for the most entertaining education in town. A.C.T. offers several ways for you to learn about the season's productions and to express your views on the issues they raise:

A.C.T. PROLOGUES

These lively half-hour presentations are conducted by each show's director and are open to the public regardless of whether you are seeing the performance that evening. Prologues, sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, are a perfect way to get a behind-the-scenes look at the creative process behind each production. Prologues are held before the Tuesday preview of every production, at 5:30 p.m., in the Geary Theater. Doors open at 5 p.m.

AUDIENCE EXCHANGES

These informal, anything-goes sessions are a great way to share your feelings and reactions with fellow theatergoers. Audience Exchanges take place in the Geary Theater for 30 minutes immediately after selected performances and are moderated by A.C.T. staff members and artists.

WORDS ON PLAYS

Each entertaining and informative audience handbook contains advance program notes, a synopsis of the play, and additional background information about the playwright and the social and historical context of the work. A subscription for seven handbooks is available by mail to full-season subscribers for $42; limited copies of handbooks for individual plays are also available for purchase at the Geary Theater Box Office, located at 405 Geary Street at Mason, and at the merchandise stand in the main lobby of the Geary Theater, for $8 each.

When Edith Wharton began to write in a personal diary for the first time, she was 62 years old. "What I recall is of a lone life, and what I have gone through has made me alone."

Despite this dark assessment of her own experience, Wharton's life was in many ways a sparkling success. A woman of considerable fortune and impeccable social pedigree, she traveled in the highest social circles of turn-of-the-century America, at the same time feted as one of the most popular novelists of her day. One of this nation's most celebrated and prolific writers, Wharton produced more than 40 books in 40 years, including poetry, literary criticism, and authoritative works on travel, architecture, gardens, and interior design. She is best remembered, however, for her superbly crafted and brilliantly observed fiction—including the novels The House of Mirth, The Custom of the Country, and The Age of Innocence—condemning the rigid structures and misplaced morality of the upper-class New York society in which she was raised.

The House of Mirth, Wharton's second published novel, is perhaps the most personal of these works. Like her alter ego Lily Bart, Edith Wharton was an intelligent woman trapped in a fashionable world—a sensitive, highly moral, and creative being raised in a rarefied society that valued only wealth and social status and trained its women solely for the occupation of looking beautiful and marrying well. Unlike Lily, however, Edith was able to reach beyond her upbringing to create a life for herself as an independent, accomplished woman by dramatizing her personal history in her writing.

"Pussy" Jones

In an unpublished autobiographical manuscript she called "Life and I," Wharton wrote: "I never exchanged a word with a really intelligent human being until I was over twenty—and then, alas, I had only a short glimpse of what such communion might be! . . . My childhood and growth were an intellectual desert."

Born in 1862 to Lucretia Rhinelander and George Frederic Jones, Edith was a child of the American aristocracy, a descendant of the well-to-do patrician families who had lived in New York since the 17th century. Unlike such parvenus as Jay Gould and Andrew Carnegie, who had entered high society as a result of recent fortunes made in steel and railroads, Edith's family could trace its ancestry back to England and Holland, and maintained its fortune through quietly appreciating Manhattan real estate and compounding financial investments.

A cold, insensitive beauty obsessed with her own success in society, Lucretia was already 37, with two teenaged sons, when Edith was born, but (like Lily's mother) still "young enough to dance her ball-dresses to rags." Lucretia was definitely not happy to have a third child, particularly a daughter she considered awkward, ungraceful, and peculiarly intellectual. Edith never quite overcame the disapproval of her mother, whom she in turn described as remote, unloving, and impatient. "I was never free from the oppressive sense that I had two absolutely inscrutable beings to please," wrote Edith, "God and my mother—who, while ostensibly upholding the same principles of behavior, differed totally as to their application. And my mother was the most inscrutable of the two."

Shy, fiercely imaginative, and starved for emotional and intellectual nourishment, young Edith was an outsider in her own family, who lived in a world she saw as harshly critical of intellectual pursuits:

I have often sighed, in looking back on my childhood, to think how pitiful a provision was made for the life of the imagination behind those uniform brownstone facades. . . . But this is not to say that the average well-to-do New Yorker of my childhood was not starved for a sight of the high gods. Beauty, passions, and danger were automatically excluded from his life (for the men were almost as starved as the women); and the average human being deprived of air from the heights is likely to produce other lives equally starved.

Struggling to come to terms with her nature as a creative being in a hostile environment, Edith escaped into her fantasies. "I can not remember the time when I did not want to 'make up' stories. Before she could even read or write, she would take up the family's copy of Washington Irving's Alhambra and pace, alone in a locked room, as stories poured out of her to an unseen audience. "I had only to walk the floor, turning the pages as I walked, to be swept off full sail on the sea of dreams," she wrote many years later.
I was enthralled by words. It mattered very little whether I understood them or not; the sound was the essential thing. Wherever I went, they sang to me like the birds in an enchanted forest. And they had looks as well as sound; each one had its own gestures and physiognomy. What were dolls to a child who had such marvelous toys, and who knew that as fast as one wearied of the familiar ones, there were others, more wonderful still, to take their place?

Like other upper-class New York girls, Edith was never sent to school, but tutored by governesses more interested in preparing her for her future role as society hostess than stimulating her mind. Nevertheless, “making up” eventually became “writing down,” while Mrs. Jones battled to overcome her daughter’s unhealthy literary preoccupation, forbidding her daughter to read contemporary novels without permission and depriving her of the materials necessary to pursue her passion. “It was not thought necessary to feed my literary ambitions with fooscape, and for lack of paper I was driven to begging for the wrappings of the parcels delivered at the house,” wrote Edith. “I always kept a stack in my room . . . and I used to spread them on the floor and travel over them on my hands and knees, building up long parallel columns of blank verse.”

The budding author hid in the safety of her father’s library, devouring classics by Swift, Sterne, Defoe, Shakespeare, Milton, Corneille, Racine, La Fontaine, Hugo, Goethe, Keats, Shelley, and, especially, Ruskin, who reflected Edith’s passion for all things beautiful. Although forbidden to read the Brontës, she “longed for more of Ford and Marlowe and Webster! . . . and read and re-read the great scenes of The Duchess of Malfy and The Broken Heart and Faustus and Edward II.”

Worried about their daughter’s shyness and desire to read, Edith’s parents launched her into society a year early, at 17. Thanks to her brother Henry’s popularity, Edith (“Pussy” to her friends)’s debut was a triumph; following several beaux and two loves (including Walter Berry, thought to be the model for Lawrence Selden, who never proposed but became Edith’s lifelong companion, confidant, and personal editor), Edith won the holy grail of marriage in 1885.

Edward (Teddy) Wharton was a kind young man from a socially acceptable Virginia family, with no profession and no interest in anything remotely intellectual, but he was presentable in the society circles in which Edith and her family traveled. Unprepared for married life (her mother had disgustedly refused Edith’s repeated pleading to be told what to expect after her wedding day) and tied to a man suspicious of her literary friends and interests, the new Mrs. Wharton was trapped: “I heard the key turn in my prison-lock.” The couple set up housekeeping in Newport, Rhode Island, where New York society was busily building outrageous mansions and organizing the social world Edith would spend the rest of her life satirizing. The Vanderbilts, Astors, and Ogden Millses entertained lavishly, and life became a blur of tennis, enormous dinners, and extravagant halls. While Teddy thrived, Edith sank into depression and illness that were to last 12 years.

Slowly, however, she began to write again, filling her fiction with portrayals of unhappy married women longing for soul mates. In “The Fullness of Life” (1893), her second published story, Wharton describes the interior life of a woman:

There is the hall, through which everyone passes in going in and out; the drawing room, where one received formal visits; the sitting room, where the members of the family come and go as they list; but beyond that, far beyond, are other rooms, the handles of whose doors perhaps are never turned; no one knows the way to them, no one knows whether they lead, and in the innermost room, the holy of holes, the soul sits alone and waits for a footstep that never comes.

Finally daring to submit her adult work for publication, Wharton became an instant literary success. In 1889, she sent three poems to three leading magazines, all of which were accepted; her first collection of short stories, The Greater Inclination (1899) was acclaimed by critics; and her first published novel, The Valley of Decision (1902), received praise on both sides of Atlantic, from such literary luminaries as Charles Eliot Norton and Henry James (who initiated their famous friendship with an admiring letter).

Building the House of Mirth

“Social conditions as they are just now in our new world,” wrote Wharton in a 1905 letter, “where the sudden possession of money has come without inherited obligations, or any traditional sense of solidarity between the classes, is a vast & absorbing field for the novelist.” Settling into her beloved new home, The Mount, in Lenox, Massachusetts, and heeding James's exhortation to “Do New York!” Wharton launched an assault against the rigid prejudice and snobbery of old New York and the grasping shallowness of the nouveaux riches who clamored to enter its social ranks.

Naming the new work first A Moment's Ornament and then The Year of the Rose before settling on the biblical reference to The House of Mirth, Wharton (one of whose childhood nicknames was Lily) set out to condemn society's expectation of a woman's sole purpose in life—to be decorative and beautiful. Drawing on familiar settings, including the country estate of family friends the Ogden Millses (the model for the Tretons' Bellomont) and houses she visited on Fifth Avenue, and transmuting the pain and loneliness of her youth and early marriage into the tragic downfall of Lily Bart, Wharton rendered an elegant indictment of the social world she had inhabited as a girl.

The novel appeared first in installments in Scribner's magazine, followed by the completed book in October 1905. A runaway popular success, The House of Mirth sold 30,000 copies in the first three weeks after publication; within two months 100,000 copies had been ordered, and by the end of the year Wharton had earned more than $20,000 (about $200,000 today) in royalties.

Almost too astute for comfort, Wharton's depiction generated no little controversy, in addition to spectacular sales and critical praise (“The House of Mirth seems to stand at the head of all American fiction, save Hawthorne alone,” wrote a prominent critic of the time). Wharton's friend Winthrop Chanler wrote to his wife, Daisy: “It is a very remarkable book; New York society as it really is, as one really knows it, has never been written about before. The satire is so light, so deep, and so true to life. One knows all the people without being able to name one of them.”

The controversy set off a correspondence in the New York Times Saturday Review of Books between readers in Newport and Lenox. Wharton responded: “I must protest, emphatically, against the suggestion that I have 'stripped'..."
SEE THE GEARY FROM THE INSIDE OUT

In response to popular demand, A.C.T. has been offering behind-the-scenes tours of the Geary Theater since November. The first series of tours offered to the public since the reopening of the landmark theater in 1996, Geary Theater backstage tours begin at 10:30 a.m. on select Wednesday and Saturday mornings. The approximately 75-minute tours ($8 for the general public; $6 for subscribers; $4 for students and seniors; $2 for children aged 6–12) are a wonderful opportunity for adults and children to see how theater magic is made! Every tour includes backstage areas otherwise closed to the public. The tour is wheelchair accessible, but we ask that you let us know by phone in advance if you need specific accommodations.

Each tour is limited to 15 people. For tickets, call (415) 749-2ACT or visit us on the Web at www.act-sfbay.org.

A.C.T. WELCOMES NEW DIRECTOR OF DEVELOPMENT SHARYN BAHN

We are thrilled to announce that distinguished fundraising professional Sharyn Bahn officially joined the A.C.T. family as director of development in January. Heading a six-person staff, Bahn oversees all programs that raise money for A.C.T.'s $3.5 million Annual Fund, which includes membership, telemarketing and direct mail, special events, foundation, government, and corporate sources, as well as major gifts from individual donors and the board of trustees.

Before joining A.C.T., Bahn was the development officer for cardiology and diabetes at UC San Francisco, where she designed and implemented a comprehensive fundraising strategy emphasizing major donors. She has also served as vice president for development at Cambridge College in Massachusetts and as director of foundation development for the WGBH Educational Foundation in Boston.

Anyone interested in talking to Bahn about giving to A.C.T. can call her at (415) 439-2472.

VOLUNTEER YOUR SEAT!

If you have an odd-numbered (1, 3, 5, etc.) location in the orchestra section of the Geary Theater for the 2 p.m. performance of The House of Mirth on Sunday, April 16, or the 2 p.m. performance of Edward II on Saturday, June 3, we want your seat! Response to our American Sign Language (ASL)-interpreted performances has been much greater than expected, and we are looking for additional seats for our Deaf audience members, who need to be seated near the ASL interpreters.

A.C.T.

AN OPEN LETTER TO A.C.T. SUBSCRIBERS

Dear Subscriber:

Thank you for joining A.C.T. for the 1999–2000 season. Your commitment has helped A.C.T. to produce theater at an ever-higher standard of artistry and imagination.

Dazzling productions of The Threepenny Opera, The Invention of Love, and now 2 Pianos, 4 Hands and The House of Mirth have attracted more subscribers to A.C.T. than ever in its 33-year history, making a night at the Geary Theater one of the most sought-after tickets in town! And we still have two more shows ahead — the A.C.T. debut of acclaimed theater and opera director Mark Lamos staging Christopher Marlowe’s classic Edward II, and the international underground hit Shockheaded Peter.

Yet here we are, already hard at work preparing for the 2000–01 season, which begins in September. While final play selections haven’t been made yet, we anticipate announcing a stellar season in the next few weeks.

Look for your season announcement and priority subscription renewal materials in your mailbox in mid to late March — and please renew immediately! Guarantee not only that you won’t be among the thousands of people turned away from sold-out A.C.T. performances, but that you’ll have the very best available seats in the house.

Thank you for your extraordinary support!

Yours,

Carey Perloff
Artistic Director
If you would like to help us increase access to the theater for Deaf patrons, please call the box office at (415) 749-2228 to exchange your ticket for another date or for a different orchestra seat on the same date. Thank you for your help.

A.C.T. Celebrates Stellar Opening of The Invention of Love

On January 14, San Francisco glitterati joined A.C.T. to celebrate the opening of the American premiere of Tom Stoppard’s latest masterpiece, The Invention of Love. The Hilton San Francisco & Towers graciously hosted a fabulous fete in the hotel’s Imperial Ballroom, where cast, crew, and friends gathered for postperformance cocktails and elegant hors d’oeuvres.

He was the original director of Tanquerey’s Boston–New York AIDS Bicycle Rides, which raised more than $16 million for East Coast AIDS services.

New York society. New York society is still amply clad, & the little corner of its garment that I lifted was meant to show only that little atrophied organ—the group of idle & dull people—that exists in any big & wealthy social body.”

Years later she reminisced: “When [The House of Mirth] was done I remember saying to myself: ‘I don’t yet know how to write a novel, but I know how to find out how to.’ I went on steadily trying to ‘find out how to’; but I wrote two or three novels without feeling that I had made much progress. It was not until I wrote Ethan Frome [1911] that I suddenly felt the artist’s full control of his implements.”

AFTER MIRTH

It is ironic, perhaps, that the tragedy of Lily Bart made possible the happiness of Edith Wharton, whose life in many ways truly began after the success of The House of Mirth. Independently wealthy, a literary celebrity, and an attractive woman in her forties, Wharton was in her prime. As she gained financial independence and personal confidence, however, her husband’s health deteriorated, and Wharton longed to escape her oppressive marriage and the stifling society of New York. She moved to France in 1907, where the popularity of the Revue de Paris’s serialization of The House of Mirth extended her fame. Despite her famous critiques of American society, however, Wharton remained faithful to the traditions of her heritage and set to work establishing herself within the conservative social hierarchy and salon life of Paris, where her guests included at one time or another the likes of Teddy Roosevelt, F. Scott Fitzgerald, and Ernest Hemingway.

Finally, at the age of 47, Edith discovered passion in the arms of journalist W. Morton Fullerton, who awoke her to a new understanding of the questions she had been unable to answer in Lily’s name:

I have drunk the wine of love at last, I have known the thing best inglorious, I have been warmed through & through, never to grow quite cold again till the end. . . . How often I used to say to myself: No one can love life as I do, love the beauty & the splendour
& the ardour, & find words for them as I can, without having a share in them some day—I mean that dear intimate share that one guessed at, always, beyond & behind their universal thrill!—And the day came—the has been—and I have poured it all into my stored-up joy of living, all my sense of the beauty & mystery of the world, every impression of joy & loneliness, in sight or sound, or touch, that I once figured to myself in all the lonely days when I used to weave such sensations into a veil of color to hide, the great blank behind.

Edith’s newfound love of life found its way into her writing, and the decade after 1911 was the period of her strongest work: Ethan Frome, The Reef (1912), The Custom of the Country (1913, her most passionate attack against old New York), Summer (1917), and The Age of Innocence (1920), which in 1921 made Wharton the first woman to win the Pulitzer Prize.

By 1913, Teddy—who had no occupation other than to manage Edith’s considerable fortune—had deteriorated into extreme mental instability. After he had embezzled $50,000 of her money and established a mistress in Boston, Wharton—despite her social conservatism and distaste for divorce—set herself free.

By the end of her life, Wharton came to appreciate the dignity, order, and beauty of the world she once had condemned, accepting her identity as interpreter of that world with calm resignation. “When I was young it used to seem to me that the group in which I grew up was like an empty vessel into which no new wine would ever again be poured,” she wrote. “Now I see that one of its uses lay in preserving a few drops of an old vintage too rare to be savored by a youthful palate.”

When she died in 1937, Wharton was working on The Buccaneers, an unfinished novel about three American girls in the 1870s who make brilliant English marriages and become the envy of a New York that had scorned them. Lily Bart’s creator had found a way to hold on to life, to savor its mirth while transcending its sorrows. The young girl who had written, “If I ever have children I shall deprive them of every pleasure, in order to prepare them for the inevitable unhappiness of life!” by 1933 could state:

Ah, well—in summing it all up, let me say: Love and Beauty have poured such glowing rays for me that when the last drop of the last is drained I shall go away grateful, if not satisfied. Satisfied! What a beggarly state! Who would be satisfied with being satisfied? ■

CAREY PERLOFF (Artistic Director) assumed artistic leadership of A.C.T. in 1992. Perloff has since led the company to unprecedented success, including the receipt of the prestigious 1996 Jujamcyn Theaters Award and the triumphant reopening of the Geary Theater following its $28.2 million restoration. Known for directing innovative productions of classics and championing new writing for the theater, Perloff’s work at A.C.T. includes last season’s acclaimed production of Euripides’ Hecuba, the American premieres of Tom Stoppard’s Invention of Love and Indian Ink, and her triumphant revival of Brecht/Weill’s Three Penny Opera, which played to sold-out houses last fall. Other work at A.C.T. includes Friedrich Schiller’s Mary Stuart (which travels to Boston’s Huntington Theatre Company in March), Harold Pinter’s Old Times, Stoppard’s Arcadia, Tennessee Williams’ Rose Tattoo, Sophocles’ Antigone, Strindberg’s Creditors, Chekhov’s Uncle Vanya, David Storey’s Home, the world premiere of Leslie Ayvazian’s Singer’s Boy, and the Geary Theater inaugural production of Shakespeare’s Tempest, which featured the Kronos Quartet. In 1993, Perloff directed the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot’s opera The Cave at the Vienna Festival and the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and in 1998 she staged Christoph Willibald Gluck’s Iphigénie en Tauride for the San Francisco Opera Center.

Before joining A.C.T., Perloff was artistic director of the Classic Stage Company in New York, where she directed the world premiere of Ezra Pound’s Elektra, the American premiere of Pinter’s Mountain Language and The Birthday Party, Bertolt Brecht’s Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui, and many other classic works. Under Perloff’s leadership, CSC won the 1988 Obie Award for artistic excellence, as well as numerous Obies for acting, design, and direction.

Perloff received a B.A. (Phi Beta Kappa) in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford University. She was on the faculty of the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University for seven years and currently teaches and directs in the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program. She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

HEATHER M. KITCHEN (Managing Director), now in her 25th year of professional theater management and production, joined A.C.T. as managing director in 1996. She is a member of the executive committee of the U.S. League of Resident Theatres (LORT), the arts evaluation and accreditation team of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, the board of governors of the Commonwealth Club of California, and the board of directors of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, San Francisco and the Peninsula.

Before joining A.C.T., she served as general manager of the Citadel Theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, where she was responsible for a five-theater complex that produced up to 16 productions annually. A native of Canada, she has served as a strategic planning consultant for leading arts and educational institutions, taught at eight universities and colleges throughout the country, and served on the Canada Council Theatre Advisory Committee and the executive committee of the Edmonton Professional Arts Council. Kitchen received an honors degree in drama and theater arts from the University of Waterloo and earned her M.B.A. from the Richard Ivey School of Business at the University of Western Ontario.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director), the master acting teacher of the A.C.T. Master of Fine Arts Program, has taught acting to students of all ages throughout the United States. Before assuming leadership of the A.C.T. Conservatory in 1995, she was director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting, scene study, and Shakespeare for six years. Also a professional actor, she has performed in regional theaters and in numerous off-off Broadway plays. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama.

JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne's National Repertory Theater. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and Georgey (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen's Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw's Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971. He and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International's award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics' Circle.

CRAIG SLAIGHT (Young Conservatory Director) spent ten years in Los Angeles directing theater and television before joining A.C.T. in 1988. An award-winning educator, Slaight is a consultant to the Educational Theater Association and the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts and is a frequent speaker and adjudicator throughout the country. He has published ten anthologies for young actors, three of which were selected by the New York Public Library as "Outstanding Books for the Teenage." In 1989, he founded the Young Conservatory's New Plays Program; 11 new works by professional playwrights have been developed, nine of which have been published by Smith & Kraus in New Plays from A.C.T.'s Young Conservatory. In January 1998 Carey Perloff awarded Slaight the first Artistic Director's Award for his contributions to A.C.T.

BRUCE WILLIAMS (Director of Summer Training Congress & Community Programs) has had a 24-year working relationship with A.C.T., where he has taught in the Advanced Training Program (ATP), Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. (which he also administrates), directed numerous ATP studio productions, and acted in more than 40 mainstage productions. He has also performed on numerous other West Coast stages and has worked extensively in film, television, and voice-over.

PAUL WALSH (Dramaturg, Director of Humanities) joined A.C.T. in 1996 after eight years with Theatre de la Jeune Lune, where he worked on such award-winning projects as Children of Paradise, Shooting a Dream, Germinal, Don Juan Giovannini, and The Headlock of Notre Dame. His translation of Strindberg's Creditors was produced by CSC, Kitchen Dog Theatre, and A.C.T.; his translation of Ibsen's Hedda Gabler was produced by Hidden Theater, the Penobscot Theater, and the Actor's Collective. Thanks to an NEA grant he is working on Ibsen's Peer Gynt with Kevin Kling and David Edson. Walsh received his Ph.D. in drama from the University of Toronto in 1988 and taught at Southern Methodist University 1989-95. Publications include articles in The Production Notebooks, Re-interpreting Brecht, Strindberg's Dramaturgy, Theatre Symposium, Essays in Theatre, Studio Neophilologica, Canadian Theatre Review, and Contemporary Literary Criticism Yearbook.

MERYL LIND SHAW (Artistic Manager/Casting Director) joined the A.C.T. artistic staff in 1993. During the previous 17 years, she stage-managed more than 60 productions throughout the Bay Area, including A.C.T.'s Don Appétit and Creditors. She was resident stage manager at Berkeley Repertory Theatre for 12 years and production stage manager at the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival for three seasons. She was active with Actors' Equity Association for many years and served on the AEA negotiating committee in 1992 and 1993. Other casting projects include San Francisco's Picasso at the Lapin Agile and the CD-ROM game Obsidian.

CONTRA COSTA NEWSPAPERS
CORPORATE SPONSOR
THE HOUSE OF MIRTH
Contra Costa Newspapers is delighted to be a supporter of A.C.T. for the fourth consecutive season. Support for the arts is part of Contra Costa Newspapers’ heritage. Founder Dean S. Lesher contributed millions of dollars to nurture the arts in communities served by his newspapers, including providing start-up funds for the Regional Center for the Arts in Walnut Creek. That commitment has remained strong under Knight-Ridder, Inc., the parent company of Contra Costa Newspapers and the South Bay’s dominant newspaper, the San Jose Mercury News.

“We are dedicated to supporting and furthering the arts,” says Contra Costa Newspapers publisher George Riggs. “Cultural activities are vital to the quality of life in the communities we serve.”

East Bay residents have demonstrated their love for the theater: nearly a half million adults living in the areas served by Contra Costa Newspapers and its affiliate, Hills Newspapers, have attended one or more live theater performances in the past year; more than 330,000 have enjoyed live theater in San Francisco. Their newspapers of choice for reading about the arts and being informed of upcoming events are the publications of Contra Costa Newspapers serving Alameda, Berkeley, and the Oakland Hills. More than 775,000 adults read those newspapers each week, according to a 1998 Gallup survey.

MRS. ALBERT J. MOORMAN
INDIVIDUAL SPONSOR
THE HOUSE OF MIRTH
The House of Mirth is also sponsored in part by a generous contribution from Mrs. Albert J. Moorman. Mrs. Moorman’s dedicated commitment to A.C.T. dates back more than 25 years, when she and her late husband (who served as vice president of the board of trustees of the California Association for A.C.T. and later on the board of trustees of the American Conservatory Theatre Foundation) first became involved with the company. Mrs. Moorman has continued to support the artistic life of A.C.T. since the death of her husband in 1994. (Her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fremont, are also enthusiastic theatergoers.)

In 1948, Al and Bette Moorman moved to the Bay Area, where an inspired performance by Tallulah Bankhead sparked a love affair with the Geary Theater and with live performance that was to last more than half a century. Mr. Moorman joined McCutchen, Doyle, Brown & Enersen—the Bay Area’s second largest law firm—in 1960 and served as managing partner of the firm from 1976 until 1985, longer than any other individual in the firm’s history. Moorman’s enthusiastic lobbying on behalf of A.C.T. contributed significantly to the increased success of the company’s local fundraising efforts, while his leadership as chairman of the board’s nominating committee helped to create and sustain a level of excellence and service in A.C.T.’s principal governing body. Moorman also served on the boards of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and the National Corporate Theatre Fund, on the Committee for Art at Stanford University, and on the advisory committee of the Allied Arts Guild. A.C.T. has named a rehearsal studio after Moorman as a lasting tribute to his invaluable contribution to the life of the theater and the arts in the Bay Area.

HONORING A.C.T.’S FRIENDS
Do you enjoy working with diverse people and learning more about the theater? The Friends of A.C.T., the company’s volunteer auxiliary, offers many opportunities for people interested in contributing their time and talent to A.C.T. Volunteers assist with mailings and work with administrative departments, help at selected performances, staff the library, and more.

TAKE STOCK IN A.C.T.
There are many creative ways to give to A.C.T. All are tax deductible and offer A.C.T. donors a tremendous opportunity to:

Avoid capital gains taxes on the sale of appreciated stock;
Create an income-tax deduction equal to the fair-market value of the stock at the time of transfer; and Generate a more significant gift than if you were just writing a check.

Additional ways to contribute to A.C.T.'s success include:

Cash—one of the most familiar ways to give;
Property—most real estate and personal property qualify as tax-deductible charitable gifts; and Life insurance—the cash value of your current paid-up life insurance policy can benefit A.C.T.

PLANNED GIVING
Many people who could not otherwise contribute to A.C.T. as generously as they would like find they are able to do so with a carefully planned gift. You can make a valuable long-term contribution to great theater by:

Making a bequest to A.C.T.—please let us know if you have included A.C.T. in your will or estate plan; or

Creating a life-income charitable trust with A.C.T.—you can gain an immediate and substantial tax deduction, increased annual income paid to you for life, freedom from investment worries, and avoidance of capital gains taxes when you transfer appreciated property to a charitable remainder trust.

Show your ticket stub for that day’s performance upon exit to receive the special price. After five hours, the regular rate applies.

A. T. E. Merchandise
Posters, sweatshirts, t-shirts, nightshirts, mugs, note cards, scripts, and Words on Plays are available for purchase in the main lobby and at the Geary Theater Box Office.

Refreshments
Bar service is available one hour before the performance in the lower lobby and on the second balcony level. Reservations for refreshments to be served at intermission may also be made, at either bar or in the main lobby, during the hour before performance. Food and drink are not permitted in the auditorium.

Beepers
If you carry a pager, beeper, cellular phone, or watch with alarm, please make sure that it is set to the “off” position while you are in the theater. Or you may leave it and have your seat number with the house manager, so you can be notified if you are called.

Perfumes
The chemicals found in perfumes, colognes, and scented after-shave lotions, even in small amounts, can cause severe physical reactions in some individuals. As a courtesy to fellow patrons, please avoid the use of these products when you attend the theater.

Emergency Telephone
Leave your seat location with those who may need to reach you and have them call (415) 439-2396 in an emergency.

Latecomers
A. T. E. performances begin on time. Latecomers will be seated before intermission only if there is an appropriate interval.

Listening Systems
Headsets designed to provide clear, amplified sound anywhere in the auditorium are available free of charge in the lobby before performance. Please turn off your hearing aid when using an A. T. E. headset, as it will react to the sound system and make a disruptive noise.

Photographs and recordings of A. T. E. performances are strictly forbidden.

Restrooms are located in the lower lobby, the balcony lobby, and the uppermost lobby.

Wheelchair seating is available on all levels of the Geary Theater. Please call (415) 749-2411 in advance to notify the house staff of any special needs.

Damn the tuxedos, full speed ahead.

Black tie is optional but a 300-horsepower V-8 is standard in the world’s most powerful full-size luxury SUV. There’s room for seven in three rows of leather-trimmed seats. And up to 8,900 pounds towing capacity. Call 800-668-8998, visit www.lincolnvehicles.com or see an authorized Lincoln Navigator dealer.
Because finding extraordinary items shouldn’t be a major production.
