AMERICAN CONSERVATORY THEATER is a Tony Award-winning repertory theater and conservatory. From the conservatory classroom to the stage of the Geary Theater, A.C.T. nurtures the art of live theater through vivid mainstage productions, intensive actor training, and a dynamic dialogue with its community. Under the leadership of Artistic Director Carey Perloff, A.C.T. artists and audiences share a commitment to the highest standards in the creation of engaging, entertaining, and compelling work worthy of the landmark theater that is A.C.T.'s home.

Founded in 1965 by William Ball, A.C.T. opened its first San Francisco season at the Geary Theater in 1967. During the past three decades, more than 300 A.C.T. productions have been performed to a combined audience of seven million people in Japan, the former Soviet Union, and the United States. In the 1970s, A.C.T. solidified its national and international reputation, winning a Tony Award for outstanding theater performance and training in 1979. Today, A.C.T.'s performance, education, and outreach programs annually reach more than 200,000 people in the San Francisco Bay Area. A.C.T.'s efforts in the commissioning and performance of new work were recognized with this season’s prestigious Jujamcyn Theaters Award.

Since Perloff’s appointment in 1992, A.C.T. has enjoyed unprecedented success with ground-breaking productions of classical works and bold explorations of contemporary playwriting. In the belief that an atmosphere of constant learning engages works that is fresh, uncompromising, and alive, A.C.T. provides a fertile ground for the growth of new and established theater artists and audiences. While looking toward the future, A.C.T. also embraces its responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent its relationship to the rich theatrical traditions and literatures which are our collective legacy.

From the beginning, A.C.T.’s philosophy has called for the union of superior repertory performance and intensive actor training. The conservatory, now serving 1,400 students every year, was the first training program not affiliated with a college or university accredited to award a master of fine arts degree. Danny Glover, Annette Bening, Denzel Washington, and Winona Ryder are among its distinguished former students. With the 1995 appointment of Melissa Smith as conservatory director, A.C.T. has renewed its commitment to excellence in actor training and to the relationship between training, performance, and audience, making the conservatory a vital force in the ongoing evolution of the theatrical art form to which A.C.T. is committed.

THE A.C.T. INTERNSHIP PROGRAM OFFERS A DRAMATIC EDUCATION

A.C.T.'s commitment to the development of young theater professionals reaches far beyond its renowned actor training. The institution also houses a top-ranked internship program, offering advanced training in several aspects of theatrical production and administration. This season, more than a dozen highly motivated young professionals from across the country are in residence at A.C.T. to gain hands-on experience in their respective fields.

A.C.T. offers a wide range of internships in the production, artistic, and administrative departments of the organization. Production internships are the most structured, generally requiring a season-long, full-time commitment and offering a stipend. This season's production internships include positions in stage management and sound and lighting design, as well as in properties, wig construction, makeup, costume rentals, and technical production. Each June, after an extensive application and interview process, one or two individuals are chosen from a large pool of applicants for each of the following season's production internships.

Less structured—though potentially equally intensive—internships are offered in the artistic and administrative departments. The artistic staff offers internships in casting, literary management, and general artistic administration and engages assistant directors for mainstage productions. Administrative internships are available in marketing, public relations, publications, graphic design, finance, and the conservatory. Although artistic and administrative interns are generally expected to commit at least two months to A.C.T., hours and duties are flexible, determined by each intern and his or her supervisor. (Stipends are not available for artistic or administrative internships.) The application and selection process for these internships continues throughout the season.

All A.C.T. interns become integral members of the department to which they are assigned, taking on the duties of a practicing theatrical professional, from reviewing scripts under consideration for mainstage production, drafting set designs, or building props, to helping to run a show on stage. A.C.T. interns, most of whom are just beginning their careers and... many of whom have worked only on academic theatrical productions, gain valuable experience while making enduring professional contacts. Many go on to find employment in this country's finest professional theaters. This season, A.C.T.'s program has been expanded to include intern seminars on all aspects of theater administration and production, from marketing to finance to the development of A.C.T.'s artistic mission.

"Opportunities for aspiring directors, designers, dramaturgs, and other theatrical professionals to obtain high-caliber postgraduate training are very limited in this country," says A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff. "A.C.T. is dedicated to the advancement of the American theater at all levels, and these young people represent the future of our art form. We hope to help them understand the practical challenges of running an organization of A.C.T.'s size and complexity, while developing expertise in their chosen crafts."

A.C.T. Perspectives on Adapting Literature for the Stage
On January 6, in conjunction with productions of A Christmas Carol and Travels with My Aunt, A.C.T. presents the third symposium of the 1996-97 A.C.T. Perspectives season, "From Page to Stage: Theatrical Adaptation from Literature." Through A.C.T. Perspectives, the company's free public symposium series, A.C.T. invites renowned scholars, theater artists, and professionals to discuss issues raised by the season's plays.

On the dais in January will be San Francisco-based playwright, educator, and adaptor Erik Ehn, artistic director of Glasgow's Citizens' Theatre Giles Havergal (adaptor and director of Travels with My Aunt, among many other novels), and playwright and adaptor Robert Alexander (author of Servant of the People and I Ain't Yo' Uncle, an adaptation of Uncle Tom's Cabin). Joan Holden, principal playwright of the San Francisco Mime Troupe and translator/adaptor of plays by DarioFo and Beaumarchais, will moderate.

A.C.T. Perspectives symposia are held on selected Monday nights throughout the season from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Geary Theater. For more information, please call the A.C.T. Literary Department at (415) 439-2469.

A Sparkling Winter Session at the A.C.T. Conservatory
While Travels with My Aunt and Machina take the Geary stage, the A.C.T. Conservatory gears up for a busy winter session:

Studio A.C.T. offers a wide range of evening and weekend classes in the dramatic arts to people 18 and over, at all levels of interest and experience. Courses include scene study, audition technique, voice and speech, directing for actors, Shakespeare, musical theater, playwriting, singing, improvisation, and beginning to advanced acting. The ten-week winter session begins January 6, 1997. For information and application materials, call (415) 834-3286.

The Young Conservatory is currently accepting applications for its winter/spring session, which begins on February 18 (orientation takes place the week of February 8). The YC offers theater training for young people 8 to 18 years old, including classes in Shakespeare, acting, directing, voice and speech, musical theater, audition techniques, improvisation, and the YC's renowned performance workshops. The current session's Senior Performance Workshop presents Thornton Wilder's Long Christmas Dinner and The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden, directed by Amy Mueller. Call (415) 439-2444 for application.

In addition, this winter YC outreach instructor Debbie Mason will lead an eight-week dramatic residency for students living in San Francisco’s Tenderloin district. Funded by generous contributions from the Charles Schwab Corporation Foundation, Wells Fargo Bank, and the Morris Sulz- saft Foundation, the project grew out of a popular series of introductory workshops led by Mason in the Tenderloin last year. Designed to provide a creative dramatic outlet for young people who might otherwise not have access to theatrical training, this season’s workshop will culminate in a public performance for family and friends.

The second-year students of the Advanced Training Program are now rehearsing performance projects in verse: A.C.T. Artistic Director Carey Perloff directs Friedrich von Schiller’s Mary Stuart, in a newly commissioned adaptation by Village Voice writer Michael Feingold; Robert O’Hara, resident artist at New York’s Public Theater and author of the new play Innoon, directs his adaptation of Shakespeare’s Henry V; and visiting director Kevin Kelley directs the Bard’s Twelfth Night.

All three plays are presented in rotating repertory February 13-19 in A.C.T.’s studios at 30 Grant Avenue. Second-year-project performances are open to A.C.T. subscribers, free of charge. For dates and reservations, call the conservatory at (415) 439-2350.

YOUR TABLE IS READY

Now you can reserve the best seats in the house—at intermission. Just stop by the bar in Fred’s Columbia Room or the beautiful Sky Lobby any time during the hour before curtain to order fine spirits, coffee, and snacks in advance. Your order will be waiting for you on a reserved table, where you can enjoy the pleasures of intermission at your leisure.

OPENING-NIGHT SUBSCRIBERS:
JOIN THE PARTY!

The glamour of opening night shines ever brighter at A.C.T. This season opening-night subscribers are invited to join A.C.T. cast and staff members for an elegant and exclusive soirée in Fred’s Columbia Room following the performance. This is a unique opportunity for audience and artists to mingle and muse. For information on joining the opening-night crowd, call the A.C.T. Box Office at (415) 749-2ACT.
Come to A.C.T. for the most entertaining education in town. A.C.T. offers several ways for you to learn more about the season’s productions and to express your views on the issues they raise:

A.C.T. PROLOGUES
Sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, these lively one-hour presentations are conducted by each show’s director. Prologues are held before the Tuesday preview of every production, at 5:30 p.m., in the Geary Theater. Doors open at 5 p.m.

AUDIENCE EXCHANGES
These informal, anything-goes sessions are a great way to share your feelings and reactions with fellow theatergoers. Audience Exchanges take place in the Geary Theater for 30 minutes immediately after selected performances and are moderated by A.C.T. staff members.

A.C.T. PERSPECTIVES
This popular series of free public symposia is back in 1996-97 from 7 to 9 p.m. on selected Monday evenings in the Geary Theater. Each symposium features a panel of scholars, theater artists, and professionals exploring topics ranging from aspects of the season’s productions to the intersection of theater and the arts with American culture. Everyone is welcome—you need not have seen the play to attend.

WORDS ON PLAYS
Each entertaining and informative audience handbook contains advance program notes, a synopsis of the play, and additional background information about the playwright and the social and historical context of the work. A subscription for seven handbooks is available by mail to full-season subscribers for $42; limited copies of handbooks for individual plays are also available for purchase at the Geary Theater Box Office, located at 405 Geary Street at Mason, and at the merchandise stand in the main lobby of the Geary Theater, for $8 each.

From “Ode: Intimations of Immortality”

by William Wordsworth

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The soul that rises with us, our life’s star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
Upon the growing boy,
But he beholds the light, and whence it flows,
He sees it in his joy;
The youth, who daily farther from the east
Must travel, still is nature’s priest,
And by the vision splendid
Is on his way attended;
At length the man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.

—Originally printed in Poems, in Two Volumes (1807)

I can remember very little of the vision preceding the prison-house; it must have faded very early “into the light of the common day,” but it seemed to me that my aunt for one had never allowed the vision to fade. Perhaps a sense of morality is the sad compensation we learn to enjoy, like a remission for good conduct. In the vision there is no morality.

—Henry Pulling

Graham Greene: Life on the Dangerous Edge

by Jessica Werner

In his 1971 autobiography A Sort of Life, Graham Greene, quoting a poem by Robert Browning, summarized his life's work as a writer: "The epigraph I should choose for every novel I have written would be: 'Our interest's on the dangerous edge of things.'" This inscription is especially fitting for a man whose indomitable lust for adventure was legendary. In his personal life and his writings, Greene carefully walked the fine line between the exotic and the everyday, while exploring the moral complexities of a life riddled with intrigue.

In a 1981 interview with the French journalist Marie-Françoise Allain, Greene explained that his attraction to danger provided him with the perfect avenue for exploring "the narrow boundary between loyalty and disloyalty, between fidelity and infidelity, the mind's contradictions, the paradox one carries within oneself. This is what men are made of."

His literary ventures along that boundary took on special significance for the private Graham Greene, whose religious beliefs as a converted Roman Catholic clashed dramatically with his public persona as a thrill seeker.

Greene consistently mined his personal experiences for inspiration, and his life was particularly rich with material. Travels with My Aunt, written toward the end of his career as a novelist, is the culmination of a life adventurously lived and a resounding affirmation of the beliefs Greene cherished most.

The Life of the Mind

Greene's lifetime (1904–91) spanned most of the 20th century, and over the course of his extremely prolific career he penned twenty-two novels, three volumes of short stories, three travel books, seven plays, and four children’s books, as well as countless news articles written during his decades as a journalist. His works—which display a mordant wit and combine elements of the detective story, the spy thriller, and the psychological drama—earned Greene a reputation as Britain’s most esteemed novelist and one of the century’s most original writers.

The son of middle-class parents, Greene spent his earliest years amid the comforts of a large extended family in Hertfordshire, northwest of London. He remembered this period fondly as “a self-sufficient and tribal happiness,” which was interrupted at the age of 13 when he was sent to Berkhamsted School where his father had recently taken the position of headmaster. The role of the headmaster’s son weighed so heavily on the young Greene that he sank into a relentless depression and even attempted suicide several times. The pain of those years never quite dissipated; years later Greene commented, with considerable emotion, on the “horrors and enforced duplicities” of his boarding school years.

Responding to the intensity of his depression, Greene’s parents removed him from school at the age of 16 and sent him to London for six months of intensive psychoanalysis under the pioneering analyst Kenneth Richmond. In 1920 psychoanalysis was still a relatively new field which hadn’t yet gained widespread acceptance; his parents’ extremely bold decision both troubled and fascinated Greene throughout his life. Greene’s struggle to make sense of his inner conflicts—most importantly the tension he felt between the desire for self-discovery and the need for self-control—later became driving themes in his writing.

Psychoanalysis also infused Greene with an uncanny ability to illuminate the interior worlds of his characters—nearly all of whom suffer from similarly intense inner conflicts—and left him with a deep abiding interest in dreams. “There’s another man within me that’s angry with me” was the inscription he chose for his breakthrough novel, The Man Within, which was published in 1929 to immediate success with both readers and critics.

THE SPY NOVELIST

Greene returned to Berkhamsted School with a renewed calm and confidence, and upon graduation in 1922 he began studying at Oxford’s Balliol College. Melancholy soon overcame him again, however, and his Oxford experience deteriorated into what he later described as a “debt-ridden, drunken, desultory existence.” His self-destructive tendencies surfaced, and he took to playing a suicidal game with a revolver he had stolen from his older brother, in a prolonged flirtation with death that persisted on and off for months. Boredom was Greene’s perpetual nemesis, and he would go to any length to counteract it. “Boredom . . . lies behind my experiments with Russian roulette,” he wrote. “I discovered then that I was manic-depressive—I needed a flick of the whip to keep me going.”

After receiving his A.B. in modern history in 1925, Greene immediately began work as a journalist, first as a reporter with the Nottingham Journal and later as a subeditor with London’s Times. He quickly developed a keen interest in espionage and seized every possible opportunity to add a dash of spying to his regular journalistic activities.

In 1923, while still a university student, Greene persuaded the editor of the Weekly Westminster Gazette to send him to Ireland to report on the recently erupted Irish Civil War. A daring assignment in itself for a young journalist, yet Greene used the trip as a cover to report to the Ulster Free State Government, which he had contacted secretly, on their enemy’s military positions. Greene offered the same year to work as an agent for the German government, spying on separatists within their borders. Suddenly, Greene had crossed the line from frontline journalist to secret agent. He was only 19 at the time and, as he later recollected, the thrill was overwhelming:

At that age I was ready to be a mercenary in any cause so long as I was repaid with excitement and a little risk. I suppose that every novelist has something in common with a spy: he watches, he overhears, he seeks motives and analyses character, and in his attempt to serve literature he is unscrupulous.

Greene’s college adventures sparked a lifelong obsession with travel and were the first in a long series of voyages to distant, exotic destinations. Over the ensuing decades he filed reports from many of the world’s most notorious trouble spots for a wide variety of publications, including Life magazine, Paris-Match, the Sunday Times, Le Figaro, and the Sunday Telegraph. “I don’t want to stay in one place too long,” he once remarked, “in case the ice melts beneath my feet.”

THE ESCAPER’S ROYAL ROAD

In 1934, accompanied by his cousin Barbara, Greene walked across the heart of Liberia without the use of any maps. The trip was especially daring for two people who knew nothing about Africa, and it affected Greene profoundly. He had become a dedicated explorer, and, although he had always suffered from intense ennui, Greene wrote about this trip in “Journey Without Maps” (1936), “I was discovering in myself a thing I thought I had never possessed: a love of life.”

With this travel book Greene set a precedent, which would recur throughout his career, of basing his major works on his most recent foreign journeys. His first trip to Mexico—a treacherous cross-country tour during which he investigated religious persecution by the Mexican government—resulted in The Lawless Roads (1939). Mexico also became the setting for Greene’s first explicitly religious novel, The Power and the Glory (1940), which tells the story of a lapsed Catholic priest on the lam in the wild state of Tabasco. (Greene had converted to Catholicism in 1926, the year he met his future wife, Vivien Dayrell-Browning.)

When World War II broke out, Greene was assigned to Britain’s secret intelligence service, MI6, and in 1942 he came under the authority of Kim Philby, the notorious spy who later defected to Russia. Greene spent three of his MI6 years posted in Freetown, Sierra Leone, keeping tabs on France’s Vichy government. His earlier trip to Liberia had planted the seeds of a lifelong love affair with Africa, and Greene drew upon his Freetown experiences to write what turned out to be his most critically and financially successful book, The Heart of the Matter (1948).

The Quiet American (1955) was published a few years after a trip to Indochina during the tumultuous conflict between the French and Indochinese nationalists. Brief sojourns to Cuba, combined with Greene’s experiences during the war, found their way into his comic masterpiece on spying, Our Man in Havana (1958). Greene once again visited Africa—traveling this time to a leper colony in the Congo—in A Burnt-Out Case (1961), which portrays a man burdened by a loss of faith, trying to reclaim his piety by ministering to the incurably ill. Later stops on Greene’s literary itinerary include The Comedians (1966), set in Haiti; The Honorary Consul (1973), set in Paraguay; and The Human Factor (1978), which is based on events in South Africa.

Travels with My Aunt (1969), also written during this period, is unique in Greene’s canon in that, instead of focusing on one particular foreign locale, it synthesizes a wide range of adventures into a single narrative that takes its readers through a dizzying array of exotic destinations. Although Greene continued to travel throughout his lifetime, as he grew older he began to rely more on writing to satisfy his escapist urges. “The great advantage of being a writer is that you can spy on people,” Greene once told Michael Korda, a friend and his American editor at Simon & Schuster. During an interview at the age of 77, Greene reflected on the dangerous episodes in his life with a newfound detachment:

"There are few substitutes for dangerous living."

—GRAHAM GREENE

So I go on writing.”

Travels with My Aunt was a significant departure for Greene. Referring to the novel as an “entertainment" to distinguish it from what he considered his more serious work, he later remarked that Travels was the only book he ever wrote "for the fun of it." He wasn't sure while writing exactly where the narrative would take him, but rather felt "like a dreamer who watches his dream unfold without power to alter its course." Greene wrote Travels in Antibes, where he had recently settled, in a state of exhilaration while establishing a new home. His previous book, May We Borrow Your Husband? (1967), was also a comedy but didn't rival the humor of Travels, which Greene later described as one of the books he was most proud to have written.

While writing Travels, during what he then mistakenly believed would be the last decade of his life, Greene discovered the power of laughter as an antidote to the overwhelming preoccupation with his own mortality. (He often set a date for his death, saving up sleeping pills for the occasion, looking forward to a certain end to his unhappiness.) Greene once commented that Travels began as "a sad book about death that turned out to be funny."

Like Aunt Augusta, Greene experienced his greatest joy in abandoning himself to the adventure of life. The culmination of a lifetime of personal risk-taking, Travels embodies the goal to which Greene aspired throughout his long and checkered career: to search everywhere for novelty, whatever the price.
A.C.T.'s popular symposium series continues in its fourth provocative season. Join us on selected Monday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Geary Theater for in-depth, entertaining discussions of issues raised by the plays of A.C.T.'s 1996–97 season. A life care community offers independent residences with immediately available healthcare support, on site, day or night. At Three Bridges, we will offer this...and more.

Come and participate in lively discussion groups, interesting presentations, social events, or excursions. Happily, this phase of our plans already exists — a community without walls — sponsored by the Three Bridges Council. You can attend these exciting events now and meet interesting men and women who may be your future neighbors!

Once Three Bridges is open, you can choose from a range of intellectual, artistic, or recreational activities, for example: painting and sculpture classes, fitness programs with a professional trainer, hiking at nearby Annadel State Park, theater groups, emeritus courses, travel tours, computer center, golf, gardening, indoor and outdoor swimming.

Three Bridges will be built on 66 acres of golden hillsides, only minutes from downtown Santa Rosa. Men and women 65 and older are eligible. We welcome your inquiry.

BECOME A MEMBER OF A.C.T.

Each season long-standing patrons and new subscribers alike respond enthusiastically to A.C.T.'s Annual Fund telephone drive by becoming members of A.C.T. A.C.T. members enjoy unique services and benefits, such as behind-the-scenes tours and personalized ticket-exchange privileges, while playing a pivotal role in A.C.T.'s tremendous success through their generous support.

A.C.T. MEMBERSHIP—MAKING A DIFFERENCE

A.C.T. spends nearly two-thirds of its budget on artistic, educational, and production expenses; customer service and administrative expenses represent the balance. While A.C.T.'s subscription and single-ticket income covers 70 percent of all operational costs, the Annual Fund makes up the critical difference.

Membership contributions support mainstage productions as well as a variety of culturally enriching A.C.T. educational and outreach programs, including the Student Matinee (SMAT) Program. Tickets to SMATs are offered to schools at a fraction of the normal ticket price. Your Annual Fund gift is a powerful resource for introducing young people to live theater.

MATCHING GIFTS AND DONOR BENEFITS

Depending on your level of membership, you can receive a variety of exciting special benefits, including:

- Invitations to working dress rehearsals
- Two-for-one ticket coupons
- Backstage tours of the Geary Theater
- Complimentary parking for all your subscription performances

You can receive added benefits by participating in your company's matching gift program. Many Bay Area employers, including Bank of America, Chevron Corporation, and Wells Fargo Bank, multiply their employees' charitable power by matching gifts to A.C.T. Participation is easy—simply call your personnel or corporate benefits office to receive a matching gift form and mail it to us with your contribution.

ON THE ROAD IN SOUTH AMERICA

In 1969, when Henry Pulling begins his travels with Aunt Augusta, South America was still considered a dangerously exotic destination by many people—including Graham Greene, who wrote widely about South American culture and politics. Following are a few observations, from intrepid travelers who preceded Pulling to the Western Hemisphere's southern continent, which our man Henry might have found on his predeparture reading list.
It is a perfect place to play with life, cloistered away, so near to the real world, and yet so far. The real world's manners are here, but none of its problems. All things are reduced to a scale so small that big general things become individual and personal. People who have money have made it easily, those who haven't expect none. There is no striving, strenuous middle-class. There are plenty of poets, but they do not hear the world's rumble and noise; they sit on a park bench, write verses for albums, or devise epigrams withering their rivals and enemies. They hear that their country is being ruined, and they write about the eyes of their women and compare their mouths to strawberries and ripe pomegranates. . . .

Superimposed on this quaint world is the tinier world of the sophisticated—the legations, the chosen, who have traveled and been educated abroad, the exiles of commerce—a toy world more or less typical of every South American city. Within it people dress for dinner, read the latest magazines, and live superficially much as they would [in the United States] or in Europe. . . . Strange lost sheep blow in now and then—tourists, concession-hunters, adventurers, correspondents—they take them as they come. There is the feeling that one can always go back if one wants to, the real world seems like the city during a summer vacation. Its absence gives each echo of it a new significance and charm.

—The Other Americans: The Cities, the Countries, and Especially the People of South America, by Arthur Ruhl (1913)

It was inconceivably British—that ship. I mean that its Britannia was of that incredible sort, which, like the complementary kind of Americanism, one expects to find only in the caricatures of novels or the stage. One could imagine it sailing round the world forever and peeping into all the world's strange and wonderful ports, and still the steamer chairs would line the deck on the opposite side of the ship from which things were to be seen, still the heads would be bent complacently over the Colonial novels.

—The Other Americans

Some advice for luggage packers: First, do not burden your luggage with a lot of novels, at least not the heavy, hard-cover ones, "to while away the time," for time's shoe is on the other foot. I, at least, have never found hours enough in any given day of this voyage, in either direction. On transatlantic crossings in cold seasons I have read five novels in five days and had time hanging on my hands. On twenty or more subtropical Atlantic and South Pacific days I have done rather well to read five chapters of one book. The reason lies in the route. . . . The ship may make six to ten halts in half a dozen countries, and at each halt one may go ashore freely. . . . With such interruptions added to a general atmosphere of take-it-easy, who can bother to read even the best of books?

Second, do not take evening clothes unless you wish to. This italicized advice is addressed chiefly to men. On a transatlantic first-class crossing, such advice would be an open invitation to embarrassment. . . . But Grace Line travelers on the casual cruises to the West Coast are not encouraged to dress unless they feel the urge.

—All the Best in South America: West Coast, by Sydney Clark (1961)

There are two ways of seeing [e] northwest corner of South America and traversing the several thousand miles that take one from the asphalt and cabs of Caracas to the asphalt and cabs of the capital of Peru. By one way you go cross-these waters and the Inquisition roasted people on red-hot iron mattresses. . . Do not think that it was any passionate attachment to the society of a steamer-chair which prompted the writer to deny himself the more arduous “Read this before you drink!” . . .

A drowned man nicknamed Tartaruga [Tortoise] is floating since Saturday in the waters of the Ribeirão das Lajes, which supplies the city of Rio with its drinking water. One leg of the dead man is fastened with a rope to a tree, to keep it from drifting away, but no one wishes to remove the body for fear of complications with the police, Jornal do Brasil reported yesterday. The margin of the Ribeirão das Lajes where the dead man is in the water belongs to Health Minister Leonel Miranda, the paper says. Fortunately, the volume of Rio’s drinking water is sufficiently large to dilute the human remains sufficiently in order not to alter its taste.

Guarani is the language of the original native people of Paraguay. . . . Almost everyone in the country is completely bilingual. . . . Although Guarani is not taught in the public schools, everyone learns it, somehow. All government forms are printed in both Guarani and Spanish and there are newspapers in both languages. Also there are plays, books, magazines, and radio programs in Guarani.

One interesting aspect of the country’s bilingualism is that the average Paraguayan will switch to Guarani in some moods and situations, because the language of the Indians is better suited than any other for expressing certain thoughts and feelings. While Spanish is preferable for formal and official talk, Guarani is the language of love, the home, friendship, and intimacy, because it is rich in emotional nuances. . . .

[One sure way to win friends in Paraguay is to learn a few words of Guarani.

—South America More or Less

We hadn’t been in Asunción long before we learned why Paraguay, one of the smallest and poorest countries in the Western Hemisphere, has become the leading importer of American-made cigarettes. As a cigarette-smuggling center, Paraguay has forced even Hong Kong to take second place. The cigarettes come here legitimately and the Paraguayan government collects a small import tax that brings the price to about twenty-seven cents a package. The attitude of the Paraguayan government is that what purchasers do with them is their own business.

In the countries which surround Paraguay—Argentina, Brazil, Peru, Chile, and Bolivia—cigarettes, like gasoline, are an important source of tax revenue and, as a result of the high tariff that is imposed, American cigarettes sell for as much as a dollar a package.

And so all anyone has to do to make a fortune is to buy or rent a small plane, fly to Asunción, load up on cigarettes, and then land on some obscure airstrip in one of the neighboring countries where American cigarettes are expensive.

The international soldiers of for-must still be a lucrative gamble, because Paraguay’s cigarette imports are going up and up.

It took us a short time to learn one important rule of shopping in Asuncion—don’t hesitate too long over whether to buy or not to buy—don’t put off a decision until mañana, for by tomorrow the item that appealed to you will probably have been purchased by someone else and it may be years or never before another ship brings in that precise article again. This is a one-of-a-kind place, take it or forget it.

—South America More or Less

The quantitative theory of happiness says that contentment and joy are in direct proportion to how much you have of things. If you are somewhat happy having one color television set, you will be twice as happy owning two. If you are a little happy owning an automobile with a one-hundred-horsepower engine, you’ll be three times as happy as soon as you are able to afford a three-hundred-horsepower car. Some people even use the quantitative theory in deciding how many children they are going to have.

By this mathematical, materialistic rule Brazil ought to be the happiest place in South America and Paraguay the saddest. As yet we were not qualified to make many definitive comparisons, but we knew already that this sparsely settled place that had not as yet been spoiled by tourists pleased us immensely and that we would be sorry when we had to leave.

—South America More or Less

While South America is not nearly as well equipped as most of Europe to cater to hordes of tourists from abroad, Hiltons and Sheratons are being built in four of the capitals, and other North American type hotels in three of the other cities on our itinerary. Soon there will be package tours, cruise ships, organized safaris, dude ranches, ski resorts, and maybe even showboats on the Amazon. Meanwhile, there is much offbeat adventure to be had in South America. In some of the capital cities those who like their creature comforts can find luxury such as exists nowhere in North America—exotic breakfasts, dinners that last half the night, hotel bedrooms with crystal chandeliers and fine Oriental rugs, bathrooms with bidets, boutiques displaying emeralds, amethysts, blue baroque pearls, and carved jade for prices that seem ridiculous. But for those who are more daring and a little less demanding there is greater reward. For another few years it will still be possible to enjoy swimming and fishing in lakes and rivers that are not yet even slightly polluted, and to breathe air that has a clean sparkle to it, and stretch the arms a little without fear of hitting someone else in the face.

More or less that is why we like South America and recommend it heartily to those who want to be different.

—South America More or Less

TRAVELS WITH MY AUNT’s journey to San Francisco began in 1989 at one of A.C.T.’s most prominent sister companies across the Atlantic: “The Citizens’ Theatre of Glasgow, Scotland. A.C.T. is fortunate to have had Giles Havergal, the play’s original codirector and artistic director of The Citizens’, in residence directing his quintessentially theatrical adaptation of Graham Greene’s novel.”

Considered Britain’s most influential regional theater, “The Citz,” as it is affectionately known, is renowned for idiosyncratic productions of rarely performed plays from the European repertoire. The Citizens’ company was founded in 1943 by playwright James Bridie, who in 1945 moved the troupe to its current home in a lovely, recently renovated 600-seat Victorian theater in Glasgow’s Gorbals district.

In 1969, actor/director Havergal, designer/director Philip Prowse, and writer/director Robert David MacDonald took joint control of The Citz, quickly installing (according to Observer theater critic Michael Coveney) “the most radically chic, and sexiest, young company in Britain.” After attempting to revive the theater’s flagging attendance by continuing the conventional programming of their predecessors, the triumvirate rocked the theatrical world in 1970 with an all-male, sexually explicit production of Hamlet (directed by Havergal). British theater has never been the same since.

During the 1970s, The Citz acquired a reputation for sumptuously decadent, gender-bending, convention-defying explorations of the European, Jacobean, and Restoration drama. Following a policy of “artistic sensationalism,” The Citz set new standards of theatrical excellence, and the company’s iconoclastic and provocative aesthetic influenced companies from Check by Jowl to the namic artistic centers of Europe. Founded on a philosophy of passionate commitment to its audiences, The Citz has fought to keep its ticket prices low and offers one free preview performance of every new production. The company has nevertheless managed to remain in the black for more than 20 years, thanks largely to its savvy management, as well as to subsidies from the Scottish Arts Council, the City of Glasgow Council, and the Strathclyde Regional Council.

In 1992, The Citz opened two small studio theaters. Among the actors who have worked at The Citz are Pierce Brosnan, Tim Curry, Rupert Everett, and Gary Oldman; Glenda Jackson played Mother Courage and Morning Becomes Electra with the company before becoming a Member of Parliament. Earlier this year, playwright Harold Pinter awarded The Citz £10,000 for the encouragement of new writers.

Material for this article by Elizabeth Brodersen was drawn in part from the writings of Michael Coveney, particularly his outstanding book: The Citz: 21 Years of the Glasgow Citizens Theatre (Nick Hern Books, London, 1990).

CHARLES DEAN* most recently appeared at A.C.T. as The Doctor in Carey Perloff’s production of The Rose Tattoo. He has appeared over the last 20 years in more than 100 productions at Bay Area theaters, including Berkeley Repertory Theatre, San Jose Repertory Theatre, Marin Theatre Company, and the Magic Theatre. He recently portrayed King Henry II in Marin Theatre Company’s Becket. Among his many roles at Berkeley Repertory Theatre have been Hoss in The Tooth of Crime, Azdak in The Caucasian Chalk Circle, Reverend Shannon in The Night of the Iguana, Tom in The Glass Menagerie, Jamie in Long Day’s Journey into Night, and Charley Fox in Speed-the-Plow. Regional theater credits also include performances at The Public Theater, The Guthrie Theater, Center Stage in Baltimore, the Dallas Theater Center, the Alliance Theatre Company in Atlanta, and the Fort Worth Opera Company. Dean’s screen credits include True Believer, Spirit of ’76, The Right Stuff, “Midnight Caller,” “Jesse Hawkes,” and Getting Even with Dad.

BRYAN CLOSE*, recipient of the Sally and Bill Hambrecht Professional Theater Intern Fellowship, is a 1996 graduate of the A.C.T. Advanced Training Program. His A.C.T. studio credits include the roles of Mercutio in Romeo and Juliet, Tuzenbach in The Three Sisters, and Jed Rowan in The Kentucky Cycle. He spent the last two summers with the Colorado Shakespeare Festival, where he played Basario in The Merchant of Venice and Touchstone in As You Like It. Other favorite roles include Carl in The Baltimore Waltz and Garry Lejeune in Noises Off in Charlotte, North Carolina, and Romeo in Romeo and Juliet with the Tennessee Stage Company in Knoxville.

GEOFF HOYLE* appeared at A.C.T. last season as Stephano in The Tempest, having first appeared at A.C.T. as The Pope in Dario Fo’s Pope and the Witch. An accomplished mime, he clowned on the West Coast with San Francisco’s Pickle Family Circus for seven seasons as Mr. Snuff, with Cirque du Soleil in Canada and the United States, and with Circus Flora in the Midwest last summer. He has also written and performed three award-winning solos: Boomer!, Feast of Fools, and The Convict’s Return. Hoyle’s most recent Bay Area appearances include Gemini, commissioned by Berkeley Repertory Theatre, and the role of The Burglar in Berkeley Rep’s Heartbreak House. His latest solo show, Geoff Hoyle—The First 100 Years, was produced last October by San Francisco’s Solo Mio Festival.

KEN RUTA* has been a leading actor at A.C.T. since appearing in Tartuffe, A.C.T.’s first production at the Geary Theater, in 1967. His most recent A.C.T. credits include last season’s rotating repertory productions of The Matchmaker and The Cherry Orchard, as well as Hecuba, The Play’s the Thing, Light Up the Sky, Uncle Vanya, and Antigone. His performances in A.C.T.’s Floating Light Bulb, Immigrant, and Cat on a Hot Tin Roof were honored with Bay Area Theatre Critics’ Circle and Drama-Logue awards. In 1994 he was similarly honored for his performance in Substance of Fire at the Magic Theatre, and his performance in Shadowlands earned him the Helen Hayes Best Actor Award nomination for 1994. He acted in more than 30 productions at Minneapolis’s Guthrie Theater, where he was a founding member and Associate Artistic Director from 1975 to 1978. He has acted and directed at the Mark Taper Forum, San Jose Repertory Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, the Intiman Theatre, Arena Stage, Cincinnati’s Playhouse in the Park, the Olney Theatre, Sacramento’s B Street Theatre, and the Arizona Theatre Company (where he served as Associate Artist/ Director from 1984 to 1986), and he is an Associate Artist of San Diego’s Old Globe Theatre. Earlier this season he made his Berkeley Repertory Theatre debut as Captain Shotover in Heartbreak House. He appeared in the Broadway productions of Inherit the Wind, Separate Tables, Ros, The Three Sisters, and The Elephant Man, and has performed and directed with opera companies throughout the United States. His continued association as a director with the A.C.T. Advanced Training Program includes his productions of Hamlet, Love’s Labor’s Lost, and Macbeth.

W. Francis Walters * (Understudy) has worked extensively in regional theatre, including productions at the Denver Center Theatre Company, Oregon Shakespeare Festival, Cleveland Playhouse, Old Globe Theatre, Arizona Theatre Company, and Asolo State Theatre. Bay Area credits include roles at the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, Marin Theatre Company, Magic Theatre, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre.

Mimi Jordan Sherin (Lighting Designer) most recently designed As You Like It and Macbeth at the Royal Shakespeare Company in London and Ariadne auf Naxos at the Bayreische Staatsoper in Munich. Sherin’s Broadway design credits include Our Country’s Good and The Glass Menagerie. For her extensive work at the New York Shakespeare Festival, she has received an Obie Award, an American Theatre Wing Award, and four Drama Desk nominations. Her regional theater work includes designs for many productions at Baltimore’s Center Stage, the American Repertory Theatre, the Actors Theatre of Louisville, Hartford Stage Company, Long Wharf Theatre, Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park, and the Dallas Theater Center. She has also designed extensively for opera, including the English National Opera, Wales National Opera, Houston Grand Opera, and Canadian Opera, as well as the Santa Fe, San Diego, Dallas, Omaha, Portland, Tulsa, Minnesota, and Edmonton companies. Sherin’s design associate is Rita Ann Kogler.

Stephen LeGrand (Sound Designer) is in his 11th season as resident sound designer and composer at A.C.T., where his work has been heard in productions of The Rose Tattoo, The Cherry Orchard, The Matchmaker, Gaslight, Aradia, Othello, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Oleanna, Full Moon, Uncle Vanya, Scapin, A Christmas Carol, Porgy, Pygmalion, Creditor, The Pope and the Witch, Miss Evers’ Boys, Antigone, Dinner at Eight, Good, Charley’s Aunt, Taming of the Shrew, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, The Marriage of Figaro, The Seagull, and Foucault in Hell. With collaborator Eric Drew Feldman he has received awards for the music for The Lady’s Not for Burning at A.C.T., The Tooth of Crime and The Rivals at Berkeley Repertory Theatre, and Fen at the Eureka Theatre. He also wrote scores for the A.C.T. productions of The Three Muses, The Love of the Tycoon, and The Marriage of Figaro.

DEBORAH SUSSEL (Dialect Consultant) returns for her 22nd season with A.C.T. She has appeared in numerous plays and has served as speech and dialect coach for more than 20 A.C.T. productions, including "The Rose Tattoo," "Arcadia," "The Matchmaker," "Gaslight," "Angels in America," "Othello," "Hecuba," "Full Moon," and "Oleanna." She has also worked as dialect coach on a number of plays at Berkeley Repertory Theatre and Marin Theatre Company. In recognition of her work on the faculty of the A.C.T. Advanced Training Program for the past 21 years, she was awarded an honorary M.F.A. in 1995. Sussele also teaches at Mills College and UC Berkeley and is a voice, speech, and communications consultant. She recently finished a three-year term on A.C.T.'s board of trustees.

KIMBERLY MARK WEBB* (Stage Manager) returned to A.C.T. this season, after a summer stage-managing the San Francisco production of "Picasso at the Lapin Agile," to stage-manage Carey Perloff's production of "The Rose Tattoo." Last season's work with A.C.T. included productions of "The Cherry Orchard," "The Tempest," and "Arcadia." He made his A.C.T. debut with the acclaimed 1994-95 production of "Angels in America." During 19 years with Berkeley Repertory Theatre he stage-managed more than 70 productions, including the Mark Taper mainstage inaugural production of Brecht's "Galileo," "The Norman Conquests," "American Buffalo" (coproduced with Milwaukee Repertory Theater), "The Tooth of Crime," "Man and Superman," "Hard Times" (as part of New York's Joyce Festival), "Our Country's Good," "Spunk," and most recently, "An Ideal Husband." Other credits include "The Woman Warrior" for the Center Theatre Group in Los Angeles and "The Lady from the Sea" at Boston's Huntington Theatre Company. Webb is originally from Dallas, where he served as production stage manager at Theatre Three for six years.

JULIET N. POKorny* (Assistant Stage Manager) worked on last season's A.C.T. production of "Dark Rapture" and the 1994-95 A.C.T. productions of "Angels in America" and "The Play's the Thing." She has stage-managed several San Francisco premiere productions, including "Tony 'n' Tina's Wedding" and "Pageant." Other local stage management credits include productions at Marin Theatre Company, Berkeley Repertory Theatre, the California Shakespeare Festival, the Seattle Children's Theatre, and the Magic Theatre, among others. Pokorny received her B.A. in acting and directing from California State University, Long Beach.

GORDON COX (Assistant Director) recently graduated from Princeton University with a B.A. in English and a certificate in theater and dance. While at Princeton, he acted in several student productions, directed "The Maids" and "Shadowplay," and served as assistant director of Theatre Intime. He has worked with Toni Morrison, Jacques D'Amboise, Athol Fugard, and Joyce Carol Oates. Cox also works as an intern with the artistic staff at A.C.T.

RAFAEL OLBINSKI (Cover Artist), an illustrator and painter, is one of today's best known surrealists. His works regularly appear in major publications, including Newsweek, "Time," "Business Week," the Atlantic Monthly," "Omni," "The New York Times," and the "New Yorker," among many others. His paintings have been acquired by some of the most important art collections, including the Library of Congress, Print Collection and the Carnegie Foundation. He has received more than 100 awards, including gold medals from the Society of Illustrators and the Art Directors Club of New York. In 1994, he won the International Oscar for the World's Most Memorable Poster, and in 1995 one of his works was chosen as the official "New York City Capital of the World" poster.

*Members of Actors' Equity Association, the Union of Professional Actors and Stage Managers in the United States.

In the summer of 1993, Perloff staged the world premiere of Steve Reich and Beryl Korot's new music-theater-video opera, "The Cave," at the Venice Festival, which was subsequently presented at the Hebbel Theater in Berlin, Royal Festival Hall in London, and Next Wave Festival at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Perloff served as artistic director of New York's Classic Stage Company (CSC) from 1986 to 1992, where she directed the acclaimed world premiere of Ezra Pound's version of Sophocles' "Electra" (with Pamela Reed and Nancy Marchand), the American premiere of Harold Pinter's "Mountain Language" (with Jean Stapleton, David Strathairn, and Peter Riegert) on a double bill with his "Birthday Party," Tony Harrison's "Pheadra Britannica," Thornton Wilder's "Skin of Our Teeth," Lynne Alvarez's translation of Tirso de Molina's "Don Juan de Sevilla," Michael Feingold's version of Alexandre Dumas' "Taver of Evil," and Kathleen Wilhoedes, Becter's "Happy Days" (with Charlotte Rae), Brecht's "Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui" (with John Turturro), and Len Jenkins' "Candide." Under Perloff's direction, CSC won the 1988 Obie Award for artistic excellence, as well as numerous Obies for acting, design, and production.

In Los Angeles, Perloff staged Pinter's "Collection" at the Mark Taper Forum (winning a Drama-Logue Award for outstanding direction) and was associate director of Steven Berkoff's "Greek" (which earned the Los Angeles Drama Critics' Circle Award for best production).

Perloff received her B.A. (Phi Beta Kappa) in classics and comparative literature from Stanford University and was a Fulbright Fellow at Oxford University. She is the proud mother of Lexie and Nicholas.

HEATHER KITCHEN (Managing Director) joined A.C.T. as managing director in October 1996. She has extensive experience in theater management and production, has served as a strategic planning consultant for arts and educational institutions, and has taught management and theater courses for more than 20 years throughout Canada. Most recently she served as general manager of the Citadel Theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, where she was responsible for a five-theater complex which produced up to 16 productions annually. Prior to her work at the Citadel, she was company manager for the Stratford Festival while on tour. Her stage management experience includes the Stratford Festival, the Canadian Stage Company in Toronto, the Canadian Opera Company, and the New Play Centre of Vancouver. She was also production manager at Theatre New Brunswick for three years. Kitchen received an honors degree in drama and theater arts from the University of Waterloo and earned her M.B.A. from the Richard Ivey School of Business at The University of Western Ontario.
JAMES HAIRE (Producing Director) began his career on Broadway with Eva Le Gallienne's National Repertory Theater. Among the productions he managed were The Madwoman of Chaillot (with Le Gallienne, Sylvia Sydney, and Leora Dana), A Touch of the Poet (with Denholm Elliott), The Seagull (with Farley Granger), The Rivals, John Brown's Body, She Stoops to Conquer, and The Comedy of Errors. He also stage-managed the Broadway productions of And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little (with Julie Harris, Nancy Marchand, and Estelle Parsons) and Georgy (a musical by Carole Bayer Sager), as well as the national tour of Woody Allen's Don’t Drink the Water. Off Broadway he produced Ibsen’s Little Eyolf (directed by Marshall W. Mason) and Shaw’s Arms and the Man. Haire joined A.C.T. in 1971 as production stage manager. In 1985 he was appointed production manager, and in 1993 he assumed his current position. Haire and his department were awarded Theater Crafts International's award for excellence in the theater in 1989, and in 1992 Haire was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Bay Area Theatre Critics’ Circle. Haire holds a B.A. from the University of Arizona, an M.A. from the Northwestern University School of Speech, and an honorary M.F.A. from the A.C.T. Conservatory.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director), the master acting teacher in A.C.T.'s Advanced Training Program, has taught acting to students of all ages in many venues throughout the United States. Prior to assuming leadership of the A.C.T. Conservatory in June 1995, she was director of the program in theater and dance at Princeton University, where she taught acting, scene study, and Shakespeare for six years. Also a professional actor, she has performed off-off Broadway and in regional theater; her credits include Sonya in Uncle Vanya, directed by Lloyd Richards at Yale Repertory Theatre and in New York, and numerous plays including the work of Mac Wellman and David Greenspan. Smith holds a B.A. in English and theater from Yale College and an M.F.A. in acting from the Yale School of Drama. She has also trained and taught at the Caymichael Patten Studio in New York.

CRAIG SLAIGHT (Young Conservatory Director) spent ten years in Los Angeles directing the theater and television before joining A.C.T. in 1988. An award-winning educator, Slaight is a consultant to the Educational Theater Association and the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts and is a frequent guest speaker and adjudicator throughout the country. He has published eight anthologies for young actors, three of which have been selected by the New York Public Library as "outstanding books for the teenager." In 1989, he founded the Young Conservatory’s New Plays Program; to date eleven new works by professional playwrights have been developed, nine of which have been published by Smith & Kraus in two volumes of New Plays from A.C.T.’s Young Conservatory.

PAUL WALSH (Dramaturgy & Director of Humanities) has extensive experience as a dramaturg, translator, and adaptor. His translation of Strindberg's The Creditors was directed by Carey Perloff at New York’s Classic Stage Company in 1991 and at A.C.T. in 1992. His work also includes Children of Paradise: Shooting a Dream, Germinal, Don Juan Giovanni, The Hunchback of Notre Dame, and Honeymoon China at Theatre de la June Lune in Minneapolis, as well as projects at The Guthrie Theater, Undermain Theater, and Kitchen Dog Theater. His critical writings have appeared in numerous publications, including Theatre Symposium, Essays in Theatre, The Production Notebooks: Theatre in Process, Re-interpretin Brecht, and Strindberg's Dramaturgy. Walsh received his Ph.D. from the University of Toronto's Graduate Center for the Study of Drama and has taught theater history and dramatic literature at Southern Methodist University.
MERYL LIND SHAW ( Casting Director) joined the A.C.T. artistic staff in 1993. During her previous 16 years as a member of the Bay Area theater community, she stage-managed more than 60 productions, including A.C.T.'s Bon Appétit! and Creditor. She was resident stage manager at Berkeley Repertory Theatre for 12 years and production stage manager at the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival for three seasons. She also stage-managed at the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, Eureka Theatre, Alcazar Theater, and Baltimore's Center Stage. She was active with Actors’ Equity Association for many years and served on the A.E.A. negotiating committee in 1992 and 1993. Shaw's most recent casting projects include the San Francisco production of Peasoo at the Lapin Agile and the forthcoming CD-ROM game Oedipus. This season she also teaches in the A.C.T. Conservatory's Advanced Training Program.

KATE EDMUNDS, scenic designer in residence at A.C.T., has created the sets for The Rose Tattoo, The Cherry Orchard, The Tempest, Arcadia, Hamlet, Antigone, Pocahontas, Uncle Vanya, Full Moon, Oleanna, Angels in America, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Othello, and Hedda. She has designed many productions for Berkeley Repertory Theatre and has designed extensively throughout the United States at a wide range of regional, Broadway, and off-Broadway theaters.

PETER MARADUDIN, lighting designer in residence at A.C.T., has designed A Christmas Carol, The Rose Tattoo, Shlemiel the First, the Matchmaker, The Cherry Orchard, Dark Rapture, The Tempest, Gaslight, Arcadia, Othello, The Play and the Thing, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Home, Oleanna, Full Moon, Pocahontas, Uncle Vanya, Pocahontas, Pymonia, The Learned Ladies, Antigone, and Hedda. On Broadway, he designed the lighting for The Kentucky Cycle and Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, and for regional theater he has designed more than 200 productions for such companies as The Guthrie Theater, Kennedy Center, Mark Taper Forum, La Jolla Playhouse, Seattle Repertory Theatre, Center Stage, Old Globe Theatre, Alliance Theatre, Pittsburgh Public Theatre, Oregon Shakespeare Festival, and South Coast Repertory. Other recent Bay Area productions include Bellow of Yiddish and The Cane-Canadian Chalk Circle, and The Woman Warrior for Berkeley Repertory Theatre. Maradudin has received 4 Los Angeles Theatre Critics' Circle Awards, 24 Drama-Logue Awards, and an Angstrom Award for lifetime achievement in lighting design.

RICHARD SEYI served as associate artistic director of A.C.T. from 1992 to 1995. He has received Drama-Logue and Bay Area Theatre Critics’ Circle awards for his productions of Cloud 9, About Face, Noises Off, Oleanna, and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead. As associate producing director of the Eureka Theatre Company, he directed (among other plays) The Three-Penny Opera, The Island, and The Visit. He has directed the Pickle Family Circus in London, Three High with Geoff Hoyle, Bill Irwin, and Larry Pisoni at the Marines Memorial Theatre; A View from the Bridge and Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf? for Berkeley Repertory Theatre; As You Like It for the San Francisco Shakespeare Festival; and The Mad Dancers for the Mark Taper Forum’s New Play Series. He directed The Learned Ladies (with Jean Stapleton) for the Classic Stage Company in New York during the 1991-92 season and directed A Midsummer Night’s Dream for the California Shakespeare Festival in 1991. That year he also directed Sarah's Story at the Los Angeles Theatre Center; Born Yesterday at Marin Theatre Company; and King Lear at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Portland. For A.C.T. he has directed The Learned Ladies, the American premiere of Dario Fo’s The Pope and the Witch, and the Bay Area premiere of David Mamet's Oleanna, Tom Stoppard’s Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, Shakespeare’s Othello, and Thornton Wilder’s Matchmaker. This season at A.C.T. he directs Mrs. Warren’s Profession.

ALBERT TAKAZAUCKAS has created notable productions in the Bay Area and beyond and has become a national and international director of opera and theater. Recent credits include debuts with the Canadian Opera Company and Tulsa Opera, as well as ongoing work with the Virginia Opera, San Francisco Shakespeare Festival, Utah Opera, New Jersey Opera Festival, Kennedy Center, and A.C.T. Since his debut with A.C.T. in 1986, he has directed many renowned productions, including The Floating Lightbulb, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, A Lie of the Mind, Dinner at Eight, Light up the Sky, and Gaslight. Takazauckas is the recipient of numerous awards and a grant from the NEA. Last season he created and directed A Galaxo on Geary, A.C.T.'s gala reopening of the Geary Theater, and performed the same function for the opening of the Lucy Lockett Cabe Theatre in Wildwood Park, Arkansas. This season at A.C.T. he directs Kaufman and Ferber’s Royal Family.

The Beautiful Sky Lobby

In addition to Fred’s Columbia Room, the newly-remodeled Geary Theater features a stunning lounge overlooking Geary Street, located between the two balconies. Stop by before the show or during intermission for a refreshment or just to enjoy the view.

HONORING A.C.T.'S FRIENDS

Do you enjoy working with diverse people and learning more about the theater? The Friends of A.C.T., the company’s volunteer auxiliary, offers many opportunities for people interested in contributing their time and talent to A.C.T. Volunteers assist with mailings, usher at student matinee performances, work in the library, help with auditions, and more.

Friends do so much for A.C.T. throughout the year that we can never thank our volunteers enough for the critical support they provide. We would like to recognize the Friends listed below who have volunteered during recent months:

Edwarda Adams  Esther Jennings  Joie Rinear

Ways of Giving to A.C.T.

There are many exciting and creative ways to give gifts to A.C.T.—all of which are tax deductible. A.C.T. accepts:

- Cash—one of the most familiar ways to give;
- Stocks, Bonds, and Mutual Funds—these make excellent gifts, especially if they have appreciated in value;
- Property—both real estate and personal property qualify as tax-deductible charitable gifts; and
- Life Insurance—the cash value of your current or paid-up life insurance policy can benefit A.C.T.

Planned Giving

Many people who could not otherwise give to A.C.T. as generously as they would like find they are able to do so with a carefully planned gift. You can make a valuable long-term contribution to great theater by:

- Making a Bequest to A.C.T.—please let us know if you have included A.C.T. in your will or estate plans; or
- Creating a Life Income Charitable Trust with A.C.T.—by making a life income gift to A.C.T., you can gain: an immediate and substantial tax deduction, an increased annual income paid to you for life, freedom from investment worries, and avoidance of capital gains taxes when you transfer appreciated property to a charitable remainder trust.

If you would like to find out more about giving to A.C.T., please contact:

BankAmerica Foundation

BankAmerica Foundation continues its generous support of A.C.T. with cosponsorship of Graham Greene's Travels with My Aunt. BankAmerica Foundation's impressive charitable record spans more than 25 years and includes major grants in a broad spectrum of categories, including economic development, affordable housing, education, conservation and environment, and health and human services.

As the philanthropic arm of the Bank of America, one of the country's leading financial institutions, BankAmerica Foundation views support of the arts as a fundamental adjunct to its banking enterprise. "The two go hand-in-hand," says Caroline Boitano, the Foundation's president. "A.C.T. performances infuse life into the cultural scene, attracting people and business to the Bay Area. BankAmerica Foundation's contributions to those performances in turn reflect our own commitment to the vitality of the local community."

San Francisco Hilton & Towers

A.C.T. welcomes back the renowned San Francisco Hilton & Towers as a cosponsor of Travels with My Aunt. Cosponsor of last season's acclaimed Victorian thriller, Gaslight, the Hilton made its A.C.T. sponsorship debut with the 1994–95 season's The Play's the Thing. Located just steps away from the city's famous cable cars and world-class shopping in Union Square, the San Francisco Hilton ranks as the largest hotel on the West Coast, with nearly two thousand rooms. The Towers, a "hotel within a hotel," provides exclusive services to those who wish the utmost in personalized amenities. Its Cityscape Bar & Restaurant, located on the 46th floor at the very top of the landmark Hilton tower, offers seasonal California cuisine nightly, 1970s theme parties on Thursdays, and a 360-degree view of San Francisco and the Bay Area. This season, the Hilton has once again made generous restaurant discounts available to A.C.T. patrons at restaurants conveniently located in the hotel: Intermezzo, an Italian bistro; The Cafe, a casual dining restaurant; and Cityscape. A.C.T. theatergoers also enjoy discounted parking privileges at the Hilton during performances.

"The large and small downtown businesses, hotels, and theaters make up a family of our own," says Deborah Larkin, the Hilton's director of public relations. "We are very happy to continue to support A.C.T. as one of the institutions that gives this area its distinctive personality and culture. Our partnership with A.C.T. is a good match."
